(Thought provoked jointly by the above two items: Man can improve his physical surroundings but does a poor job on his inner self. Does this suggest anything to those who look for Utopia after the war?)

G. R. & I. train, northbound, due in Petoskey at 3:05, was wrecked just south of Cadillac, just before noon on Wednesday last, in a head-on collision with a south bound freight. (Three trainmen were killed, but no passenger was seriously hurt. One of the victims, fireman Dyar of the passenger train, was on his last trip, intending on his return to Grand Rapids, where he lived, to quit the railroad and begin the operation of a farm he had but recently purchased.)

(Front page news this week was the De Jordy trial — a sort of test case, because De Jordy was a chiropractor who had not complied with the then existing state regulations for licensing medical practitioners. This, and other cases of its kind throughout the state, clarified the status of the chiropractic profession and ultimately established it upon a sound basis under the law.)

(The auto-sled made its first appearance in Charlevoix this month. Familiar to everyone now, it was a "nine days wonder" then. It was described as a cross between an airplane and an ice boat and would do 60 miles per hour on smooth ice. This particular machine was the creation of Russell Barnett, East Jordan garageman, who made a trip from that city to a point on the ice of Lake Charlevoix opposite the old Belvedere depot in less than thirty minutes.)

(Sugar beet situation seemed promising at this time, with 150 acres contracted in the vicinity of Charlevoix, but still left much to be desired.)

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Brown of Ironton celebrated the 25th anniversary of their wedding.

(Out on old rural route 4, the farm house of Mrs. John Wells caught fire while she was entertaining friends in honor of her 75th birthday. It was a chimney fire and the guests turned to and extinguished it.)

(Big headline) Vote At Primary Sets New Record. Arthur Bergeon Defeats Dr. C. J. Winder For Mayorality By Comfortable Margin. Ernest J. Kibbe nominated as alderman of second ward over H. R. Fowler; Jesse Smith defeats D. J. Ecklinger; Art Alcock beats W. E. Parmelee in third. (Total of 769 votes cast was then said to have eclipsed any previous record.)

(The "Womanless Wedding," an affair probably more "reminisced" about than anything of its kind produced in Charlevoix, was announced in this issue.)

(From the school notes) In economics, after one of the students has giggled for 40 minutes: Mr. Coleman: "Miss Kelderhouse, you are excused." Clara K., "Well, what for?" Mr. Coleman: "For the rest of the period."

(Also from the s.n.) Can you feature: Nellie Smith in a hurry, Esther Goldstick without her smile, Mr. Coleman without his cane, Johnny Ripley not doing her bit.

Red Cross Month 1944

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

A PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS the war has entered a decisive stage requiring the fullest measure of individual sacrifice;

WHEREAS the American National Red Cross is an auxiliary to the United States armed forces and, as such, is providing indispensable service to our troops throughout the world as well as to their families at home;

WHEREAS these wartime activities, including the collection of life-saving blood for the wounded, recreation work in military hospitals, provision of aid to families of servicemen, shipment of food parcels to prisoners of war, production of surgical dressings, operation of overseas clubs and recreation centers, and recruitment of Army and Navy nurses, all combine to save countless lives, restore hope, and provide comfort for our fighting men;

WHEREAS, through its vast network of local chapters, this agency of our people simultaneously conducts an extensive program of training and community service, while continuing with traditional efficiency to lessen the distress of those overwhelmed by disaster; and

WHEREAS this agency is wholly dependent upon individual support and personal participation and is issuing its 1944 appeal to the entire citizenship for a minimum War Fund of $200,000,000;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America and President of the American National Red Cross, do hereby designate the month beginning March 1, 1944 as "Red Cross Month" and earnestly beseech my fellow Americans to observe it by opening their hearts to this humanitarian appeal in order that we may keep the Red Cross at the side of our fighting men and their dependents in their hour of greatest need.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

DONE at the city of Washington this 19th day of February, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-eighth.

ARMY LETTERS

Some of them were wounded and were helped along by others. It was noticeable that the females were either very young girls or older women. Another reason why the natives hate the Japs so. All in all, we have seen some very interesting sights and, as someone has said, I wouldn't take a million dollors for it all, but it would take a million to hire me to go through it all, again. In the Salumua campaign, we witnessed all phases of aerial warfare, from bombing to strafing of the Japs just in front of us. Of course, Tojo gave us something in return, but nothing like they were receiving.

Our regiment had the distinction of being in combat longer than any troops in this area — seventy-eight days in contact with the enemy, which is a mighty long time to live in fox holes. I'm still loyal to the old Red Arrow division, but the Sunset division from the west is a real fighting division, too.

I suppose Lewis Brown has written about our meeting. I was standing in front of the officers' club in Brisbane, talking to several friends, when I saw this tall sailor walk past. As I didn't see his face, I wasn't sure it was Brownie, so I called out to him. I don't have to add how surprised he was. We hashed over the news of Charlevoix, the Beautiful. He told of seeing Bruce Henley two weeks previous to our meeting. For the benefit of his folks, I'll add that he looks as fit as a fiddle and in good spirits. I also met Harold Newmann, not so long ago. He looks o. k., after his many bouts with the malaria bug.

I enjoyed the story of the 126th, which came out recently in the Courier. They have distinguished themselves again in the recent Saidoe campaign. In some ways, I would like to be back with the old gang. I wish to thank the former members of the Red Arrow division in the V.F.W. for the membership in their organization.

Well, guess I've rambled on too much, already, so will close. Hope to see you all by Christmas time. Hello and best wishes to everyone in the service.

Yours for victory,
(Lt.) Carlton H. Smith.

Dear Editor:

Am now back at the field again, so you can change my address, the same as it was before. So sorry to bother you.

It certainly is a great change in weather from where I was up in Maine. Sure is a beautiful day out—nice, warm sunshiny weather down here.

Sure was cold up on the bridge of the P-103, the 104 foot army boat up in Maine, when we were taking peloras bearings on Freachman's Bay. But, at that, I had lots of fun and enjoyed it very much.

I certainly did see some very beautiful scenery up in the north—more so than here in the south. I can imagine Maine would be a swell place for you, to go deer hunting and fishing, from what I saw up there.

Well, I got here at 6:00 p. m., Friday, and now am assigned to the P-8, the 83 foot crash boat I was on up the James River, the time we were up there for the drowned sergeants.

They put a sergeant on the J-41 speed boat. Gosh! And after I had fixed her all up to suit myself, too. Oh, well — I'd rather be on a bigger boat, anyway (Ha!) I got a big kick out of steering the 104 footer up in Maine. Besides being on a bigger boat, one goes on longer trips.

Did you ever go up the Washington Monument? I did. It takes just one minute to go up and you can see many miles, when you get up to the top. Then, too, I was at the Chamber of Commerce building in Washington and went to the Aquarium there. Man! We have a great capital here in these United States. Very beautiful. I cannot hardly tell you all I saw—just cannot believe it, myself. Never thought I'd get to see so much of the U.S.A.

Was in New York a day, on my way up. Sure large buildings there.

Well, so long. Regards to the boys,

Charles Krulik, Pfc.

Dear Editor:

Have been meaning to write to you for some time, but couldn't seem to get around to it. I want to take this means of thanking the Blue Star Mothers of Charlevoix for the lovely Christmas greeting; also the American Legion and the Kiwanis Club for making us feel that we are not forgotten.

Received a very nice letter from Luther Honnah and I want you to know that we boys away from home all appreciate the thought that the home folks are all behind us.

So far, I have been lucky to remain in the states, but miss being so far away from home, anyway. I am still in the Medics and have been, since entering the army in January, 1942.

Better sign off for now, hoping to hear from my buddies in far off places.

As always,

Dear Editor:

Just a few lines to let you know that I have a new address and I would like to have you send the paper to me here.

I enjoy reading your paper very much as I knew a lot of people in Charlevoix and it keeps me informed of all their doings.

I especially enjoy your letters from the boys in the service and of course the Beavor Island news. I would like to tell you where we are but all I can say is that we are somewhere in England.

Thanking you, I remain,
Pfc. John E. Connaghan.

The fox hunters in the neighborhood are busy these days and Sir Reynard is getting lots of exercise. One mighty hunter (and this is on good authority) after a long chase, finally got the fox in a hole near Lake Michigan. So he tied his dog to a tree, parked his gun by another tree and started proceedings to dig out the fox.

After working for awhile, he stopped to rest and the fox took this opportunity to come out and leave for better quarters. Of course, facing no better weapon than a shovel, the fox was comparatively safe and probably is chuckling to himself in a safer den. The score could have read like this — one fox, no hit and a big error.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

We had a real old-time church supper the other night. Bert Childers played the fiddle, and the ladies brought refreshments. Of course, we missed the boys who were away—but all in all it was mighty pleasant.

Only sour note was Doc McGinnis. "Shucks," says Doc, "we oughtn't to be enjoyin' ourselves when American soldiers are over there fightin' a war."

Now from where I sit, Doc's absolutely wrong. All of us are working overtime to help the war. We've got our worries and troubles. It's a mighty good thing we can relax with a little wholesome enjoyment.

And I believe it's what the men over there would have us do . . . keep up the little friendly customs they remember—like the evening get-togethers, having a glass of beer with friends, and all the little pleasures they look forward to enjoying.

ODD FELLOWS PAY DINNER DEBT TO MASONS

John Macey and Norman Crain New Rival Captains — Sam Sorenson Stays

Triumphantly, the Masons sat down with the Odd Fellows, last Monday night, to a table in the I. O. O. F. hall set for 32 persons. The occasion wos the grand finale of the cribbage battle which has been raging all winter along both fronts. However, the meal was a good one and the ensuing armistice will not be broken — at least, not until another cribbage season rolls around.

Both organization teams elected their captains for next year — Norman Crain for the Odd Fellows, with Joe Williams as assistant; John Macy for the Masons and assistent, Ray Ashdan. Secretary Sam Sorensen stays on the job.

Seven tables were in play, last week, when the scoring ceased. Final score for the Masons was 13,132; for the Odd Fellows, 12,496. H. R. Fowler was high man for the Masons with 961 points and Wilbur Cline for the Odd Fellows, with 927. The Mason's season score was 102,954; the Odd Fellows, 101,732. Season's high men: Masons — Capt. MOVE TO AVERT SHIPPING TIEUP

Lake Vessel Committee To Ask Deferment of Marine Labor

With Great Lakes' vessels scheduled to get steam up next week, swift action was taken, recently, at Cleveland, Ohio, to meet the critical manpower situation that threatens to block movement of a record tonnage of essential war materials across the lakes this season.

The Lake Vessel Committee, representing 33 shipping companies, was authorized to begin immediately the submission to local draft boards of requests for deferment of skilled seamen, without whom the 367 vessels of the member companies cannot operate.

The program to seek deferment of these seamen has been endorsed in Washington by the Office of Defense Transportation, the War Production Board and the War Food Administration.

RESORTERS HELP SWELL RECEIPTS

DOING THEIR BIT IN COUNTY RED CROSS DONATION

Chairman Edwards Reports High-Water Mark of $3,000, As Second Week Wanes

Red Cross war fund contributions in Charlevoix county are at the $3,000 mark as the campaign nears the end of its second week, reports E. J. Edwards, county chairman for the drive.

This figure includes gifts from many summer residents of this city and county, who are joining with local people in helping to raise the county quota of $9,900.

Solicitation in rural districts will be started next week by AAA county committeemen, who have offered their services to the county Red Cross chapter for the second time. As these workers overtopped their quota last year, a good response from rural residents is again anticipated.

Of the $200,000,000 to be raised nationally by the American Red Cross during March, $27,000,000 will be used to provide and maintain service clubs for army and navy personnel overseas. As no provision for recreation rooms or day rooms is made by military authorities, American service men all over the world turn to Red Cross clubs for a place of relaxation, sociability, and often for a reminder of home.

The service club may be an old English residence donated by its owners for the use of Yankee soldiers, or it may be a grass-roofed hut in New Guinea — but wherever it is possible to establish such a center, the Red Cross goes. Charlevoix county's dollars will help to operate service clubs in many lands, where Charlevoix county's men are fighting.

Forces, commanded by Lieutenant General Lesley J. McNair. He is stationed at Washington, D. C.

Col. Cooper, a native of Charlevoix, Michigan, and a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. was assigned to Newfoundland in January, 1941.

Army telephone exchanges are now in use on the island and, during his Newfoundland stay, Colonel Cooper installed communication systems including carrier pigeon training lofts.

CSO APPEALS FOR SERVICE ADDRESSES

Send, Bring, Mail or Phone Them To Courier Office Promptly

Charlevoix Service Organization and the Courier office asks the relatives and friends of men who leave here for military service to give their addresses to the office, so the Courier can be sent to them each week. The CSO wants every boy and girl to have the paper but they have no way of putting them on the mailing list unless you mail or bring the address to the Courier office.

The CSO also asks relatives and friends to notify the organization of any man or woman in the service who is hospitalized, so that a package can be sent to him or her. Six boxes have already been sent and the results have been so gratifying that the sponsors of the plan are anxious to have the names of those who are in a hospital, as the result of illness or injuries, so that they may be remembered in the same manner.

LAWRANCE DREW A GOOD CROWD

ATTENDANCE GRATIFYING AT FIRST TALK OF SERIES

Noted Lecturer Emphasizes Need Of Greater Co-operation and More Advertising

Emphasizing the need of a city airport, more publicity and a larger degree of co-operation among the citizens of Charlevoix were a few of the highlights stressed by H. O. Lawrance, college president, business executive and public relations counsellor, in a very inspiring and informative address given at the Palace theatre on Tuesday evening, March 7th.

In spite of one of the worst storms of the season, approximately 350 people attended the first of a series of talks to be given throughout the year. Mr. Lawrance's talk was received with acclaim by his listeners. Speaking upon the future American city, it was very evident that the lecturer had spent much time upon the subject matter. Being one of the country's leading city planners, Mr. Lawrance was very much impressed with the facilities Charlevoix possessed and stressed in detail the need for more and more advertising through every possible medium.

Much credit is due the local Board of Commerce for having secured so interesting and so well-equipped a speaker for the first number of their series. It is to be hoped that the public will respond

MICHIGAN POTATOES A HIGH GRADE CROP

Plentiful Supply Available To Consumers All Over State

According to Governor Kelly's proclamation, appearing in the March 8th issue of this paper Michigan is now celebrating its Potato Week (March 12-18).

Michigan's 8,000,000 bushels of quality potatoes will be on parade to many kitchens during this week and for several weeks to come. This year's crop is not only of especially good quality but with the cooperation of handlers, merchants and farmers, a plentiful supply is available to consumers all over the state. Of the 23,000,000 bushels produced last year on the 250,000 acres, part of this important crop has been shipped to neighboring and distant states. At the present time 4,902 car load lots have been sent to eleven states.

Charles Figy, Commissioner of the State Department of Agriculture has stated that the big concern of agricultural leaders is not so much the immediate consumption of our present supply of 8,000,000 bushels but too much delay in consumption allows quality products to deteriorate. He recommends to eat more potatoes, while the quality is tops.

Naturally, potatoes being a perishable product, usually deteriorate in value while in storage over a period of seven or eight months. March and April usually finishes the quality season of Michigan potatoes.

So, according to Mr. Figy, "Let's eat more of this valuable food crop while it is still at its best."

Lest We Forget

Reviewing a Bit of Charlevoix's History Through the Time-Worn Pages of Old Courier Files.

(From the Files of The Charlevoix Journal)

Produce Market: Hay, loose, per ton $15; baled, $18, corn, per bu. 65c; oats, 35c to 40c, canned tomatoes, 12c; canned peaches, 20c; coffee, 35c.

A robin was seen in Charlevoix this morning.

A son of John Miller of Marion was run over by a sleigh, yesterday, and had his leg crushed below the knee.

What? No! Can it be possible that the G. R. & I. are going to build a branch to Charlevoix by way of Ironton? It certainly is not a dream that the company had an engineer sounding the channel of the arm at Ironton on Tuesday last.

The steam engine now lights the streets and dwellings of Petoskey by means of the electrical machine — Why not bring the same convenience and luxury to Charlevoix? We have an engine that can't be beat and ample space in the mill to put the machines and the expense is comparatively light. Let the business men consider this matter.

Boyne City folks are so tickled over the joke they played on Charlevoix that they cannot keep it. It appears that the trespass agent of the G. R. & I. had a surveyor up here to settle some disputed lines and concluded that it would be a fine scheme to run a railroad line from Boyne Falls to Charlevoix and the whole line was surveyed in less than a day.

E. H. Green's new business building, 80' by 24', two stories and a basement, was ready for occupancy this week.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Charlevoix Courier
Charlevoix, Mich.

Dear Editor:

Another letter to let you know my address has changed once more.

Since my last letter I was called up to Denver, Colo. on an emergency furlough, when my wife had a major operation. When I came back to my former field, I found out I had been a staff-sergeant for seven days. That was in January. In February, I finished my three year hitch.

It looks like I finally will get the chance to do something with the training they gave me.

Sincerely yours,
S/Sgt. Edward R. Stinson.

Dear Editor:

Will write a few lines to let you know my change in address.

I sure enjoyed my furlough while up home last month and to be with relatives and friends.

But sure was surprised in the kind of weather you were having while I was there.

We haven't got settled here yet, so don't know just how long I will be here.

Dear Editor:

It has been quite some time since I wrote to you — the reason being a change in localities. I am writing this letter to you from somewhere in England—much to my surprise. I never thought I'd be over here.

I'm really sorry I didn't get to see you while I was home, but perhaps the next time I will have more time to get around and see everyone. I was pretty rushed for time when I did get a furlough.

It looks like I finally will get the chance to do something with the training they gave me.

The paper hasn't caught up with me yet, but I am looking forward to getting it. It did a wonderful job in the past in keeping me up on all the news at home and I will appreciate it in the future, you can be sure of that.

The people in Charlevoix will never really know what it is to be in a complete blackout every

MARCH IN!

Funny weather for Februnry. Here was Hollywood with a blizzard and a lot of snow, then sleet, which a local weatherman called "soft hail." Hollywooders seem unfamiliar with terms for "weather as is weather" elsewhere. Thut was follnwed hy a seven-inch raln, referred to as "dew." Isn't language wonderful?

Most parts of the north had an "open winter," and were beginning to think abont spring violets when along camr a gale nnd a ten-inch fall of snow. Folks there call it snow—they've seen that while stuff before. Plenty. Sometimes too much. On top of that, as Februnry was about rendy to how out, they were given summer showers with wind and thunderstorms, entirely out of season. There were thunderstorms in Washington, too.

Meantime, what of Florida? Miami hasn't enough water to sprinkle its lawns except during a very few regulated hours of the day. Temperature, 80. Too high for comfort.

It's a queer world, rapidly becoming queerer. Is thnt a wind rattling the shutters? Who's knocking at the door? Oh, it's you, March! March right in. What have you to offer more interesting and nnusual than February?

AMERICAN STRENGTH

Uncle Sam has regained his stride. The weakness nnd confusion thnt came with the Pearl Harbor attack has vanished. Rearmed and confident, this nntion is now fighting two great wars and winning on every front. Peace and complete victry may still be fur ahend, but we know where we are going and are well on our way. Our strength rises as German and Japanese strength sinks.

Wendell Willkie used to tell us, on his campaign speeches, "It is inconrrivable how strong this nation is." Many of us smiled tolerantly, but he wns right. And only now are we heginning to renlize our strength. We need fear nnbody and no combination, if we ars truo to ourselves, our ancestors and our principles.

It is grand to be so strong and confident. Hut it is well not to brag. Strength and humility should go together, in this war and after it.

Religious faith and acknowledgment ars no less important than patriotic confidence. Military victories should be occasions for humble thanksgiving.

CRYSTAL LAKE SMELT HEALTHY

TESTS SHOW NORMAL RATE OF ANNUAL GROWTH

Comparison of Size With That Of Former Years Biologists Say Is Encouraging

The smelt population of Crystal Lake which escaped the plngue that nearly wiped out the species in other Michigan wnters last year is still healthy ncording to tests mnde by biologists from the conservation department's institute for fisheries research.

Tests made this winter as part of n study begun in 1928 showed that the nverage size and growth rate this year compured favorably with that of former yenrs indicating a healthy smelt population in the lake.

The study has shown that the mnjority of smelt nre no more than four years old although one fish taken since the investigation started wns five years old.

Crystnl Lake is the first place where smelt made an appearnnce and became established in Michigan, and it is believed thnt the species spread from there into other waters. It is possible that this process will be repeated and that the Crystnl Lake smelt will help to repopulate other waters. A small catch of smelt hy ice fishermen on waters where the plngue hit, however, indicates that mortality of the species was not 100% and that n small stock apparently was left. Because the species will not have to he entirely re-established, fisheries men believe it may not take as mnny years for smelt to become abundant again as it did for them to becnme identifnl the first time.

Albino Fawns Startle Wardens of Game Area

A strange sight that looked to the trained eyes of Ford Keilum supervisor of the Iosco state game area, like two newspapers blowing through the woods on the south bank of the Au Sable river turned out to be two white fawns — one of the rarest sights in Michigan out-of-doors.

One of the fawns was completely white, while the other had just a touch of albinism, and was only about one-quarter white. Conservation department game experts are surprised that the two helpless "babes-in-the-woods" have escaped their natural enemies this long, with their dangerous lack of natural protective color camouflage.

Investigation of the background of the incident, revealed that farmers had observed a large, partly albino buck in the same vicinity last fall.

"Passage to Marseille"

In "Passnge to Marseille", coming Sunday and Monday, Mar. 19th and 20th, to the Palace Theatre, Humphrey Bogart plays Matrac, anti-fascist French journalist arrested for a murder he did not commit and confined to Devil's Island. With four other convicts (Philip Dorn, Peter Lorre, Helmut Dantine and George Tobias) Matrac undertakes to escape and return to fight for France.

Director Michael Curtiz has surrounded Bognrt with a fine cast of supporting players. In addition to those named above, there are Michele Morgan as Matrac's wife, veternn Claude Rains in an entirely sympathetic screen role as a French army captnin who nids the five convicts, and Sydney Greenstreet whn plays probably the most villainous of any of his roles — that of German-loving Frenchmnn.

The film is a Hal B. Wallis production. The musical score was composed by Max Steiner.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

You hear a lot of talk about morale these daya . . . but hava you found many people who know exactly what "morale" was?

Well, I was thumbing through my scrap book the other day, and I came on this verse I'd like to pass on to you . . .

It's the lift you get from a friendly smile . . .
A brand new hat in a jaunty style . . .
A letter from home that the postmen brings . . .
Morale is a lot of little things.

Isn't it so? Morale is just a lot of little things. A flower in your button hole, a word of greeting, an occasional refreshing glass of beer with friends.

From where I sit, if we take care to preserve these little friendly things that boost morale, we'll be doing a lot to help our country in its time of crisis.

And we'll boost morale among our soldiers at the front, too. Because it's these "important little things" that they look forward to returning to.

Red Cross Field Men Tackle Yanks' Problems Overseas

On Masers Island, up in the Persian Gulf, where there is not a single tree standing and the wind blows across the island ceaselessly, Red Cross field men brought fishing tackle, books and writing paper to service men. Most welcome gift from the Red Cross was clippers for hair cutting the boys had been without a barber for months

In Persia, a Red Cross Field Director was able to locate a soldier's mother whom he hadn't seen for 25 years.

In Africa, Red Cross field men flew to Army places, hitch-hiked to supply trucks, bumped in jeeps over bombed convoy routes, through blinding sand storms and glaring sun to help men with personal problems and emergency communications, and to deliver magazines and books, cigarettes and chocolate to isolated posts and bases.

In Italy, Red Cross field men accompanied the troops in on the invasion barges.

In India, a sergeant was sentenced to the guard house for disorderly conduct. His officer couldn't understand the boy's behaviour. He was a nice kid—he'd never gone to pieces before.

The officer asked the Red Cross Field Director to see him. The Red Cross man discovered a very worried boy. His wife had not been receiving his allotments, she wasn't well and needed an operation. She thought the soldier must have cancelled his allotments and a misunderstanding had arisen between them so that she was no longer writing him.

The field man got in touch with the Red Cross chapter in the boy's home town immediately. It took care of her, financed her operation and saw that she had adequate funds to provide for herself until the allotment again came through.

When the Red Cross man explained what had happened to the soldier's Commanding Officer, the latter promptly released the boy from the guard house. From then on the boy was all right. His worries were over, and the Army had gained a good fighting man.

All over the world, in every theatre of war and active battle front go the American Red Cross field men—helping soldiers with major and minor personal problems, bringing them recreational items such as magazines, books, comfort articles, athletic equipment and re-establishing their contact with home. These men share the conditions and hazards under which the soldiers fight. They also share their lives. They are on call day and night wherever they are needed.

G.I.'s overseas have many problems. Often home seems very, very far away. With the Red Cross there at hand wherever he may be, the soldier knows he can always get in touch with home — that he need never feel alone with problems he doesn't know how to solve himself. More than 3,000,000 service men passed through Red Cross field men's offices last year.

On the mud clogged roads of Italy, through the far jungles of New Guinea, on lonely desert posts, Red Cross field men take your place beside your boy. In order to continue this service, the Red Cross urgently needs contributions from the American people to its $200,000,000 War Fund drive this month.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS.

"Sorry Judge, my shipment of suspenders still hasn't come in. Some articles are mighty scarce these days. I don't get anywhere near as much as I could sell."

"With the war going on, Frank, we've got to expect those things. It's true of luxuries just as it is of necessities. Take whiskey, for example. There's a real shortage in that. It's to be expected when you realize there hasn't been a drop of it distilled in this country since way back in October, 1942.

"The only thing distillers have been making during that time is war-alcohol for the Government. So, I wasn't surprised a bit to read how bootlegging and black markets have sprung up around the country as a result of the dwindling supply. Our 13 years of prohibition proved that if folks can't get legal whiskey, they'll get illicit whiskey. Sure hope the shortage doesn't last too long. I'd hate to see this country turned over to the bootleggers again."

From Your Congressman Fred Bradley

The New Million Dollar Army Hospital at Sault Ste. Marie

For a number of months I have been relentless in my efforts to prevent the Army's abandoning and selling as salvage the new so-called temporary base hospital adjacent to Fort Brady.

I recognized, as have our citizens in the Upper Peninsula who have kept in touch with me on this matter, that there is no reason why this hospital cannot be employed by the armed forces for the treatment of convalescing veterans of our District prior to their discharge nor why it cannot be used by the Veterans' Administration for the relatively short term care of veterans immediately after discharge when they become the responsibility of the Veterans' Administration.

I became greatly alarmed during the early part of February when letters and wires reached my office advising that the augmented military facilities adjacent to Fort Brady were being dismantled and sold for salvage. Immediately and repeatedly on receipt of their communications from citizens of Sault Ste. Marie I called various high officials of the War Department and was as repeatedly informed that not only was the hospital not going to be touched but that none of the augmented facilities at Fort Brady were going to be torn down.

I was told that it was true, and I'll admit entirely logical, that with the removal of the augmented troops, the hospital was going to be closed down, but that it would be kept intact for any immediate use. The only exception made in these assurances, which were given to me less than four weeks ago, was that it was probable that some of the equipment in the augmented base hospital might be transferred elsewhere where it was more urgently needed at the moment.

Now, when this information came to me as your Representative in Congress, and from as high up as the Office of the General Staff, I felt justified in regarding it as authoritative and so you can imagine my indignation when I got up to the Soo on February 19th, during a temporary legislative lull down here in Washington, I found out that the augmented facilities at the Soo were being torn down, dismantled and sold at eight cents on the dollar, based on their original cost, just as fast as the Army could get rid of them, and when I make this statement, please do not take it for one minute that I am criticizing any of the personnel at Fort Brady, because from the Commanding Officer down they were acting under orders. The fault instead is down here in the policy-making Department in Washington.

As far as the hospital at Fort Brady is concerned, it has been completely stripped. Nothing but the bare walls are left standing. All of that equipment has been shipped out of there to a medical pool of supplies elsewhere. That equipment, of course, was not being disposed of at any salvage price, but the fact remains that it was absolutely in direct divergence with the assurance given me officially less than 30 days ago.

However, I am pleased to state that temporarily, at least, I believe I have this program of destruction and salvage stopped. On February 25th, in company with my good friend and very able colleague from Battle Creek, the Honorable Paul Shafer, I had an extended conference with Brigadier General Edward W. Smith, of the Office of the Chief of Staff, as a result of which conference he confirmed the understanding arrived at at that time in the following letter:

"Pursuant to your request of February 25th with reference to buildings and improvements adjacent Fort Brady which have been or will be declared surplus by the War Department, I am pleased to advise you that the War Department has not yet declared the hospital or adjacent buildings surplus and does not at this moment contemplate offering that part of the installation for sale. However, you may be assured that in the event this property is declared surplus and is offered for sale the State of Michigan will be given an opportunity to negotiate for its purchase. I have requested that no disposition be made of this property for a period of at least sixty days, pending final action by the State of Michigan."

The taxpayers and War Bond purchasers of the Nation have an investment in that hospital upwards of a million dollars. I am certain not one of them would approve the dismantling and selling at scrap prices hospital facilities which we all know will be direly needed as the war progresses.

Assists On Intangible Tax

W. F. Brooder, state sales tax representative, will be at the Charlevoix State Savings Bank on Friday afternoon, March 17th, to assist those who must make returns under the intangible tax law provisions.

Michigan is getting a more realistic picture of 1944, the year of invasion and perhaps of decision. Selective service is now reclassifying a quarter of a million men — many of them fathers — for possible military duty. Already an estimated half million men are in uniform. Casualty lists appear to be long, yet the big channel invasion has not started! What will be the effect of heavy invasion losses and a sustained continental battle on Michigan public opinion? If the 300 German divisions are able to withstand the Allies double assaults on two fronts without collapsing prior to the American elections in November, the effect of invasion and battle casualties cannot be underestimated. Nearly all straw votes taken among American soldiers at fighting fronts disclose a substantial trend towards re-election of their commander-in-chief, the President.

We are now told that the army was short 200,000 men from its 600,000 man quota for the last four months of 1943, thence the need exists for elimination this spring of many occupational deferments. What we tend to forget, however, is the exacting and arbitrary necessity of replacing each man who is killed, wounded, or incapacitated by illness or nerves. This need of military replacements is announced by the war department to be 75,000 to 100,000 men each MONTH. War is like a modern football game; it's the reserves that count.

The sobering effect of the new drain on Michigan's manpower serves to remind us also that neither Prime Minister Churchill nor President Roosevelt has ever uttered assurance that 1944 will bring victory. In fact, the British and American Commanders-in-chief recently cautioned their respective nations against optimism that the war will be won in 1944. If war workers accepted such a realistic view of the task ahead would they persist in quitting their jobs through unauthorized strikes?

Edwin E. Witte, retiring chairman of the Michigan regional war labor board, blames the increase of Michigan industrial disputes on the 1944 state of public thinking. "The basic cause is that here, as elsewhere in the country, victory seems to be taken for granted. More and more people are thinking of the post-war situation and are getting ready for what they believe that situation will be."

Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff in the first World War, via Associated Press, on his 79th birthday: "This country is in for a shock when the able-bodied soldiers start pouring out and the wounded start pouring in. The war hasn't even started. Wait until Germany and Japan begin fighting on their own soil! — We can lose this war right here at home thinking it is almost over."

Capt. Michael Fielding, news analyst, told Detroiters that the United States has lost the equivalent of 50 divisions of men because of a high percentage of neuro-psychiatric casualties. Why? "Too much mollycoddling."

The latest bit of over-optimism is that the Japs may be defeated first. We tend to forget the statements of Admiral Nimitz, General McArthur and General Stillwell—men who know — that without China bases we cannot defeat Japan. We have yet to regain the Philippines. We are still far from Japanese factories and her main supply base. Illusions of such wishful thinking seem to be that we can defeat Germany from the air and Japan on the sea. Actually each step is preparatory to land invasion — getting and holding land bases from which men and machines may operate.

The sartorial splendor, suave confidence, and snappy retorts of Special Prosecutor Kim Sigler in the Lansing legislative graft hearing are the talk of Lansing. Kim delights reporters by wearing a different suit each day. Results: columns of newspaper publicity as writers portray a hollywood-like personality. Lansing experts many more indictments, the total running perhaps to 60.

Secretary of State Herman Dignan has two sons, Tom and Jim, both in the U. S. army air corps. Hobbies: Serving as starting judge for harness horse races, watching a good boxing match, and playing pitch. He belongs to the Masonic Fraternity, the Elks, Owosso Country club, and the Shrine. Makes friends easily.

Governor Kelly has received from the American Red Cross a barrage of impressive evidence to substantiate the qualifications of Dr. William DeKleine of Grand Haven as Michigan commissioner of public health. When the legislature convenes this month for final adjournment, the Senate is expected to confirm the appointment. The governor's office sprung the appointment late in the special session; caught senators by surprise.

The Upper Peninsula's mineral resources include millions of tons —almost a limitless supply — of low grade iron ore ingrained with jasper rock. Practically every major iron mining company in the Lake Superior district is experimenting to discover a practical procedure of separating the iron ore from the rock.

The Michigan Unemployment Compensation commission expects to have a kitty of $270 millions piled up to meet the post-war "storm" of unemployment. Among the headaches is this: What is going to happen to the 350,000 "in-migrants" who flocked to Detroit from other states for war jobs" One bright spot is the assured demand for new automobiles. This will provide re-employment for many war workers.

While Mayor George Welsh of Grand Rapids was demanding a share of the state's sales tax surplus for municipal post-war needs, Mayor LaGuardia of New York City was asking a House committee at Washington for $380 millions of federal funds to assist New York City in carrying out a projected billion dollar post-war program. Unloading local governmental responsibilities upon Lansing or Washington is becoming almost a custom. A prominent Kansan once remarked "nobody wants to be without a bowl when it's running soup."

AAA To Handle Gas for Farmers April 1

According to the recent OPA ruling, all non-highway gas for farm use must be approved by the AAA county committee after April 1st. Farmers are asked to have all necessary information assembled for the AAA committeeman when he makes his spring canvass for the AAA farm plan around the end of March.

The farmer is asked to have ready the estimated work to be done by tractor for 1944, the gallons of fuel oil or gasoline used in 1943, the estimated needs for 1944 and the amount of fuel and coupons on hand April 1, 1944 for the committeeman when he makes his rounds. No gas or fuel oil will be issued by the OPA without the recommendation of the committeemen and the approval of the county AAA committee.

Applications for fuel oil and gasoline for non-highway use of farmers will continue to go through the OPA office directly, until April 1st.

The recommending of gas rations for farmers has been allocated to the AAA committeemen by the OPA because the three AAA committeemen in each township are practical farmers themselves and have first hand understanding of the fuel needed to operate tractors, buzz machines, gasoline engines, etc. This should make gas and fuel oil rationing much more effective than the previous system whereby the farmer had to explain his needs to a non-agricultural board member for approval.

Fruit Growers Wage Battle Against Loss of Top Soil

The recent state meeting of fruit growers from Northern Michigan held at Traverse City on March 3rd, demonstrated the interest in preventing erosion losses. Having the morning session five highly successful fruit growers gave their opinions relative to soil conservation. They were all using sod crops in their orchards and used mulch around the trees. Several had planted their orchard on the contour to prevent the washing away of top soil. A. L. Barbee of East Jordan appeared on the program. No one in Northern Michigan has actually adopted soil conservation practices to a greater degree. For years he has recognized erosion losses and taken steps to avoid it.

More and more Charlevoix County farmers are conscious of these great losses and thy are becoming more interested in doing something in the way of prevention. The organization of a soil conservation district will be the most important step taken by farmers in solving this problem. The petitions are now being circulated throughout the county and are being signed by hundreds of farm folks who want to do something about soil losses. It is expected there will be 500 signatures on these petitions when they are turned in at the public hearing scheduled for Thursday night, March 30th at 8:00 in the County Court House.

Farm Management Specialist Assisted in the Program

On Tuesday and Wednesday, March 14th and 15th, the farmers who have been keeping records under the supervision of the extension office, met with representatives of the farm management department to have their books checked in. Approximately one hours time was spent with each cooperator in order to make certain that all items were included in this years business.

There has never been a time when farm records are as important as they are today. For income tax purposes these cooperators are fortunate, as their records are complete and accurate and the information from the books is exactly what is needed on the income tax returns. Then again, with the necessity for greater food production on every farm in the county, a farmer who kept records has the advantage of knowing exactly the farm operations that give the best results, both in food production and financial returns.

In addition to these cooperators there are well over one hundred other farmers who are using a farm account book for their own information. Every farmer should keep some type of farm record. We still have a quantity of books at thirty cents per book. Why not purchase one and start keeping records?

night. Some of these little kids don't know what it is to have lights on at night. I'm just becoming a little used to this stumbling around, myself, now, but it isn't a cinch, believe me.

As beautiful and quaint as England is, I will be glad to see the U. S. again. We all feel the same. Every fellow who goes overseas likes the experience, but still thinks home is the best experience of all. I'm looking forward to seeing everyone in the home town again and I hope that time isn't too far off.

So long, for a while, or should I say "Cheerio," now? I'll write soon again,

Your friend,
Lyle (Cpl. Lyle V. Miles.)

Dear Editor:

How is everything in the old home town? Did anybody go through the ice yet trying to beat the meat shortage by being the first to land those big perch?

It has been some time since I received the Courier, so I haven't been up on the news. In December, I received a couple of copies. We have only had mail once since January 13th and that being almost all air mail, so I'll just have to hope its in our next batch of mail. I imagine there will be two or three copies — at least, hope so. I want to thank you for sending it in the past. So does "Flightless Eagle," a sailor from Patoskey aboard. He gets all of my copies —that is, when I am through with them.

Good luck to you,
Pfc. G. W. Lusk.

Dear Editor:

Just a few lines, while I have a few minutes, to let you know that I am still kicking around.

How is old King Winter up there, now? I imagine it's quite frosty, isn't it? I'll bet the old town is pretty dead now, but one of these fine days we will be back and all liven it up a bit.

Well, I guess I'd better knock off for now, so — until later — best regards to all.

Clarence P. ("Bud") Helse,
BM1/c

Dear Friends of Charlevoix:

I'm sorry I haven't written sooner, as I just have been pretty busy. But, it's almost neglect and I'm sorry. It won't happen again.

I want to thank you and all the people for making it possible to send me the papar for the past year. I really do appreciate it very much and have been getting two copies a week.

I also want to thank the Blue Star Mothers for their Christmas greeting, also, the members of the Kiwanis Club for their greeting. I appreciate these little greetings, as it makes us boys from Charlevoix feel that, if we have people like you up there to think of us and back us up, we'll be home that much sooner and help preserve the peace that our boys have fought for so hard and become victorious.

I also want to thank the American Legion for their privilege card and that I, myself, as well as others, have a future membership. Will sign off this time.

Best f luck, always,
James Annis, Y. S. N. R.

Wartime drivers find Studebaker the ideal economy car

DEPENDABLE transportation means more than ever these days to busy wartime drivers.

Here's what a big-city physician, name on request, recently said: "In my general practice, I can always count on my Studebaker these war days for reliable, low-cost performance."

That doctor is one of many hard-working civilians who are getting exceptional tire, gas and maintenance economy from their Studebaker Champions, Commanders and Presidents.

In fact, today, after well over two years of war, hundreds of thousands of essential motorists from coast to coast are still enjoying dependable transportation at low cost, thanks to the quality of Studebaker craftsmanship and the advanced principles of Studebaker engineering.

DRASTIC RISE IN POSTAL RATES

NEW SENATE DOCUMENT IS FULL OF CHANGES

Local Rural Rate Boosted To 3c And Money Order Charges Soar to New Heights

According to Senate Document 158, covering war revenue, postal rates, excise taxes and income tax rates, the local first class postage rate, under the new revenue act which becomes effective March 26th, will be 3c an ounce at letter carrier offices, instead of 2c. The domestic air mail rate will be increased from 6c an ounce to 8c.

Every parcel sent by parcel post will require at least 1c more in postage than is now required. The new law requires that the increase be 1c or 3%, whichever is greater. Detailed tables are being drafted and will be inserted in the Postal Bulletin, so that complete information will be available in all post offices on the effective date of the new act.

The Department announces that the rate on air mail, to and from the armed forces stationed outside the continental United States, which were reduced to 6c a half ounce on December 23, 1941, remains unchanged. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing is processing an 8c domestic air mail stamp. The design is that of the 6c stamp, but the color will be different. Every post office will have a supply when the rate becomes effective.

The money order rates are increased as follows: 1 cent to $2.50, increased from 6c to 10c; $2.51 to $5.00, increased from 8c to 14c; $5.01 to $10.00, increased from 11c to 19c; $10.01 to $20.00, increased from 13c to 22c; $20.01 to $40.00, increased from 15c to 25c; $40.01 to $60.00, increased from 18c to 30c; $60.01 to $80.00 increased from 20c to 34c; $80.01 to $100.00, increased from 22c to 37c. Fees for registered mail are increased 33 1-3%, as are also additional fees, or surcharges.

Postmaster General Walker announces that the existing supply of 6c air mail stamps will not be recalled. Armed forces air mail is so heavy, he states, that printing of the 6c stamp will have to be continued in quantity. The armed forces now absorb the total production of 6c air mail stamped envelopes. Eight million of them are being used weekly by the armed forces. Eight cent stamped envelopes will not be printed for the time being.

PETITIONS OUT TO RELOCATE U. S. 131

Petitions are out and around, addressed to Hon. Charles M. Ziegler, state highway commissioner, Lansing, to the effect, as follows: "Whereas Route U. S. 131 is to be relocated between the city of Mancelona and the village of Walloon Lake, and whereas we, the undersigned citizens of the county of Charlevoix, state of Michigan, desire to have Route U. S. 131 located so as to pass through or near the cities of East Jordan and Boyne City, therefore, we do hereby petition, etc., that surveys be made of such a relocation." Tells Experiences As Military Policeman In North Africa

Members of the Kiwanis club listened with considerable interest, Tuesday evening, to Lisle Beaudoin's talk on his experiences in the Military Police.

Beaudoin's detailed account of the events occurring while in a convoy revealed the nature of sub attacks in strikingly vivid outlines. The interesting variety in appearance and actions of British, Italians and Arabs, as the speaker had observed it in the course of his work was made intensely real to his listenors.

L. G. Carr, of East Jordan, spoke briefly about the Easter Seal sale. Bert Beaudoin, Pvt. Donald Meggison (on furlough from Camp Hood, Texas) and Fred Bancroft, who has been touring the eastern part of this country, were other guests of the club members.

Plans are being made by R. F. Sloan, chairman of the agricultural committee, for a Farmer-Kiwanis dinner at the April 4th meeting.

The decoration, instead of being sent through the mail, made its journey from North Africa through four pairs of hands, one of its transferees being Bill Gee-mine of Charlevoix rural district, who was serving on the same mine sweeper when Melvin got his wound. The latter is now fully recovered and back on his job in the Mediterranean, helping to make "Adolph" unhappy.

There are 2,700 4x4 dressings and 2,400 4½x8 dressings to be made up. At the present time there is no sewing and knitting to be done, so it is hoped that all workers will devote as much time as possible to the dressings.

NEW BALLROOM OPENED SATURDAY AT E. JORDAN

The Temple Ballroom at East Jordan opened, last Saturday night, with a St. Patrick's Ball, which was well attended by people from the surrounding area. The Irish green was much in evidence in the form of door favors, consisting of 'feathered hats for men and women. Table decorations were also in green to conform with the general St. Patrick's spirit.

The music furnished by Loton Willson, with his nine piece band, was of a quality not to be surpassed in this part of the state. The well conducted program should furnish a long felt entertainment need of this type for the people of East Jordan and neighboring towns. Soft drinks and lunches are served.

RECEIPTS JUMP FOR RED CROSS

CHAIRMAN EDWARDS STATES $5,000. MARK HIT

Returns Not All In And Nineteen Hundred Dollars Already Turned In For City

As the Red Cross war fund drive approaches its final week, over $5,000 has been raised toward Charlevoix county's goal of $9,900, it is reported by E. J. Edwards, county war fund chairman.

In this city, $1,900 has already been turned over by committee workers to Otto Krueger, city chairman. Other canvassers are expected to report later this week with additional funds which should bring the total to nearly $2,500. Charlevoix's quota is $2,900.

In addition to generous gifts of local and summer residents, some contributions have been received from men in service, wishing to repay in some measure the benefits they have received from Red Cross.

No other civilian agency in the country has such responsibility to the armed forces. Only the Red Cross is obligated and chartered by Congress to serve as the official auxiliary of United States armed forces. Moving in with American troops at every battle front, Red Cross field men, hospital and club workers have established themselves as essential to any military operation. At Bougainville, in Italy, in New Guinea, men and women wearing the Red Cross insignia share the hardships of war in order that they may serve American fighting men.

AIRPORT SITE IS MARKEDLY GOOD

RATED HIGH ON MICHIGAN AERONAUTICS PLANS

Bond Issue Meraly To Buy Land For Class Two Field—Later Expansion At Will

Proposal to bond the City of Charlevoix in the sum of $16,000 for the purpose of constructing an airport, coming in wartime, may seem surprising. However, in view of the increasing use of air transportation, and accepting the long-range, postwar angle of the proposition, it look like one of the biggest steps forward that we could possibly make. That it would ultimately attract industry to this city to have a practical airport can hardly be denied. Benefits accruing to the resort industry from the day by day passage of tourists and business travellers hardly needs exposition.

Present plans call for a Class 2 airport, which means an airport with runways 2,500 to 2,600 feet long, (approximately ½ mile.) This would take care of up to mod including medium size transports. The site is so laid out that it can be extended at a minimum of cost to a Class 3 airport, which will take care of anything that flies. Plans are all drawn for grading, draining and pavement and have been submitted to the state board of Aeronautics and has been approved.

Orlginal idea was to find a spot in the county that would take care of the three towns and environs, but no available terrain could be fixed upon. So this plan was discarded, and each town left to select its own local site and build its own airport.

Property Chosen

The property that Charlevoix has chosen lies between State street and the old Norwood road and between U. S. 31 and Carpenter Avenue. The runways, as eventually completed, will lie north and south, east and west and northeast and southeast, northwest and southwest, with the Ed Swanson farm lying at about its center. The first step is to purchase the land, and that is what the bond issue is for. One hundred twenty-four acres will cost $16,000. This amount can be paid off in five years, without increasing taxes. The present plan is to appropriate from our operating tax money enough to grade the land and put in usable shape at least two runways. Completion of the finished plan can be postponed until the country at large begins developing its air transportation facilities, following the war. Plans of our airport are on file with the Michigan Board of Aeronautics and, when state or government funds are available, we will be on the ground floor.

C. K. Stevens, engineer of the state board of Aeronautics, has made the statement that Charlevoix's site is one of the best "inside the city limits" sites in Michigan. The board has us marked on its plans for one of the thirty largest and best airports in the state, and Michigan's ultimate goal for the airport service is as complete and efficient as the highway department.

The runways, as planned to be built at present, are ½ mile long, and that is what land is being planned for now, and what will be

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Dear Editor:

I have been here in Fort Sheridan for just a week, now, and I went to a basket ball game last night and saw a team from Kenosha, Wis., play our team from Fort Sheridan. The amazing thing was that I saw Keith Carey play on the Wisconsin team, but I didn't get to talk to him, as I had to be back on duty at 10:30 o'clock, so only saw the first half. Keith had racked up about 14 points at that stage of the game.

I am going over to the gym again tonight and see our team play Camp McCoy, Wis. Will write more later, when I get stationed in a permanent place. So, I will close for now,

P. S.—Dan Geneit was shipped out yesterday and I am expecting to get it Monday. Jim Lilac of East Jordan is here in the same barracks with me.

Dear Editor:

Once again I wish to notify you of my change of address. The following address is the one I'll be residing at, for a while anyway.

Cpl. O. E. Bergeon, 322 Ftr. Sqdn., Seymour Johnson Field, North Carolina.

This address will bring to me "This and That" and news of the best people in the world. And my I thank you for sending me the paper for these many months.

And now may I say "hello" to all the wonderful people of Charlevoix. I wish to thank you all for making my visit home the most pleasant a fellow could ask for.

Oh, my aching back, I'm taking up a lot of valuable advertising space with this chatter, so I'll cut this short and bring to a close right now.

Yours for a speedy victory,

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Roscocrans, Conservationist, To Meet Leaders Next Friday

An important meeting has been arranged for Friday afternoon, March 24th, at 2:00 o'clock, in the Boyne City library for farmers interested in the proposed county soil conservation district. Inasmuch as the public hearing will be held on March 30th, it is necessary to get plans worked out quickly.

A cordial invitation is extended to all farmers, interested in preventing soil losses, to attend this discussion. Lee Roscncrans, soil conservationist from the Traverse City district, will have slides showing the benefits obtained by the establishment of a district. Already, petitions with nearly 200 names have been received, which clearly indicates the approval of farmers in this program.

Don't come alone, invite in one or two of your neighbors to attend this discussion with you. Remember, this week Friday afternoon at the Boyne City library at 2:00 o'clock.

Public Hearing for Organization of Soil Conservation District

A public hearing will be held at the court house in Charlevoix, on Thursday night, March 30, at 8:00 p.m., by the state soil conservation committee from Lansing, to determine whether Charlevoix county farmers and landowners wish to proceed with the organization of a soil conservation district.

Announcing the meeting, B. C. Mellencamp, county agent, said that the state committee had passed favorably on the petitions submitted on February 4. Community leaders representing the county Farm Bureau and the local Grangers, headed the committee of farm men and women who circulated petitions.

The state committee is headed by Charles Figy, commissioner, state department of Agriculture. Other members are P. J. Hoffmaster, director, Michigan department of conservation, E. L. Anthony, dean of Agriculture, Michigan State college.

Anyone attending the hearing will have a chance to give his opinion for or against the district, Mellencamp explained.

Attendance of interested farmers is important, because the state committee will base its approval or disapproval of the need for a local district on the public opinion expressed at the hearing.

It is hoped that all interested farmers will make an effort to be present. The prevention of erosion losses is still the biggest factor in our future agricultural prosperity. The decision reached will have a most profound influence on our crop yields and food production.

Fruit Growers to Have Two Meetings

All fruit growers will be greatly interested in attending two discussion meetings, scheduled for Tuesday, March 28, and Thursday, March 30th.

The first meeting will be held in the city building, East Jordan, Tuesday afternoon at 2:00. This discussion will be of primary interest to the producers of cherries and apples. A full report will be given by A. L. Darbee covering the fine activities of the State Cherry Growers Inc. It has been through the efforts of this organization that cherry growers are receiving profitable prices. Latest recommendations will be given covering all subjects pertaining to tree fruits.

The second meeting, on Thursday, March 30, will be of particular interest to the growers of canning factory crops. The East Jordan canning factory is most anxious to entertain their growers and are giving a complimentary luncheon in the American Legion Hall, East Jordan at 12:00, noon. Specialist, C. E. Russell will discuss with you asparagus growing, raspberries and other crops under contract. Sometimes, it seems that we are not taking advantage of this location in producing crops — a location that other sections cannot equal.

Make your plans right now to attend these meetings. In a few days we will all be so busy that we will not want to leave our farms. Enter into the discussion. Bring your problems with you.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley

Our Agricultural Problem Is Not Being Alleviated

On March 5th, the Truman Committee released its Third Annual Report. In that Report, among other things, the Committee sought to bring to the attention of the Congress and the War Food Administration the seriousness of the problems facing our farmers.

In that Report we find this statement — "Unless new farm machinery and replacement parts for both farm machinery and trucks are made, the injury to our economy will be serious."

We are now entering the 1944 food production program. Members of Congress are receiving daily letters from farmers stressing the manpower and farm machinery shortages, which can only be expected to retard and restrict their production in the season ahead. Selective Service has asked a review of all farm deferments along with those of industry. Throughout the Nation, farm help is being reclassified; with the result that the operators are left out on the limb, so to speak, not knowing whether they can physically go ahead with their plans for their season's production program. The continued production of food in abundance is as important as any part of our war effort. We cannot take the labor off our farms and deprive our farmers of agricultural machinery and expect them to produce the food necessary to feed our own country and the peoples of the conquered lands when they have been freed.

Sending Too Much Abroad

Allocations of materials for farm machinery construction have been made to the War Food Administration. According to the Truman Report — "An important portion of the farm machinery program is now behind the production schedule set up by the manufacturers in accordance with quotas." The reason in part is given in these statements — "In some instances, especially tractor components, the lag in production is due to the fact that the farm machinery program requiring them are in direct competition with military, truck, and other vehicle programs. In other instances manufacturers are behind schedule because the cost of producing the items approaches and sometimes even exceeds the sale price." The report goes on to state that "The tractor situation is expected to be aggravated by a further request for tractors by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, and by the military."

Last Tuesday Senator Reynolds on the Senate Floor revealed "The Agricultural Machinery Program-ed by U.N.R.R.A. for European distribution; one-fourth to be delivered by August 1, 1944, and the balance within one year." We read astounded of the farm equipment our country is obligated to produce and send to all the peoples of the world at a time when our own farmers are begging for farm equipment and machinery. The list is too long for me to itemize here but in summarizing the major items briefly, we find the program entails the shipment of 30,000 tractors, 30,000 plows, 30,000 separators, 50,000 mowers, 17,000 reapers, 22,900 horse-drawn rakes, 40,000 harrows and 8,300 cultivators, 770 threshing machines and many other farm items. This program contemplates the use of vital steel allocated to the War Food Administration. Again the American farmer is left holding the bag. We need little further proof that agriculture has been made a stepchild of the New Deal Administration.

We Come First

I did not vote for the U.N.R.R.A. I am proud I did not do so. In my humble opinion, we should take care of our own first, and then consider the rest of the world. If we do not consider the welfare of the United States of America, I would like to know of a foreign country which will. When will our "World Planners" here in Washington plan for America?

It is to be hoped that the deferment regulation of Selective Service relating to essential agricultural labor will be clarified, immediately, that our War Food Administration will recognize the importance of making available promptly to our farmers equipment vitally needed before taking care of the "gifts" to other Nations. If this is not done promptly, the 1944 agricultural production program will fall far short of its established goal.

It takes time—and plenty of it to blend the zippy, zesty tang of fine hops with the rich, mellow goodness of choice barley malt. But it's TIME well spent in slow, patient ageing when the result is Fox de Luxe—with its famous balanced flavor that's never bitter—never sweet—always just downright delicious!

FOX DE LUXE
Fully Aged to Peak of Flavor Perfection

Memories of old-time melodramas are being re-lived at Lansing, the state capital.

The reason: Prosecutor Kim Sigler, State's Witness Charles Hemans, et al, and their sensational disclosures of purported graft in the state legislature.

In the Gay Nineties era that preceded the flickering silver screen, a traveling troup of actors would present in the town opery house such thrilling dramas as "East Lynn" and "The Midnight Express." The villain would conspire to wed Little Nell at the threat of foreclosing on the family homestead, or Little Nell would be rescued just in the nick of time from the path of a thundering midnight train.

And then there was the tear-jerker, "Uncle Tom's Cabin, or Life Among the Lowly", that propagnnda masterpiece from the inspired mind of Harriet Beecher Stowe which was produced in an earlier day, about 1850, and became an ever-popular perennial. Nick Carter, too, was a part of this period in American history.

We do not want to suggest that the Lansing hearing before Judge Leland W. Carr smacked of theatrical melodrama and illusion. It was no laughing matter.

But the disclosures, nevertheless, possessed the allegorical spirit of these sensational plots in which Little Nell found herself entangled, the sweet, innocent heroine pitted against a harsh, cruel world.

Examine the characters of the drama, if you please. The people's elected representative, members of the state legislature, who were entrusted with responsibility of making the laws under which we, a commonwealth in a democracy, govern ourselves. They travel to the state capital, Lansing, and take their places on the stage.

Next, on the list of characters, is the lobbyist. He represents what is commonly labeled the "vested interest" and hence is usually portrayed in the role of the villain, seeking to dispossess Little Nell of her home or tie the gal to the rails.

The "vested interest" furnishes the tainted money whereby the lobbyist was to corrupt the people's representatives — or permit them to corrupt themselves.

The role of the hero is found individually, as the characters enter the stage, in the judge who is determined to see justice triumph over evil, and in the prosecutor who seeks in turn to ferret out the conspiracy and to save Little Nell.

The heroine, of course, is the People of Michigan who would be wronged by such misdoings.

All of this takes place in the first act, to be sure. You must wait until the third act, hanging breathlessly in your chair, to get the denouement just before the final curtain falls with a bang.

In the Lansing melodrama, however, the characters are not defined with ready acceptance by the audience through contrasts of ink black or snow white.

The lobbyist, who should be the villain, insists that he is the hero, an innocent victim of a system that exists at the state capital. In fact, he declares he has been a victim of "extortion" whereby the legislators forced him to part with the tainted money, etc. Furthermore, it is disclosed that the lobbyist, as a payoff man who turns state's witness, is to receive immunity from punishment. Is he the villain or the hero? All this is a bit disconcerting to an audience that likes its drama presented by obvious characters. Further confusion follows when the witness makes charges of attempts at counter-corruption and even allegations that his life has been threatened — broad melodrama with a capital M.

This is high drama, to be sure. But it was, after all, only the first act. The trial is to follow, and since justice must prevail, then the innocent will be acquitted and the guilty will be punished in a good, old Anglo-Saxon way. As sensational as the first act proved to be, the audience should be reminded that the remainder of the melodrama is yet to come and that those who are accused should not be prejudged of their guilt or innocence until the evidence is presented by both sides and the jury announces the verdict.

Another bit of Lansing drama, that is currently engaging the audience's attention, concerns the well-publicized "boss" of the Michigan Republican party. Here is a man of professed mystery who has emerged unscathed from the fires of a federal court trial, and remains today the titular representative of his party, its national committeeman.

For years the boss, portrayed traditionally in the character of a villain, has been the target of party reformers who declare him to be an artful Simon Legree. Each state convention has become the scene of "anti-boss" crusades until the party itself has become well factionalized. Defenders of the boss loudly proclaim him to possess the strength of wise leadership, while his critics smartly denounce him in words equally fervent.

Now comes, in the hero's role, the governor of the state as a chosen leader of the people. He issues a courageous statement declaring that "certain conditions exist in regard to national committeeman that do not tend to create unity and call for a new selection in that office."

This, too, comes in the first act.

Yes, Lansing, the capital city, is being treated to high drama in 1944.

The next acts are being awaited amid sizeable suspense by the audience — the people of Michigan.

Will Little Nell be saved from the clutches of the villain, or the hero, or whatever he is?

Will the big bad boss be toppled from his throne?

Well, hang on in your seats, folks. Until the last acts of the dramas when the curtain crashes down, you'll probably have to wait for the answers.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"That's really a great editorial you just read to us, Judge. Where did you say it appeared?"

"In 'The Stars and Stripes'... the newspaper of the U.S. Armed Forces in Europe. Kind of gives us folks back home something to think about, doesn't it, Bill?"

"It certainly does, Judge. Particularly the last paragraph. Would you mind reading that again?"

"Glad to, Bill. It says, 'We can remember the days of prohibition, when moonshine whiskey made quick fortunes for bootleggers, crooked politicians and dishonest police officials. As a result, we claim we know what we want in the way of liquor legislation and feel those at home should wait until we return before initiating further legislation on liquor control'."

"Out of fairness to our boys over there fighting, Judge, how could we disobey such a wish?"

AIRPORT SITE IS MARKEDLY GOOD

right if the boro issue carries I eventually, extending these runways to ¾ mile length, we can increase to a Class 3 airport, at a minimum of cost, at any time in the future.

Has Great Advantages

One of the great advantages of the site chosen is that it lies within the city limits, not too far from the center of town, and can efficiently and economically be furnished with sewer, lights and water. Still, it is far enough away from the houses to eliminate any objectionable factor of noise or dust.

Three airline companies are already figuring on the local airport as a point in their routes. Wolverine Airlines are definitely committed to the idea, but have not as yet formulated their schedule. Pennsylvania Airlines would use Charlevoix in preference to Pellston, on account of its larger population. Northern Michigan Airlines will operate from Grand Rapids to the Soo. Here's our guarantee of business, right from the start. Let's go, folks.

When you roll along the smooth highways in Michigan, don't forget "Uncle" George, whose untiring efforts — writing, speaking at public meetings and doing personal missionary work on the street corners and in the stores and postoffice lobby — helped to make your comfort possible. We, personally, worked with "Uncle" George and got out his letters to men in key positions and his broadsides to the newspapers, from time to time, over the years that he was here in Charlevoix, and know how hard he worked to make his dream come true.) The Peer Gynt headline refers to the music memory contests held in the schools — a feature that materially aided many promising youngsters on their road to success in the musical field and raised the general musical standards for the generation to come.)

When the War Is Over

That much yearned for, almost legendary, day will mark a new era for transportation, as it will for everything else.

And our railroads will be ready.

We have plans for that day—plans that are realistic, forward looking, surprisingly progressive.

Michigan's railroads will join in the great change ahead.

They are picturing a future of improved plants, changed equipment, faster schedules, more efficient operation of both freight and passenger services.

The railroads have learned many things during this war period. America will benefit from this new "know how" in the days to come.

"When the war is over" America will move at an increased tempo. But no matter how much faster life will be, or how much greater will be the demands upon transportation, the railroads will be in the forefront, carrying the bulk of America's increased and accelerated passenger and freight traffic, and doing it with smoothness and efficiency.

USED TO BREAK UP STRAITS ICE

CAR FERRIES CHARTERED TO COAST GUARD FOR WORK

Heavier Tonnage, Shorter Period To Ship and Few Vessels Reasons for Urgency

Cooperating with the Lake Carriers' Association, the Coast Guard last week, were using heavy car ferries to augment its ice breaking operations on the lakes, in order to meet scheduled oporation of ships in the lower rivers.

Under charter to the Coast Gunrd, the St. Marie was working its way through heavy ice in the Straits of Mackinac, Friday. It was figured then that a second ferry might be ordered into actien, shortly, to meet the urgent situation. Five Coast Guard breakers were already at work on ice-bound chipping channels of the Great Lakes. The Plaintree and Arrowwood, according to their skippers, were trying to open the route from Lake Erie to Lake Huron, after working through eight feet of heavily windrowed ire in the St. Clair river between Tashmoo Park and Marine City. The Chapparell was breaking open the lower St. Mary's river. The Sweetgum and Blackhawk were expected to shift operations to Port Inland, after finishing their work in Green Bay.

Urgent Need for Haste

The urgency of these ice breaking efforts in relntion to the job ahead of the Lake Carriers in the 1944 season is better understood by reference to the carriers' accomplishments in 1942, when shipping started on March 23, the earliest opening date on record. During that season, they managed to transport 178,000,000 tons of iron ore, coal, grnin and limestone, which represents the greatest quantity of these bulk commodities ever moved over the inland waterways in a single season.

With n later opening date this year than in 1942 and with no increase, in the number of vessels nvailnble, the Lake Carriers must move a total of 192,000,000 tons before the shipping lanes freeze over again next winter.

To meet this handicup, a full complement of skilled seamen for every sailable ship is essential.

TRIPLE A WORKERS ASSIST RED CROSS

In Making Their Own Canvass, They Can Collect Donations

Officials of the county Red Cross organization have been fortunate in securing the nssistance of the Triple A workers, this year, as last, in soliciting contributions from the farmers.

Owing to the restrictions of gas rationing and tire shortages, it has been almost impossible to secure the services of volunteers in contacting the farmers for Red Cross donations. The Triple A workers, totaling some twelve or fifteen in number, have to contact every farmer in the county, anyway, and, with very little extra effort, can "kill the two birds with one stone."

Last year, these workers collected $500.00 in the rural districts for Red Cross — the best collection that has ever been made among the farmers. This year, their quota is $1,000.

Lest We Forget

Reviewing a Bit of Charlevoix's History Through the Time-Worn Pages of Old Courier Files.

Fifty-Eight Years Ago

Thursday, March 25, 1886

(From the Files of The Charlevoix Journal)

(Here's a peculiar death notice from one of the inside pages) Richmond, Va. "Telegram" —The old Confederate battle flag at the Southern Soldiers' Home was at half mast today, out of respect to "Old Sorrel", "Stonewall" Jackson's war-horse, who died yesterday. Many of the old soldiers watched him tenderly during the night and were with him when he died. "Old Sorrel" was 32 years of age, was wounded twice during the war, and was the last surviving horse of the Confederate army. (Must take a look at these inside pages oftener. Peculiar way they had then of not cutting them at the top, so that you have to prop up one sheet to read them in the file.)

Mrs. Rose, of the Petoskey Democrat, is solving the question whether a woman can successfully run a newspaper and, to all outward appearances, the proof is that she can. However, there is chance for still greater improvement. (Editor Strang must have been one of those "last ditch diehards." Bet he'd have a conniption fit today at the sight of these gals running around in slacks with a monkey wrench in one hand and blow-torch in the other!)

The ladies of the Congregational church are watching for the first new maple sugar that comes to town, with a view to giving a sugar social some evening, the early part of next week. (Yum, Yum! History, pul-eeze repeat yourself.)

Navigation is open, the ice went out this morning.

Dear Editor:

It has been some time since I showed my nppreciation for the best little paper in the world coming from the best little City in the world. It catches up with me often at late dates but even then I get a great deal of enjoyment reading it from the editorial to the advertisments the only sad feature is to read where so many of the old residents are leaving from which there is no return, wish I could send my personal condolence to each one of them, but Uncle Sam keeps me too busy for that but he cannot keep me too busy from thinking about them.

Since January we have been here in Tennessee on Maneuvers and now I understand why they send you here, you get climatized in a first degree manner. All the seasons are combined here in them thar hills, interspersed mostly with rain and mud. Of course, the combat conditions are as realistic as possible and at the end of each problem you find some very tired and weary soldiers. We will be through here around the last of the month and we are told that our next camp will be Camp Atterbury, Indiana. I am keeping my fingers crossed because I want to get back in the North and it can't come too soon.

Was sorry to learn that Ken and Anne had taken positions elsewhere. I am sure that the good wishes of all the service members go with them in their new endeavors.

I see where the election is beginning to tune up, it is the first election I haven't taken part in for more than 15 years. I hope that it all turns out the best way and I am sure that it will, but right now elections seem rather remote from the actualities of war. The most important things to stress now is to get this mess over as quickly as possible and to be able to truly understand the meaning of "Peace on Earth to Men of Good Will".

Gilt edge wishes to all my friends in the service wherever they may be and to you back home that are keeping the home fires

The Secret Weapon in Dan Mason's Attic

Dan Mason was always what we call a "string saver." When he unwraps a package he rolls up the string—folds the paper—and puts them both in his attic for safe-keeping.

"Never can tell when things'll come in handy," says Dan.

And you should see his attic! Stacks of paper, balls of string, empty bottles (Dan being a moderato man and sticking just to beer), old horseshoes—and goodness knows what-all.

We used to kid him a lot. But then comes the scrap drive, and Dan sets a record for the metal and the paper he contributes. And the glassmakers owe him a medal for the empty bottles he turns in.

From where I sit, Dan's one up on us all. What's more, he's got us doing it too—collecting scrap, returning empty bottles—not because somebody makes us do it, but because it's the Democratic way of working together to win the war.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley

We always enjoy and value our correspondence with our constituents. We cannot hope to do our best possible job for you without your constructive and even "destructive" criticism. Occasionally, however, we receive letters addressed to us that by their tone are, to say the least, somewhat irritating. I have always tried to make myself perfectly clear in my correspondence with all of my constituents. Illustrative of these two facts is a letter which I received a short time ago from an official of a C.I.O. Union Local in our District which I quote below together with my reply.

Here's The Letter

"Dear Sir and Representative:

"Received your letter of January 11th stating that any reasonable legislation for the benefit of our servicemen and veterans will receive your support.

"Kindly inform me what YOU call reasonable legislation for our servicemen and veterans. So we can have a common understanding.

"I see by the record you voted agsinst Soldier Vote bill. I'm sure the boys in service from the 11th Congressional District will be proud of THEIR Representative IN Washington, D. C.

"Sometimes according to the record I wonder just who you do represent. I am sure it is not the common class and labor because we all know there are far more laborers in the 11th Congressional District than anything else. Yet tell mo of one bill that has come before the House that would benefit the majority that you supported.

"Perhaps you can enlighten me just why every Republican Representativo in Michigan voted against the soldier vote bill while every Democrat in Michigan voted for it."

My Reply

I hope you will ponder carefully my reply.

"Dear Mr.———:

"I acknowledge and do appreciate the opportunity of replying to your recent letter.

"You ask what I would term reasonable veterans' legislation. I'll answer that by saying the legislatinn recently introduced in Congress, designed to give veterans war bonuses ranging from $3,500 to $4,500, I would term unreasonable legislation.

"We have but one gift worth giving to our returning soldiers and that is a SECURE country, a country whose home economy is sound. I do not intend to debate the morality of soldiers' bonuses, for they are entitled to far more than we are ever likely to give them. A soldier returning from the war wants his country to give him security, a job which will enable him to support bis family and meet his obligations; he will want to return to a country whose Government is operating on a sound financial basis. Even though you do not believe as I do, it seems to me a veteran will make a bad bargain if he settles for dollars in an insecure country. If the existing spend-thrift policy continues in our Government, anyone with an iota of common sense can see just where we will be at the end of this war — on the rocks of bankruptcy.

"Yes, the House did vote down the Federal "bobtail" ballot. Only an uninformed individual would dare say it was done because the Congress did not want a soldier to vote. The Congress is the last body in our Government which would deny to those who are fighting this war their Constitutional right to vote. If you would listen to my weekly radio broadcasts over Station WSOO, Sault Ste. Marie, on Sundays you would have heard me explain to our citizens why I voted against the adoption of a Federal ballot. What I objected to, as did the majority of the House, was having the ballots handled by the Administration, counted by the Administration and the whole proceeding cluttered up with cheap partisan politics. I shall vote to give our boys the privilege of voting the same identical ballot as their fathers, mothers and sisters; not alone the privilege of voting for the President, Vice President, Senators and Members of Congress but for the entire ticket, National, State and County.

"If the people in my District — of which you state labor constitutes the majority — did not believe I represented them as they wished here in Washington, they certainly would not have returned me to Congress in 1942. It is your privilege on election day to vote against me — as I have no doubt you have done in the past — since you are dissatisfied with the representation I am giving you.

"You ask why the Democratic Members of Michigan voted in support of the Federal ballot. I'll leave it to you to form your own conclusion. We still have some "yes-men" in Congress, who abide by the will of the Executive — right or wrong. Some Members have a large CIO vote in their District, and, consequently, will vote contrary to their honest convictions for political expediency; also they will support Administration measures because they do not wish to jeopardize their favorable standing with the Administration and do not wish to lose their patronage privileges. I am not that type of representative. I will not be swayed by pressure groups. I vote my honest conviction at all times, formed after diligent study of committee hearings and after listening to the debate on the issue at hand."

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

er I am a Democrat or a Republican. He works so hard that at the end of the day I am all worn out trying to follow him."

The governor's day is a task in itself. He arrives usually at the office about 9:30 a.m. Press conference is at 10. Engagements and business matters make the lunch hour very indefinite, the governor going to lunch anytime from 1 to 2:30 p.m. — no two days being the same. The entire executive staff —John ("Pat") Arrons, executive secretary; Elmer Hannah, administrative assistant who owns a country newspaper at Harbor Springs; Aaron Ley, office manager, and the others — make it a practice to wait for the governor before going to lunch.

The governor's afternoon is filled with conferences, usually lasting to 6:30. A recent session dealt with Michigan's potato surplus and how consumers might be encouraged to purchase more Michigan potatoes. Agricultural Commissioner Charles Figy and potato growers wanted the governor to help. Of course, he would be glad to do what he could. Then, several nights a week, the governor and some members of his staff will return at approximately 7:30 o'clock the "day" is over at midnight or later.

Currently, we might confide, the office staff is conspiring to induce the governor to slow down a bit, for his pace is severe and, if maintained, would undermine inevitably even a strong man's physical vitality and rugged health.

Why did Governor Kelly appoint Ted to be his press secretary?

Well, figure it out for yourself. Not because Ted was a Republican or a Democrat. The governor has never asked Ted about it, and Conrad Church, Ted's boss at the Pontiac Daily Press, doesn't know either. As a matter of fact, as Church puts it, "I never thought to ask him." Which probably goes, too, for Governor Kelly.

How a home-town friend nf Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner happened to become the press secretary for Governor Harry F. Kelly is one of those stories that indicate the changed attitude of Michigan state officials at Lansing.

Maybe the civil service amendment to the state constitution had something to do with this newly arrived recognition of merit.

Or perhaps it merely reflected the thinking of Governor Kelly who, as everyone knows, is no starry-eyed dreamer in the world of politics. Did Not Kelly appoint Dr. William DeKleine to be commissioner of the state department of health without knowledge of the doctor's political beliefs? So insists the governor's office which ought to know.

Michigan state government has traveled far. Such non-political appointments would have been the height of heresy 29 years ago. As we view the capital parade, the modern trend is all to the good.

Ted Hayhow was the best city editor the Pontiac Daily Press ever had.

He was a quiet chap who had a way of getting things done with a minimum of noise and fuss. He never waved his arms, shouted instructions to reporters, or lost his temper. His mind, always cool and collected, handled the day's 'grind' with ease and efficiency.

Late in the afternoon he would slide into his car, drive out to an 80-acre farm near Davisburg where he resided with his wife and two children, and take care of the chickens, pigs, cow or two, together with other general farm chores. And, now and then, he would find time to do some concentrating fishing for bass in his 12-acre private lake.

We met Ted for the first time, a number of years ago, when C. W. Lucas, press secretary for Highway Commissioner Van Wagoner, organized a bus safari to Houghton for an Upper Peninsula highway conference. Lucas, a Harbor Springs boy, was an alumnus of the Pontiac Daily Press; previously to that he had reported for Elmer Hannah's Harbor Springs Graphic. Ted was invited to join the group, a friendly gesture from "Luke" to a newspaperman whom he liked. "Luke" had a way of remembering his friends; today he is top-flight public relations executive, assistant to Manferd Burleigh, president of the Great Lakes Greyhound Lines.

But to return to Governor Kelly's press secretary.

One spring day, after serving 15 years as city editor, Huyhow glanced up at the blue sky and decided it was time to quit. His youngsters were growing up. He wanted more time to enjoy his home, his farm — and also that bass-stocked lake.

Harold Fitzgerald, publisher and Conrad Church, managing editor, received the unexpected decision like a thunderbolt on a cloudless day. No, Ted wasn't dissatisfied. He just wanted to be his own boss — free of any newspaper desk with its exacting responsibilities — yes, that was it.

Life on the farm led to another adventure — running an old-fashioned country store at Davisburg. His miniature Wanamaker emporium contained everything to automobile hub caps, with a coal business and lumber yard thrown in for good measure. The gross one year was close to $30,000.

Somehow in the rush of doing unimportant things at Lansing, we lost track of Ted until we read the news, late in 1942, that he had been named assistant secretary of the state safety commission. We read between the lines — "Luke", the governor's press secretary, was still remembering his friends. It turned out that Hayhow had injured a foot while cutting hay; thought a desk job would be fine if he didn't have to "play" politics.

When the genial Van Wagoner turned over the executive offices to Harry Kelly, the newsmen at the press room wondered what "Luke" was going to do. He had been accepted as being both an efficient newspaperman and a loyal Democrat. Governor Kelly gave no inkling of any disposition to replace him, and finally Lucas resigned on his own free will and rejoined the highway staff. His new title, as we remember it, was "Director of War Activities," but everyone knew the duties were the same — getting information to the public.

When the governor's office finally got around to settling on the vacancy, after Pete Miller of Plymouth had done some pinch-hitting, the announcement was made that Ted Hayhow was to get the assignment, a $500-per-month, position with increasing compensation under civil service tenure. It was a long jump from country farmer and proprietor of the Davisburg general store!

Ted took over, cool as ever, never batting an eye.

Following the rush of the 1944 special session, Governor Kelly took Ted with him to the Upper Peninsula. At the office of an Ironwood newspaper, Ted confided: "I am working for the hardest working governor the state has ever had. Although I live in the same town as a former governor, my boss has never asked me wheth-

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"I was just tellin' my brother Fred this morning, Judge...there's never been a time in our lives when we got to live up to that old sayin' 'United we stand, divided we fall' more than we have to today."

"How true that is, Herb. And for the life of me, I can't figure out why, at a time like this, some folks insist on raising a question like prohibition. I can't imagine anything that would tickle our enemies more than to get us folks over here taking sides against each other, arguing about an issue like that. We've got a he-man's job on our hands to win this war and we can't be wasting our minds, our money and our strength fighting about something we tried for nearly 14 years and found couldn't work.

"I say there's a time and a place, for everything, and this is no time or place to be doing any fightin' except the kind that's going to win the war."

AT THE MOVIES

The Woman of the Town

Straight from the colorful pages of American history comes the story of "The Woman Of The Town", which is at the Palace Theatre, Sunday and Monday, April 2 and 3, through United Artists release. Costarring in this gripping dramatic film produced by Harry Sherman are Albert Dekker and lovely Claire Trevor, who seems at her very best in romantic western roles such as she portrays here.

Dekker is cast as "Bat" Masterson, an ambitious young newspaper reporter who comes to the town of Dodge City, Kansas, in the 70's, looking for a job on a paper.

Miss Trovar plays the glamorous role of Dora Hand, a showgirl in the town's leading saloon.

When King Kennedy, a millionaire Texas playboy, arrives in town, Masterson realizes he not only has a dangerous character to deal with, so far as the peace of the town is concerned, but a rival for Dora's love as well.

"The Woman Of The Town" was directed by George Archainbaud. Prominent in the cast are such fine performers as Henry Hull, Porter Hall, Marion Martin and Barry Sullivan.

RATION TOKEN COST TAKES A NOSE DIVE

Fiber "Coins" Manufacturad At A Now Low Cost, Says OPA

Contrary to published reports last fall that "9,000,000 of the new rationing tokens were to be manufactured, at a cost to the government of $1,300,000", a report reaches us that we omitted a couple of ciphers thereby placing their exact cost in excess of the minting cost of a ten cent piece.

A mere 890 million, more or less, in these days of incomprehensible figures might ordinarily pass unnoticed. However, there were a few who questioned the article and for their edification we quote from an OPA bulletin of March 15, as follows: "The original order of 900 million tokens was increased to 2 billion at a unit cost of $.00112, or about one-ninth cent each. Recently a new order was placed for 200 million at .84c per thousand." (If Joe Foster and Frank Milward must know the unit cost of this last batch, let them figure it out for themselves.)

The manufacturing and distributing of the first 2 billion tokens was accomplished in 2½ months and established a record of the biggest job of its kind in history. The contract contained a penalty clause of $1,000 a day but was completed 24 hours ahead of schedule.

LETTERS FROM THE ARMY CAMPS

burning. May we be able to enjoy them soon.

Always,
Fay A. Bradley

Sgt. Fay A. Bradley, 36649479
Co. "E" 423rd. Inf., 106th. Div.
APO No. 443, c/o Postmaster
Nashville, Tennessee.

The following is a letter received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mntchett from S/Sgt. David Mntchett, stationed in the south Pacific. "Dear Folks: I don't intend to write much of a letter but thought I should tell you not to write to me again until I can give you an address where I might be for a while as I am on my way home. I might arrive sometime within the next six months. Also stop the Courier for me. I told the mail clerk to send my mail home so don't be surprised when it comes back." Dave has been out of the States since April, 1942, when he left with that now famous 126th Infantry. It's good to hear that some of them are coming home. Let's hope that Ed Radle, Harold Newman, Bob Heise, Frank Pop Jr., and all the others who left at the same time may soon be sending that same message to their folks.

Dear Editor:

I thought I'd drop a few lines to everyone who reads "Letters to the Boys" for it's been a long time since I've written. I guess it was during my last couple weeks of basic at McClellan. Since then I haven't received tha paper hut I guess it will catch up with me as my mail is doing. This army sure can move a person around pretty fast when it wants to. Not so many months ago I was home for five days and really enjoyed it.

Eight months ago I was just a rookie with a brand new uniform and nice shiny buttons. The place was Fort Custer. I, the rookie, didn't know what was ahead but I know now.

How I dreaded the thought of being a foot soldier. But now I don't. I doubt if I would change it for anything. Not this "dough". A man's army is the infantry. Ask anyone who's been in a good outfit.

With the March winds blowing this letter will probably get to you so will say—so long.

"Mitch"

Pvt. Ralph Mitchell
Somewhere in Sunny Italy.

Thanks for your letter, Mitch. We had quite lost track of you in your travels. From Charlevoix to Alabam' to Italy is a bit of mileage. We know your friends will be glad to hear about you.

Ill Fellows:

Living in the jungles of New Guinea with your home in a fox hole gives a fellow one H--- of a lot of time to think of better days. It's been two years now since we left the U. S. and three years since I was last home.

Received an old paper today and was glad to see Klp and his men still winning games. By the looks of the score Boyne was a pushover. Geel it's surprising how long high school days live with one. I've played many a ball game and run many a mile over and over again right here in my fox hole.

In reading the paper over I see names of people living in Charlevoix I've never heard of before. The fellows playing basketball were just little kids when I left.

I can just see Charlie Bellinger at a ball game. I'll bet he's a proud dad. And as one of the Bergmanns once said, "Bergmanns will come, Bergmanns will go, but there'll always be a Bergmann".

I would sure like to be at the annual basketball banquet. I'll bet five to one that Mr. Lewis will tell the story of the old 'Opera House' and how the ball went through the window and floated out to Lake Michigan. And how someone swam half way to Beaver Island to get it. (What a game!) I wonder who went after the ball?

This will be my last letter to your for some time. Things are getting hot and rough again and there won't be much time to write.

Ran into a fellow by the name of Keets from Boyne who had just come from the States. He says he has a sister by the name of Mrs. Johnson living in Charlevoix. It sure was swell to meet him and get the low-down on things at home.

They say the government is still using the alphabet to keep out of trouble and that after the war there will be some changes made. Just keep the old home town like it was — that's good enough for me.

It's said in the infantry that home is where you make your bed but as yet I know of only one home and that's Charlevoix — it's the best.

As Ever, Ed.

P. S. — The Marines get all the publicity,
The infantry has none at all,
But when it comes to fighting
It's the infantry that's on the ball.

Sgt. Edward S. Radle.

Too bad you weren't here this week, Ed. The basketball banquet you mentioned was held Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hanley received the following letter from their son, A. L. (Bruce) Henley Rd. M 2/c recently:

Dear Folks:

Have a few minutes to myself so decided to write home, although I don't know exactly what to write about. We just got through with 'chow' and I drank so much milk I'm miserable. Milk in a rare treat to us and when we get to civilization where we are able to get it we make pigs of ourselves. Of course, we have powdered milk all the time but it just doesn't compare with the fresh.

It seems that the Australians live on milk, ten und mutton. Any town you stop at here is full of what they call 'milk bars' where they sell ice cream and have teas. Don't know what they would do if they had their tea taken from them.

They sure have kept us busy since we came back from leave. There was a lot of work to be done before everything was ship shape again and it seems as though they try to do it all in one day (censored) really a lot of fun when we all get to working and kidding each other. Most of our talk is about things we did when on leave. Don't believe I'll ever forget them. Sure had a swell time.

Yesterday I had some pictures taken. I'm supposed to pick them up tomorrow and if they're ok I'll send you one in the next letter. Zimmerman, a fellow who works with me, has a camera and we took some snapshots too. Can't get them developed for a week though.

I'm writing this letter on Red Cross paper. Take it from me it's one of the swellest outfits ever. All over the world they have canteens for us Yanks and what they don't do for us isn't worth mentioning. Here are a few things they do: get rooms for us, arrange dates, hold dances, feed us, schedule sightseeing trips, furnish golf clubs and free tickets for the movies and sports of all kinds. I used to think it was a racket but I know differently now. So if they're around getting funds now, I want you to chip in for me. They saved me a hundred and fifty bucks not so long ago. I'll tell you about it sometime.

Must go on watch soon so will close for now. How is everything on the home front? It's fine over here.

Bruce.

Ed: Thanks for the good words about the Red Cross. Everyone likes to know that their contribution is really being used for our men overseas. To those who have not already contributed, let this be a reminder.

Miss Henrietta Gravuer, former manager of the Belvedere Hotel, who is now somewhere in Australia with the Red Cross sends the following letter to the editor and friends here:

Dear Editor:

There isn't any comparison between "dear old Charlevoix" and Australia, altho' there are many beautiful spots here. I think I have had a better opportunity to see more of the country than the majority of our workers. I have been on headquarters staff for eight months and have traveled all the time by plane except for one time. Then I met Carlton Smith and during our conversation I learned he is from Charlevoix. Of all the lads I knew in the States I have never come across anyone I knew. It seemed good to converse with him because he knew Charlevoix.

My work is very interesting. Being Supervisor of Clubs and Consultant of Food, I visit all the Red Cross clubs and rest areas. The hard part is to teach the Aussies the "American" way to prepare food. We have a big job to do for our boys and I am glad to be able to be a part of it.

At present I am at one of the seaside clubs. Some of the beaches are lovely. I have never minded the heat as much as I do here. There is nothing quaint about this country. Sydney is very much like the cities in the States. Of course, Queensland is somewhat different.

I greatly appreciated the "Greetings" letter from the Klwanis club; also the pretty Christmas card from the Gold Star Mothers. I want them all to know that these messages helped to brighten the days. That goes for the Courier too. I do enjoy reading it and thank you for bringing it to me.

There are so many things we would like to mention but "Mr. Censor" says "No". It will be fun to tell my friends the many interesting experiences when I get back to the States. Please remember me most kindly to all my friends.

Sincerely always,
Peg.

Ed: Thank you Miss Gravuer, for your grand letter. Such wonderful reports come from the boys on the work the Red Cross clubs are doing that we are glad to know that someone from Charlevoix is taking part in it.

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

VOLUME 49 NUMBER 14 EIGHT PAGES — CHARLEVOIX COURIER, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 5, 1944 — PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

PARKSIDE ADDS NEW FEATURES

POPULAR RESTAURANT NOW GREATLY IMPROVED

Remodeling Of Second Floor Has Provided Several Private Dining Rooms

Next to climate, scenery and the presence of bodies of water, nothing possibly, contributes more largely to the popularity of a resort community than attractive places to eat, where food is well-selected and well-cooked and service is prompt and efficient.

With this idea in mind, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin McFarland, proprietors of the Parkside Dining Room, are viewing with satisfaction the results of their labors, during the past year, to make the Parkside one of the most up-to-date restaurants north of Grand Rapids. In this, they seem to have succeeded.

The McFarlands bought the building last year from Miss Edith Ilmir, of Alton, Illinois, and have made extensive improvements in it to permit of wide expansion of their business.

On the main floor, the location of the entrance has been changed to include the stairway leading to what were once the dental and medical offices of Drs. Young and Armstrong on the second floor. Clear-view side windows give an unimpeded vision both ways on Bridge Street. The lunch counter and cooler have been transfered to the north side of the room, thus affording much more space near the entrance.

The entire second floor of the building has been turned into connecting dining rooms and a main banquet room, each of which may be served from the hallway without disturbing the privacy of the others. These rooms are attractively furnished with thick carpeting, flowered drapes at the windows and venetian blinds. Furniture is new throughout and the tables are furnished with linen. The main banquet room, which will accommodate 40 guests, with 10 more in a connecting room, is located in the front of the building and has opening off from it, on the left, as one enters, a pantry, lounge and office. Two club dining rooms in the back part of the building, designed for small parties, seat 16 people each. Mr. McFarland estimates that the total seating capacity of the building is around 200.

The restaurant and dining rooms will be open through the year, for the benefit of local people as well as the summer trade. The Parkside advertisement for Easter dinners appears on another page of this issue.

The motorship, Mary Margaret, with Capt. Leroy Allers in charge, left Charlevoix on Sunday, enroute to the shipyards at Two Rivers, Wis., where the boat will undergo a general overhauling and be painted, prior to going on the regular Beaver Island run. RICHARD KIRBY IS PRISONER OF WAR

Nephew of Mrs. Percy Edwards Interned In Germany

Pvt. Richard Kirby, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kirby, of Boyne City, who was reported missing in action in Italy on December 4, has been heard from in a letter, through the Red Cross, to his parents. He had been missing since November 4 and no word had been heard concerning him, until his family received the letter, last week, which had been written early in January, saying he was a German prisoner. He had entered the service in January, 1943 and had gone overseas in September.

He has a brother, Pvt. William Kirby, in the army serving in New Guinea and a sister, Reva, who recently entered the Navy Nurses Corps. Another sister, Mrs. Marshall Sayles, lives in Detroit. His aunt, Mrs. Percy Edwards, lives in Charlevoix.

ELECTION SHOWS LITTLE INTEREST

EVEN BOND ISSUE FAILED TO BRING OUT VOTERS

Measure, However, Carried By A Majority of 175 Votes — 233 For, 58 Against Charlevoix's spring election was held here, Monday, with a light vote cast.

There being no contest for any of the offices, principal interest centers in the $16,000 bond issue for the purchase of land for airport purposes. This proposal carried by a vote of 233 to 58.

The city officers were re-elected and are: mayor, Robert Bridge; city clerk, Ray Hamilton; treasurer, Nelle Hammond. In the wards, Karl Erber was elected alderman and Angus Fochtman supervisor in the first ward; Dr. Douglas C. Nettleton, alderman, and Arthur Bergeon, supervisor, in the second ward; W. E. Goss, alderman, and C. B. Meggison, supervisor, in the third ward.

Joseph Howard was elected justice of the peace for the unexpired term, ending July 4, 1946, and also constable in the first ward. Clarence Heiso was elected constable in the second ward and, in the third ward, Carl Bogart and Glen Rose tied, with one vote each for the office of constable.

Full official details on the vote will appear in next week's issue of the Courier.

ANNOUNCES NEW BOAT CONTRACT

Foster Concern Goes Into Heavy Production On "LH" Type

Foster Boat Company has announced this week that they had been awarded a sizable contract for the construction of additional boats for the U. S. Navy.

The new type boat will require several months of heavy production to maintain delivery schedule as most of the boats covered by the contract are to be in transit before the end of July. The craft is known as a "Line Handling" boat and are to be used as auxiliaries to the larger ships of the navy.

Running Hot, Sitting Cold, at Army Climatic Tests

BROTHERS CANNOT "TEAM" IN NAVY

Nephews Of Local Residents Are Disappointed By Ruling

The following article is from a recent Associated Press dispatch and was written about the nephews of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Allard and Leslie Howe, of this city.

"New Orleans. The navy broke up a brother gunnery team last Friday and the three Howe boys, Eugene, Loren and Lorence Howe, of Granger, Ind., didn't like it. The boys, sons of Mrs. Violet Howe, are members of a navy gun crew on board a cargo vessell. Eugene 21, and his twin brothers, 20, Loren and Lorence, enlisted in December, 1942, and went through boot camp at Great Lakes. They later attended armed guard school at Gulfport, Miss. and finally were able to ship together as a gun crew. Eugene was a loader, Loren and Lorence served as pointer and trainer.

That was before the five Sullivan brothers were lost in the sinking of an American cruiser. The new ruling is that the brothers must sail on different ships. This is the first time the Howe boys have run up against the navy ruling and they are a little wistful that brother, Harold, who is now at Great Lakes for boot training, 'won't ever get to work with the Howe Team'."

"A" FLAG AWARDED GERBER PRODUCTS

Given By WFA In Recognition Of Wartime Food Co-operation

The Achievement "A" Award flag of the War Food Administration will be presented to officials and workers of the Gerber Products Company at a ceremony to be held at the plant in Fremont at 5:00 p. m., Friday, April 14, Angus Doane, State Supervisor of the Office of Distribution, WFA, announced today. The Award is the first approved by the WFA for Michigan food processors.

The flag, destined to fly over the plant during the next twelve months, will be presented to representatives of the management and workers in a short but impressive ceremony, carried out in accordance with the wartime character of the Award. A high-ranking officer of the United States Navy will make the actual presentation. During the ceremony a token presentation of "A" Award pins will be made to representatives of the workers and management of the plant by an official of the War Food Administration.

"Plant officials, employees and invited guests will join in paying tribute to the noteworthy achievement," Mr. Doane stated. "The Achievement 'A' Awards are intended as a tribute by our government to management and workers of the Fremont plant, who have cooperated so efficiently in the wartime food program. The Awards are significant of the thought that united effort is needed in winning the war — the thought that is in the minds of all patriots," Mr. Doane said.

C. L. Bolander, Deputy Commissioner of agriculture for the State of Michigan, was the principal speaker. He pointed out that the 190,000 farmers in the state had placed Michigan in eighth place in the nation with their 1943 efforts. Motion pictures, in color and sound, of many of the agricultural products, were shown.

SUPPER PROCEEDS TO BUY HOSPITAL BEDS

Blue Star Mothers Busy On Fine Plan To Ease Crippled

Blue Star Mothers will hold a supper at the Odd Fellow hall, at six p. m., on Thursday, April 13. The purpose of this supper is to raise money for hospital beds.

These beds — while the regulation hospital type, with adjustable head and foot — are not hospital equipment, but are intended to be loaned to wounded and convalescing servicemen for use in their homes, in case they need this special type of bed.

There will be no charge for the use of these beds, except their transportation back and forth from where they are stored. They will also be available for the general public — servicemen, of course, taking precedence over civilians. Only restriction connected with their use will be the requirement that the bedding be cleaned and returned in good condition.

CHARLES CAREY IS DEAD AT EIGHTY

Resident Of This City For Past Sixty Years—English Born

Charles Carey, 80, retired painter and decorator and resident of this city for the past 60 years, died at his home in Charlevoix at midnight, Monday, following several years of ill health.

Mr. Carey was born in London, England, on December 22, 1863. At the age of six he came to Canada with his parents and lived at Uxbridge and Goodwood, Ontario. On December 25, 1883, he married Emma Alcock at Goodwood and a year later they came to Charlevoix to make their home. Besides being a painter and a decorator, Mr. Carey had at times operated a grocery store and bakery. He was a life member of the Masonic lodge and was a member of the Baptist church. He had served two terms as alderman on the city council. Mrs. Carey died on June 2, 1939.

Lest We Forget

Reviewing a Bit of Charlevoix's History Through the Time-Worn Pages of Old Courier Files.

Fifty-Eight Years Ago

Thursday, April 1, 1886

(From the Files of The Charlevoix Journal)

The tug Anspach was frisking about on Round Lake on Monday (giddy little thing.)

(County seat rumpus still going on, with Boyne City trying desperately to wrest the coveted prize from East Jordan.)

(Webster's Dictionary was being widely advertised and, we presume, quite extensively sold. What a debt we owe to our ancestors—nothing ever comes in quite as handy as Webster's to boost Junior up an inch or two in his high chair or give the missus that extra oomph to reach the top shelf in the kitchen closet.)

Steele's big store in Advance took fire on Saturday, while the citizen's were nearly all at a caucus meeting. Parties from Boyne saw the fire and went to assist in removing goods. The post office and telephone office were both located here. The greater part of the mail was saved, but the building is a total loss.

The Petoskey post office, last night, distributed a pouch full of mail fished up from the steamer, Oregon, lately sunk off Sandy Hook. The matter was still wet and smelled of salt water.

Our prominent and practical machinists, Washburn and Ackert, are rushed with boat repairing, these days; and, in fact, they have had a large run of this work all winter.

Capt. Vanderhoof tells us that he will run his boat, the Thos. Friant, on Little Traverse Bay and the Pine Lake route, the same as last season.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Dear Editor: I have just finished reading the Courier for the third time and have enjoyed it very much. Sorry I couldn't write sooner and thank you and the CSO for making it possible for the "GI" to receive the great little newspaper from Michigan.

I've been in Louisiana now for the past five rainy months. With maneuvers over, all we do now is police the area and do road marches, which get me down. With a full infantry pack, my No. 10 clodhoppers, a steel helmet which hold five gallons of water and my M1, in weather up to 95 degrees at mid-day, I did 18 miles Thursday and 25 Friday and Saturday. All I did was water my barking dogs.

In the near future, we hope to do nine miles of cross country hiking in two hours. (We went 25 miles in 7½ hours) Only had 17 blisters on my web feet — not bad for one day.

Hoping to stay on your mailing list for a while, I am

Sincerely,
Bennie.

A card from John J. Woods, MM1c, U. S. Navy, informs us that he is back in the hospital and his address for the present, is Ward 49 U. S. Naval Hospital, Seattle. He expects to be there about four months and would like to hear from some of his friends here. Would also enjoy seeing anyone from Michigan who happens to be in or near Seattle as the days are long and he is lonesome.

A V-Mail letter to us from Cpl. Edwin Gregory, who is some place in the south Pacific, tells us he is "receiving the Courier regularly, by that I mean several copies once a month." Really enjoy them for up to date newspapers are as rare as fresh eggs. Heard you are having a mild winter in

At one time Oscar. Olander, commissioner of Michigan State Police, knew every employee — State Trooper or clerk — by first name. Not not so today.

Loss of police personnel and clerks has been heavy, due to the war.

Driving his car to the office one rainy morning recently, the commissioner stopped to give a "lift" to a girl who was walking south on Harrison road, East Lansing, towards the Michigan headquarters of the State Police.

"Where are you going?" asked Olander, courteously.

"I work at the State Police headquarters," the girl answered. "Started work there three weeks ago. And how about you?"

"I work at headquarters too," said Olander.

"How long have you been there?" asked the girl.

"Twenty-five years", replied the commissioner, who was still unidentified.

Whereupon the girl looked Olander over with a critical eye and snapped: "You're nuts!"

Dr. William DeKleine, Michigan's new public health commissioner, is no advocate of nudism. However, he does believe that the modern woman's attitude towards clothing is far more sensible than grandmother's ideas about multiple-petticoats.

Years ago when Dr. DeKleine was public health commissioner in Flint, he had occasion to call at the home of a mother whose young baby was near death due to what was then called "summer complaint."

It was a hot, sultry summer day. The baby was in her crib, wearing enough clothes sufficient for Upper Peninsula night in February, and obviously suffering from the heat.

"I'd like to ask a favor of you," said Dr. DeKleine to the mother. "This baby will probably not get well. Let's permit it to die in comfort. Take the baby out on the front porch, put her on a clean pillow, and remove all these heavy bedclothes."

The mother, in sorrow, complied. The baby promptly went to sleep and — much to the mother's surprise and happiness improved steadily and got well.

Louis A. Weil, editor of the Port Huron Times-Herald, relates a timely yarn about our global war and the Irish. Here goes: "It takes a real Irishman, with his keen and delightful sense of humor, to tell an Irish story and he is really at his best when he is putting the bee right on the Irish themselves. That's why I always get a great kick out of Cliff O'Sullivan, who turns them out to perfection. Cliff's latest is of the two Irishmen discussing the war. 'Yes,' said one, 'tis really a global war, with the people of every country involved now except two —those cowardly, yellow-bellied Swedes and those fine, brave, God-fearing people of Ireland!'"

Under the present state constitution of Michigan, if any county officials want to have the form of county government "reformed" or "modernized" — or, to phrase it without suggestive implications, "changed" — then the voters of the county must obtain consent of the majority of the people of Michigan at the ballot box before the county can proceed with a program.

Such has been the case of Wayne county, the Detroit metropolitan governmental unit. A proposed "home rule" plan was defeated by voters of Michigan two years ago, and it is now being revived for ballot consideration of the people of Michigan next November.

Is this merely a Detroit vs Upstate issue? There is growing evidence that such is not the case. Late in February, 1944, the board of supervisors of Delta county met at Escanaba and adopted a resolution, addressed to Governor Kelly and other state officials and representatives, proposing that the people of Delta county be granted the constitutional right to modernize their form of county government by a majority vote.

Does such a courageous request by the Delta county supervisors envision a radical discard of so-called "horse-and-buggy" machinery of local government? Would it deprive township officials, for example, of their time-honored prerogatives? Would it create a "county dictatorship" at the county-seat, depriving voters in distant townships of their home-rule rights? And would the county supervisors be stripped of power under some scheme for a "county manager," a new dictator?

Remember that you are now reading about Delta county — not big, bad Detroit. Clint Dunathan, writer in the Escanaba Daily Press, points out that "the authority of the county supervisors, elected representatives of the people, would be increased rather than decreased in any county government reform so far proposed and that the power of township officials would remain untouched. He presents five possibilities for home-rule improvements in Delta county government:

"1—By making some of the county elective offices appointive, the board of supervisors would bring under its direct control county departments which now operate independently and without coordination.

"2—The supervisors control over county government would be strengthened, and economies and efficiencies could be established which are now impossible.

"3—Under a county "home rule" plan, such as is enjoyed by Michigan cities, the people of Delta county and other counties in the state could decide by majority vote whether they wanted to reform their county government. Under the present state constitutional laws, this right is denied to the people of the counties.

"4—Should the people of the county approve, the board of supervisors could hire a county manager to handle administrative work for the county. A county manager could be fired by the board if his services were unsatisfactory.

"5—And last of all, nothing so far discussed locally would even indicate that township government would be altered. It would continue in its present form."

The Michigan Institute of Local Government, of which State Treasurer D. Hale Brake is chairman, was created to provide a clearing house whereby all local governments, the grass-roots of our American democracy, may intelligently solve their own problems and thus halt the ever-increasing threat of centralized bureaucracy at Lansing and Washington.

This threat of bureaucracy has been nourished, too often, by the failure of home governments to cope with the fast-moving procession of human needs in the economic see-saw of business and industry and the willingness of home officials to turn over responsibility for taxation to state and federal government.

Home rule and responsibility should go hand in hand. The fact that the Delta county board of supervisors has suggested "home rule" changes in county government may put the Wayne county movement in an entirely different light. Certainly there is much merit in the belief that government, the same as industry, should be strengthened and improved at every opportunity to serve the needs of the people with utmost efficiency.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS TAKE HIGHER TOLL

According to figures just released by Commissioner Oscar G. Olander of the Michigan State Police traffic deaths in January doubled those of the same period last year. A breakdown by months since the upward curve shows a 9 per cent increase in October, 11 per cent in November, 54 per cent in December and 100% in Jan.

A disregard of wartime conservation restrictions resulting in an increase in mileage and speed, and a letting down in safe driving cautions appear to be the most important factors accounting for the recent increase in traffic deaths. In addition all cars are one year older, and an increasing number on the road lack adequate maintenance to be operated with maximum safety. Too, more persons are walking, a great many of whom fail to recognize pedestrian traffic hazards.

This upturn in traffic deaths should serve as a warning to the public Olander said of the dire threat to our war effort that lies in this growing disregard for wartime safety measures.

The "A" Award

for Feeding America's Babies

SOME TIME this month, on a date to be announced, your Government, through the War Food Administration, will honor the men and women of the Fremont plant of Gerber Products Company with the "A" Award—for outstanding achievement in the production and processing of food for America's babies.

By this award, the first in the State of Michigan, the Government pays tribute to the importance of baby food in our Nation—all out for war. By honoring the men and women who make baby food, this award highlights the vital importance of the well-being of our babies—the young citizens who will inherit the better America of tomorrow.

The job of producing the huge quantities of baby food needed to care for a record birth rate was not done without difficulty—nor is the "A" Award easily won.

The "A" Award to the men and women of the Gerber Products Company who worked so willingly and faithfully speaks for more than a job well done. It also implies the confidence that those who earned it will carry on with the same high devotion to the job of helping to feed America's babies.

For this award must continue to be won every day on our production lines. This year, with many of our men and women going into the Armed Services, the job will be bigger for those of us serving on the home front. That means greater effort and the complete cooperation of every man and woman, whether working full time or part-time, who helped win this award.

Michigan. You should see how mild it is here — cool at night but roasting in the daytime. The birds stay up all night and do they make a racket. Some different from Hawaii. Have made a collection of seashells and sent them home.

I felt quite honored to have my name on the Honor Roll in Charlevoix. I was inducted at Traverse City, but am a Charlevoix man at heart. Be seeing you some doy.

Ed.

All Hands of the Courier:

Just waiting for taps, so will drop you a line to let you know that I am still kicking and I am very sorry that I have neglected to write you, but will try and do better in the near futuro.

I have been receiving the Courier right along and want to thank all the people in Charlevoix and the USO for making it possible for us to get the paper. I know that the others in the service and in all parts of the world as myself are always waiting to read the news from the good old home, and find out what is going on back there.

I suppose they are catching a lot of nice big yellow belly perch now. Sure wish I could drop a line in Round lake and snag a few fresh water fish for a change. We do a lot of fishing here but we get mostly barracudas and only the natives eat them, but, if I stay here much longer, I guess I will be eating them also.

The way I hear and read, if the draft board keeps up drafting everyone up there they had better watch out as they will probably be the next ones. I hear Pat Curtis is going to start cutting meat for the Army, well he will sure have his hands full, as there are a lot of guys to cut pork chops for, and I don't mean maybe.

Well there goes taps, so guess I had better close and get some sack time. So will say,

So Long,
Dick
Richard John Hull.

Ed. Don't know whether Dick means the fish or the board will be drafted.

The following is a letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Mont Withers from their son, S/Sgt. Bruce Withers, serving in the south Pacific:

Dear Folks, Safe at "home" once more. I really had myself a time when I went south for parts for my boat, expecting to be gone about a week and staying six weeks. I gained almost ten pounds down there and really felt fine.

Was I ever the happy soldier yesterday — I received 31 letters and, two days before that, 17. How about that? Was glad to hear from "Stub" Kipke. Sure wish I could get back there to get in on some of that hunting. I'll bet Bob was really mad the time he went to shoot at the fox and a car came down the road.

Have I ever been running into the trouble with my boat since I've been back. Two gears in the V-drive went to pieces on me and that's what I went south for. Also brought back a new Chrysler 8 and V-drive for another boat. We went to work on it, installed the gears and then put it in the boat. I never had such a time in my life — working and sweating. After two days of twisting and turning and what not, trying to line the propeller shaft with the V-drive, I discovered that when the gears went out of the V-drive it bent the shaft just enough so I got one H—— of a vibration when I started the motor. Oh well, I'll get it fixed.

While I was south, I had quite a time playing golf and riding horseback. One time, at a swell bathing beach, four of us had quite a time, visiting the pub and eating nice juicy steaks. Later, when we went riding, I mounted and kicked the broomtail I was riding and how he took off. I stuck to him — don't ask me how — and had a dandy ride up and down the beach. I caught it when I got back. The horse's sides were heaving so, and the guy who rented him to me all but made me buy the nag.

Gee, it's been terrifically hot here since I got back. —too hot to do anything and I have so much to do. Oh well, sweating out a trip home before too long.

The darn rats dug a hole in the floor, under my bed, during my absence and last nite they kept me awake almost all night. I could hear them coming around corners, three rooms away, rustle under my bed and disappear. And the mosquitos! I had more inside my net than on the outside.

Capt. Bud Rauch, from Cadillac, one of my cronies at Western, dropped in on me yesterday and again today. I ran into him at Moresby when I first came, almost 17 months ago. He went south with a new outfit and is just getting back up again.

Well, folks, the 'mossies' are starting to get the best of me. Don't worry about me, I'm fine, getting along swell and hope to get back before much longer.

Bruce.

A typical illustration of the sudden sweep of righteous belligereney which suddenly transformed America into a hard hitting war machine is a group of women who guard the Allis-Chalmers supercharger plant in Milwaukee, Wis. Before Pearl Harbor, these women probably would have been shocked at the sight of a gun. Now they are crack shots with pistols, shotguns, and tommy guns, as they and other patriotic women guard our vital war plants.

Also, the federal nursery at Watersmeet, Michigan is offering for sale transplants of red pine, jack pine and white spruce at $4.50 per 1000. The conservation department and the Michigan State college also have abundant quantities for sale.

This should be a wonderful opportunity for the public to buy trees this spring. Your county agent has order blanks and will be glad to furnish you with further information.

H. E. Extension Groups Back Sewing Machine Schools

The home economics extension groups are keenly interested in a series of three one-day sewing machine schools scheduled for April 11, 12 and 13. Mr. A. J. Bell, specialist in agriculture engineering, will be in charge and will show the owners how to oil, grease and adjust all makes and models of sewing machines.

Since this is sponsored by the various home economics extension groups in the county the group members will have first choice in having the machines worked on. Latest information, leads us to think that there will be room for two or three machines to be brought in by the public. The first school on Tuesday, April 11, will be held in the Marion Center grange hall, starting at 10:00 a.m. The East Jordan group will meet in the American Legion hall on Wednesday, April 12, also at 10 a.m. The Boyne City group will have the school on Thursday, April 13, in the Boyne City Library.

For reservations phone Mrs. Alice Willis, Charlevoix, Mrs. Ida Kinsey, East Jordan or Mrs. Constance Van Housen, Boyne City, for your reservation. No machines will be worked on if brought in after lunch and the owner of each machine is expected to be present all day to work on the machine. Each person should bring a pie tin, a spool of number 40 or 50 thread, a quarter yard of muslin, cleaning cloths, a pint of kerosene and old newspapers to protect the floor. The entire machine must be brought in — not just the head. The entire public is invited to attend each of the three days for the general discussion at 1:30 p. m. If interested, contact your nearest leader above mentioned.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

"Praise the Lord We Ain't Agoin' Fishin'"

Willie Wells was always fond of fishing. Now he writes from somewhere overseas:

"There's a song the fellers sing, goes: 'Praise the Lord, we ain't a-goin' fishin'—and I guess it's so. But you know, dad, sometimes I sure wish I were back fishing for trout in Seward's Creek again."

And I guess that's the way all our soldiers feel. They're fighting a war—and they mean to fight it to a finish—till they can come home to the little pleasures that they've missed so much—the sweet feel of a trout rod . . . a pleasant glass of beer with friends . . . the smell of Mom's fresh baking from the kitchen . . .

From where I sit, we folks at home have an important obligation—to keep intact the little things that they look forward to . . . from the trout rod waiting in the corner to the beer that's cooling in the ice box. Don't you agree?

Pickles have gone to war

Uncle Sam is counting on you to plant more in '44!

"Out on the rough Atlantic . . . or away on the vast Pacific . . . or down on the blue waters of the Gulf . . . the Navy ships run into some pretty rough weather. And it's not an unusual thing for both officers and men to stop by a large tin can that's brought out of the galley at the sign of very bad weather. What's in it? It's full of . . . yes . . . pickles . . . pickles for the sailors to keep them from getting sea-sick. Ask any seasoned sailor and he'll tell you it's a true story."

Excerpt from United States Navy's Radio Salute to H. J. Heinz Company and Heinz men and women.

UNCLE SAM needs more pickles for the fighting men of the "seven seas," and the men who fight on land and in the air. In addition to their zestful role as appetizers, pickles have a definite nutritional value because they are important sources of vitamins A and B and of minerals, salts and acids.

There are plenty of profit-making opportunities in pickles, too. Here's why:

1 The highest prices in history will be paid for pickles, giving growers an opportunity for record profits.

2 Pickles are an "in-between" crop and are paid for before the farmer receives cash from other crops.

3 Because pickles are an essential food, the government allows fertilizer containing nitrogen which permits maximum production per acre.

4 Pickles take less from the soil than most other crops.

Our field men are now prepared to contract for pickle acreage in this district.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman

The Cleveland Diesel Engine Division of General Motors

Whenever my legislative duties permit, I endeavor to visit our war production plants. I have seen things which cause me on the one hand to marvel and on the other to learn the partial reason for our successes on our many fighting fronts.

A few weeks ago, I had the privilege of visiting the Diesel engine division of the General Motors at Cleveland. The story of this plant is really the story of one man, George W. Cordington, vice president of General Motors and general manager of the Cleveland Diesel engine division. It is a story which goes back almost 30 years; 30 long years of industrial pioneering of heart-breaking effort, which only came into its own when our nation stood with her back to the wall.

The first Diesel engine was completed at that plant in 1913. In 1934 the first Diesel engine of American design, built in Cleveland was installed in a U. S. Navy submarine. In the years between 1934 and 1940, the year in which we seriously started our defense program, these same men were working diligently in perfecting the powerful engines which today are playing such an important role in the war.

Came 1940, and every industry in our country was called upon to put forth the maximum effort to insure the necessary materials we would need in event of war.

In size, Cleveland Diesel today is almost three times that of 1940. Its plant personnel has been increased 787.73 percent. The men who were recruited for war work were not highly trained technicians for the most part, but they were the corner grocery boy, the salesman, the farmer — in fact, any man willing to put his shoulder to the wheel and help in the gigantic task that lay before our country. This is true of the personnell of every one of our war plants.

Labor conditions in this plant are excellent. Their record is not one single man-hour of work lost because of labor difficulties. George Codrington knows his men personally and they know him and each respects the other's responsibility.

Sub-contracting Employed

As is the case in war industry in general, the marvel of meeting production schedules lies not only in the work done in that plant at Cleveland, but in its extensive sub-contracting program.

The initial order for defense material was received from the Navy in June, 1940. It became evident that Cleveland Diesel engine division would be called upon to produce an unprecedented number of engines to meet the demand. Expansion was the order of the day. The Navy needed engines, and the only answer was subcontracting. Within one year from the date of the first defense order, production had been stepped up 12 times. By the end of 1942, the figure had increased 24 times and at the end of 1943, production was, unbelievably, 40 times that of 1940.

The responsibility of a prime contractor does not end with the allocation of an order. The prime contractor, as was the case with Cleveland Diesel, had to see to it many times that buildings were built for the subcontractor. Often employment problems had to be straightened out and, likewise, subcontractors needed assistance in the procurement of material.

As I mentioned earlier, the force behind this great production effort of Cleveland Diesel is Geo. W. Cordington. I can best illustrate this by a story that was told me by one of his associates. It seems that the Navy was in need of a particular type of vessel but it was difficult to find a builder. Mr. Codrington was asked for suggestions and his answer was, "I'll build them myself". The record states — the boats were built in record time.

Cleveland Diesel's record of production is one of which America can be proud. 1,393 vessels, powered with Diesel engines and manufactured at this plant in Cleveland, were accepted by the Navy in 1943.

When I left Cleveland Diesel, I was greatly impressed with what I had seen. I was proud of what American industry is doing on the home front; of what private initiative had developed prior to 1940 and I vowed right then and there that when this war has been won; private initiative must again be permitted to work and solve our post-war problems; it has met every challenge in the past; it must not be allowed to be stifled by Government as is now the plan of governmental theorists.

Announcement of Candidacy

I am announcing my candidacy for re-election. You made it possible for me to represent our district for three terms. It has been my aim, since coming to Washington, to keep you completely informed on items of national interest through the medium of this column, sent in the form of weekly news letters to every paper — weekly and daily — in our district and, for the past four years, through weekly radio broadcasts, originally sent over Station WSOO at Sault Ste. Marie but, since early 1943, also over Station WMAM, Marinette. You have, at all times, known your Congressman's position on matters of governmental policy and controversial legislation.

To all of you who have solicited personal assistance, I have endeavored to give conscientious, efficient and as prompt service as possible. It takes time to acquire the necessary experience, contacts and the "know-how" to become of real value to one's district here in Washington. In the past six years I have acquired that knowledge and hope, in your opinion, my record confirms such conviction.

In Italy, U. S., British and New Zealand troops took a deep breath before resuming operations against stubborn German forces entrenched in the rocky rubble of Cassino, and other Nazi units ringing the Anzio beachhead, 18 miles below Rome.

Allied Occupation

What is to be Germany's fate after the war?

Much asked, London's influential Sunday Observer claimed to have the answer to the question, reporting an alleged digest of the Allies' plans for occupying the reich after the war.

According to the Observer, the British would occupy all of northwestern and central Germany to the river Oder, and Russia would take over the rest of the territory to the east. The U. S. would occupy the southwest and central part of the reich, including Bavaria and Saxony.

To prevent anarchy before establishing order, the three powers would also control Austria.

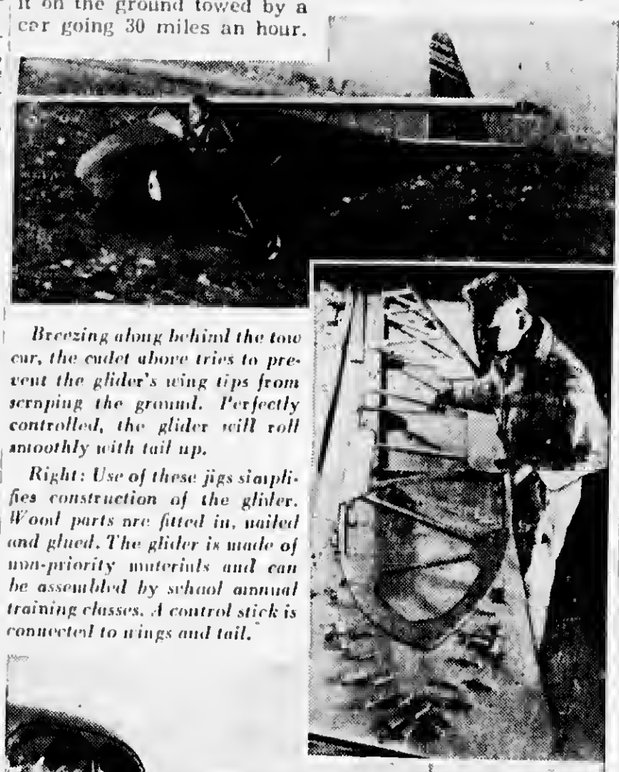
Juvenile Fliers Learn Tricks Of Air Currents on Ground

Schoolboys may be too young to fly real airplanes for their country, but they want to learn the principles of aviation in a manner which approaches the thrill of the real thing. A California glider company and Aeronautical Engineer Volmar Jensen have created a preflight glider which brings youngsters plenty of thrills and a basic flying technique without risking their necks. With the glider, schoolboys learn to keep a steady course through rushing air currents. They do it on the ground towed by a car going 30 miles an hour.



Breezing along behind the tow car, the cadet above tries to prevent the glider's wing tips from scraping the ground. Perfectly controlled, the glider will roll smoothly with tail up.

Right: Use of these jigs simplifies construction of the glider. Wood parts are fitted in, nailed and glued. The glider is made of non-priority materials and can be assembled by school annual training classes. A control stick is connected to wings and tail.

Ready to match his technique against air currents, the student, above, informs the automobile driver that he is ready. Tow car pulls away and the 100 foot line is jerked taut.

The glider zooms past an assembly of fellow students. Despite rushing air, it is level. The operator is controlling its balance, something that any pilot must master before he takes to the air.

Below: Volmar Jensen attaches the rudder to the tail. He built several safety devices into the craft to eliminate the usual risks of preliminary glider instruction. Any ideas that the non-ascending gliders were "sissified" were soon dispelled. It was quite difficult to keep a level course at a speed of 30 miles an hour. But most of them soon mastered this technique.

Wings and rudder are removable for transportation purposes.

Keep 'em firing—with junk! Old newspapers at Courier office.

FEED WHEAT: April Allocations

To relieve the tight feed situation and make up for the order for setting aside 35 per cent of corn stocks at elevators for processing, the War Food Administration was reported to have increased feed wheat allocations for April to 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels.

WFA's decision followed revelation that Commodity Credit corporation feed wheat stocks as of March 18 totaled 113,118,000 bushels. Since last July, purchases amounted to 249,634,000 bushels.

Up to March 18, redemptions on 1942 wheat loans approximated 123,000,000 bushels, while deliveries reached 37,819,000, for a total of 160,626,000 taken off account. More than 184,151,000 bushels originally were placed under loan.

AIR TRAVEL: Seek Expansion

With interest in the airplane heightened by the war, the Civil Aeronautics board which regulates air travel has been flooded with applications to institute new routes throughout the country when peace comes.

As of recent date, applications for bringing air service to 3,631 cities and towns over 500,000 miles of route were pending before the CAB. At present, air lines serve only 366 points over 50,643 miles.

Although conceding the development of air transport after the war, many authorities have cautioned against a disorderly expansion of the industry, which might seriously jeopardize the position of existing lines without proving financially sound to new companies. On the other hand, operation of small lines to link remote centers with major routes is considered as an important step in bringing the benefits of air travel to every section.

SURPLUS GOODS: For Civilians

To dealers, jobbers, wholesalers and distributors, the offering of 5,000 surplus war items adaptable to civilian use for sale in New York was an opportunity not to be lost.

Offered by Bell Aircraft company, Eclipse Pioneer Division of Bendix Aviation corporation, Eastern Aircraft Division of General Motors corporation, Glenn L. Martin company, and Republic Aviation corporation, the 5,000 items had a value of $50,000,000 and marked the first big disposal of such goods, although the army has prepared for larger sales.

Among items quickly bought up were small metal tool boxes, stainless steel tubing, rear-view mirrors, tape and thread, tools, and several small galley stoves with built-in sinks and two electric burners.

GREAT BRITAIN: Equal Pay

Overriding the plea of the Churchill cabinet, the house of commons voted to grant women teachers the same pay as men for equal work, but then reconsidered under the prime minister's insistence.

Opposing the move was the government's board of education president, Richard A. Butler, who declared that approval would establish a precedent for the whole civil service, business and industry.

Although Churchill's own party turned against him in voting for equal pay by 117 to 118, members stressed that they were not questioning the capability of his cabinet, but were merely modifying the educational bill.

AIR AMBULANCES: Save Lives

Rapid evacuation of sick and wounded by air ranks with the sulfa drugs and blood plasma as one of the three greatest life saving measures of modern military medicine, Army Air Surgeon Maj. Gen. David Grant declared.

Reporting that 173,000 patients were evacuated during 1943, General Grant said that only 11 deaths occurred. In the African campaign, evacuations that required 22 hours by hospital train and 15 hours by motor ambulance were accomplished in one hour by air, General Grant revealed.

Disclosing that in some instances emptied cargo planes were used for evacuation, General Grant said that they completed flights of 1,000 miles or more over sea and jungle in the Pacific, unarmed and without escort.

TRACTOR TIRES

Other than in extreme hardship cases the War Food administration will not allow tractor tires to be substituted for steel tread tractors. The supply is now so low, WFA officials said, that any tires used for substitution would delay completion of new tractors.

Conversion of steel wheeled tractors is less important right now than either the replacement of wornout tires, to keep rubber tired machines in use, or the equipping of new tractors with tires, officials stated.

FEWER FAMILIES RECEIVE DEPENDENT CHILDREN AID

In February 1944, 617 persons in Charlevoix county received Old Age Assistance grants, totaling $18,141.30, or a case average of $29.40 as compared to the state average of $28.66, it was reported by Frank Fouchard, supervisor of the Charlevoix county bureau of social aid.

A year ago 596 persons in Charlevoix county received Old Age Assistance and the average grant was $22.15 as compared to a state average of $22.72.

Last month 99 families in Charlevoix county received $5,751.20 in grants for aid to dependent children and 7 persons received aid to the blind at a total cost of $227.30. The individual grant for aid to dependent children averaged $58.09. In February 1943, there were 107 families receiving this kind of assistance in Charlevoix county and the average grant was only $42.69. The average for the entire state at that time was $47.97.

The comparison of aid to dependent children case load in Charlevoix county in February, 1943, shows that there has been a decline in the number of families receiving aid for this purpose but an increase in the total amount of money granted. It is due, primarily, to the more liberal policies adopted by the state social welfare commission to meet the rising cost of living.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL TEAM CELEBRATED

On Monday evening, March 27, the girls of the Charlevoix girls basketball team enjoyed a potluck supper, which was held in the high school dining room. The tables were decorated with red crepe paper, and tiny enrd bonrd basketballs served as place cards. Streamers were hung from the light fixtures. Candles were used for lighting during the meal, producing a very delightful effect.

After the girls had finished eating, Miss Buettner, the coach, presented letters and numerals to the girls. The letters stood for the best sportsmanship and best attendance, the numerals were also for good sportsmanship, and the girls who attended less, but played well received them. The letters were 'C's and the numerals were the year in which the person who received them graduates.

Those to receive letters were: Beverly Looze, Nancy Kipke from the 7th; Jackie Louiselle, Phyllis Trimble, Mary Ann Gindos from the 8th; Sally Miller, Sylvia Welcome from the 9th; and Joan Nelson from the 11th. Numerals were presented to Sally Swinton, Marjorie Brow, Sue Webster from the 7th; Eddis Hagle from the 8th; and Audrey Byers from the 9th. Honorable mention is made of Patsy Hamilton from the 7th; Patsy Poole from the 8th; and Jane Kohler from the 9th.

The evening's program was as follows: Jane Kohler, Audrey Byers and Sally Miller sang, "Cuddle Up A Little Closer," and "Wait For Me Mary." Eddis Hagle sang "My Shining Hour," accompanied by Audrey Byers at the piano. The seventh grade girls, Sue Webster, Marjorie Brow, and Patsy Hamilton also Sally Swinton, sang "Down On A Farm In Indiana." The rest of the evening was spent in dancing. Mrs. Robert Anderson was the honored guest.

AT THE MOVIES

"In Old Oklahoma"

A tale of the rugged pioneer days of Oklahoma is brought to the screen by Republic in "In Old Oklahoma", based on Thomas Burtis' story, "War of the Wildcats," which is due to show at the Palace Theatre for two days, Saturday and Sunday, April 8th and 9th.

With John Wayne and Martha Scott in the leading roles, and Albert Dekker playing the "heavy" part, the picture starts off with an intriguing situation in the first few feet of film. Cathy Allen, played by Miss Scott, has written a book which is considered very daring and shocking for 1906 and is obliged to leave the small town where she has been teaching school. On the train, she meets Jim Gardner (Albert Dekker), husky, self-assured oil operator, traveling in his private car. She also meets Dan Somers (John Wayne), itinerant cowboy and ex-Rough Rider. Their subsequent experiences in the boom town of Sapulpa, where Jim is the big boss, are guaranteed to produce an evening's exciting entertainment.

The Coast Guard intelligence division will officially notify clothiers and retailers of naval uniforms, in the Great Lakes area, of the unlawful nature of such sales to civilians. Sales of these items are lawful only to authorized military personnel who can show proper identification. These are the provisions of a recent directive emminating from the Ninth Naval District headquarters at Great Lakes, Illinois.

Acts of Congress provide fines and imprisonment for any civilian guilty of wearing the whole uniform or any part, the decorations, or the insignia of one of the military services of the United States.

BANS TRAVELLING LIGHT FOR TRUCKS

According to a ruling that went into effect on March 27, all truck operators, proposing to move empty or partly loaded trucks a distance of 25 or more miles, must either register their equipment with the nearest ODT office or attempt to obtain loads by means of trip-lease agreements from available common carriers.

If the point from which the truck is starting is within 25 miles of an ODT district office, the operator must check with the office to obtain either a load or a clearance authority to proceed without one, or with a partial load. If the distance is greater than 25 miles from such office either the office or all available common carriers must be contacted to obtain lading along his route. Boiled down—don't pass an ODT district office without a load or a clearance.

MILLER BOAT COMPANY IN FULL PRODUCTION

Local Enterprise, Which Began As Experiment, Now Has Orders For 600,000 Net Floats

Perhaps one of the most interesting developments in Charlevoix, during the past few years, is the successful conversion of the Miller Boat Company to the uses of industry.

In the fall of 1036, Harold W. Miller, principal owner and operator of the concern which bears his name, acquired the old Oscar Mason boat shop on Round Lake with an idea of manufacturing fish net floats to keep his men busy during the off season, when they were not taking resorters out on cruises and fishing trips. This business, started as a "pot boiler", rapidly grow from an experimental stage to a point where, in the spring of 1942, Mr. Miller found it necessary to rent additional floor space in the Eckinger Fish Market building. Here, his dryer and some of the lathes are located. The main operations of the business are conducted in the old Mason boat shop, which has been equipped with some simple but very ingenious machinery.

Several Types

Manufacture of ten different types and sizes of floats, designed for seines and other varieties of nets used in lake, river or ocean fishing, keeps six men very busy. In fact, Mr. Miller states that his company already has orders for these floats sufficient to keep his plant busy for at least three months, at full capacity—in round numbers, about 600,000 floats.

Material used in the construction of these floats is mainly cedar, which comes to the shop in the form of logs and poles. Floats designed for use on minnow seines are made of popple or basswood, but the demand for these is negligible, at present. Floats are made in two main shapes — cylindrical and oval. Sizes range from 1¼ inches by 5 inches to 3 inches by 5 inches. Right now, the plant is concentrating on a 1¾ inch by 5 inch float, which is the type mostly used on the Great Lakes. One hundred thousand of these are on order.

Clever Process

As the process of manufacture is largely of Mr. Miller's invention and represents a distinct advantage over conventional methods of operation, no very detailed description is desired for publication. The logs are cut into proper length on the large circular saw, according to the size and type of float being made. These segments go to the lathe for shaping and next to a machine that completes the shaping process and perforates them for the net fastenings in two operations. Then they are placed in the dryer and, after thorough seasoning, are tumbled in a revolving drum until polished smooth.

Need for development of Charlevoix's industrial possibilities has become so apparent, over the past few years, that the progress of this "infant" enterprise will be watched with great interest.

BISHOP HAAS COMES FOR CONFIRMATION

Roman Catholic Prelate of Grand Rapids Will Visit This Parish

The Most Rev. Francis J. Haas, D.D., Ph.D., LL.D., bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Grand Rapids, will preside at Confirmation services at St. Mary's Catholic Church, at 8:00 p.m., Thursday, April 20. This occasion will mark the first visit to Charlevoix of the bishop who, until he was raised to the episcopacy last November, had been chairman of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee and who had participated in the settlement of labor difficulties throughout the country.

The adult members of the Confirmation Class, composed of parishioners of St. Mary's Church, Charlevoix, and of St. Francis Solanus church, Bay Shore, are to report Friday evening, April 14, at 8:00 p.m., at St. Mary's school hall for their final instructions. Arrangements have already been completed for the grade school and high school children of both parishes.

COUNTY SHORT, CITY GOES OVER

RED CROSS DRIVE FAILED TO REACH QUOTA

Charlevoix Passed Its Individual Mark and Most Other Districts Did Likewise

Charlevoix county raised $9,636 during the Red Cross war fund drive in March, reports E. J. Edwards, county chairman. This final tabulation of funds shows that the county fell $264 short of the quota of $9,000.

This city, under chairmanship of Otto Krueger, contributed $2,985 to top the local quota of $2,900. Beaver Island, with $223, and Ironton, reporting $128, both made their quotas. Lloyd McDonough, chairman for Beaver Island, credits their fine record to the Mothers Service club and students of St. James high school. Ironton chairman was Mrs. Ralph Price.

East Jordan's chairman, Mrs. Grace Boswell, reports a total of $2,677, surpassing their $2,400 quota. East Jordan was the first city in the county to top their goal.

Lester Jersey, Boyne City chairman, has reported a total of $2923 for Boyne City, Walloon Lake and Boyne Falls. Quota for this area was set at $3,400. Walloon Lake's chairman was Mrs. Walter Fineout, while Mr. Fisher, superintendent of schools, was in charge of the drive in Boyne Falls.

Collections by Triple-A committeemen in rural areas amounted to $700. A quota of $1,000 was assigned this group.

Of the money collected in the drive, the Charlevoix county Red Cross chapter retains 31 per cent, while 69 per cent is turned over to the national organization to carry on Red Cross work in this country and abroad.

E. J. & S. R. R. PASSENGER LEAVES 10 MINUTES EARLY

Effective last Monday, the East Jordan & Southern R. R. passenger train left East Jordan at 12:25 — ten minutes earlier than the present schedule. All patrons are urged to bear this in mind.

GERBER EMPLOYEES TO WEAR "A" AWARD PINS

The greater part of the metal used for the manufacture of the "A" Award pins is non-critical material. The pins are produced from scrap metal — sheet steel out of which stampings have already been made. No priorities are required for this metal. It is a carbon steel which, if reheated in blast furnaces, would be completely burned up.

In order to manufacture the first 100,000 Award pins, the only critical material required was 70 pounds of spring steel wire for the pin attachment in back of the disc, and 25 gallons of blue enamel used to paint the "A", indicating Achievement, at the center of the disc of the pin.

Officers and employees of the Gerber Products Company will be entitled to wear these pins after April 14th, the first food producing plant to win the "A" Award in Michigan.

Award of the War Food Administrations "A" to a food processing plant entitles the workers in the plant to wear this pin, of which front and back views are shown. The "A" is given to food processing plants with outstanding production records. A green flag, bearing the design at left, is presented to the honored plant as a recognition of achievement.

PHELPS FARM BUREAU MET WEDNESDAY EVE

The Phelps Community Farm Bureau met on Wednesday evening April 5, at the Marion Center Grange Hall, to carry out its planned purpose of entertaining new members and explaining to them the hospital service now available to farm bureau members through the community groups. Topic for discussion and study; "The Effect of Total War on Agriculture." About 40 people were present. Refreshments consisted of maple syrup, buns, coffee and cake.

Attendance and interest have been good at the meeting throughout the winter. Beginning at Geo. Meggison's, in December and following through at the homes of Rowley Williams, Charlie Withers, and Lavern McGhan, at each meeting there was a healthy discussion over the various problems and phases of agriculture.

NINETEENTH IS DATE OF PLAY

CHS JUNIOR CLASS SELECT "THE CHARM SCHOOL"

Delightful Three-Act Comedy Was Written By Robert Milton and Alice Duerr Miller

On Wednesday evening, April 19, at 8 o'clock the Junior class of the Charlevoix high school will present its annual play. This year, the play is the three act comedy, "The Charm School," written by Alice Duerr Miller and Robert Milton and presented by permission of the Samuel French Co. of New York City.

The play opens with Austin Bevans (Gordon Clement), a young automobile salesman, falling heir to an exclusive girls' boarding school. Instead of relinquishing it to the lawyer, Homer Jones (Versli Shenrer), who holds a heavy mortgage on the school and wishes to put the school in the hands of Miss Hays (Linda Bowman), former principal, young Bevan feels that this is the golden opportunity to put in practice his unique theories of education.

When he arrived at the school with three of his pals (David Hamilton, Russell Lewis and Ken Hardy), whom he places on the faculty, the student body is thrown into an uproar.

The students (Ann Campbell, Marion Craig, Eileen Hagle, Ruth Essenberg, and Virginia Ranger) as well as the secretary (Beverly Hooker) fall victim to the charm of the masculine element and from then on things are popping.

The play is being presented under the direction of Mrs. Walter Bergeon. Elaine Brow has charge of publicity, Helen Edwards, tickets, properties, Norma Davis, stage manager, Douglas Byers, assisted by Martin Van Welren.

CHARLEVOIX DETROIT CLUB PLANS A PARTY

"Archie" (W.A.) Carey, who was here last week, attending the funeral of his father, Charles Carey, left with this office a notice that the committee of the Charlevoix Detroit club met at the home of Meyer Cohen on April 5th to perfect plans for the next party, which is to be held on Saturday evening, April 22, 1944, at the downtown Y. W. C. A. building, corner Witherell and Montcalm streets. Look for complete plans for the party in next week's issue. Plan now to attend. Correspondence relative to this matter should be addressed to Mr. Carey, who is secretary-treasurer of the club, at 7103 Tuxedo Ave., Detroit.

HIS BIRTHDAY FELL ON EASTER SUNDAY

Henry Smith, of West Upright Avenue, celebrated his 75th birthday on Easter Sunday, which is the first time that Mr. Smith can remember that the two events coincided.

A tasty dinner was served, with colored eggs and other appropriate table trimmings expressing the Easter motif, and a fine birthday cake was the crowning feature of the meal.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Albert Smith and family, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Peters and family and Mr. and Mrs. George Smith.

ORATORICAL TILTS NOW LOCALIZED

Wartime Difficulties Preventing Sub-District Contests

Declamation and orntion contests at C. H. S., this year, have been conducted without reference to participation in sub-district contests, as in former years, owing to difficulties of transportation. However, these subjects have a definite value to the student, regardless of the satisfactions of outside competition, and the faculty have decided to carry on with them, despite wartime limitations.

On Thursday afternoon, March 30, six contestants delivered declamations, as follows:

Jim Roberts — Lincoln, A Man Called of God, written by Thurston.

Bill Poole — The American Pioneer, written by Lane.

Bernie Zeitler — Toussaint L'Overture, written by Phillips.

Norman White — Europe in Suspense, written by Churchill.

Jane Kohler — The Unknown Soldier, written by Barton.

Wayne Saunders — Lincoln, A Man Called of God, written by Thurston.

O. P. North, S. E. Coleman and H. E. Bingham were the contest judges and selected Norman White —first, Bernie Zeitler—second, and Bill Poole, third.

One week later (on April 6) the following five contestants delivered orations:

Eileen Hagle — The World's First Lady, Madam Chiang Kai Shek.

Ann Campbell — Are the Arts Disappearing?

Marian Craig — Can We Draw a Colored Line?

Elain Brow — Do We Want Individualism?

Dave Hamilton — The Monster of Music.

Mrs. Bowman, Miss Parish, and Lieutenant Max Novak were the contest judges and selected Ann Campbell—first, Eileen Hagle—second, and Marian Craig—third.

These two sessions conclude the program for this year.

STORY HOUR CHILDREN ENJOY EASTER PARTY

Mrs. Margaret Bowman, librarian of the Children's Room at the Charlevoix public library, entertained the story-hour group, last Saturday afternoon, with an Easter party.

Easter games, stories and songs kept the little folks amused. The Children's Room was decorated for the occasion with Easter baskets and bunnies and the refreshments were Easter cookies.

Miss Minnie Payton, head librarian, who is leaving the library next month, was presented with a cut-glass bud vase by the children in appreciation of the many kindnesses that have come their way through their association with her. Bobby Miles made the presentation, with an appropriate speech.

Mrs. Bowman was assisted in entertaining the children by the Misses Sally Miller, Linda Bowman and by Jim Bowman.

The Story Hour is each Saturday afternoon, from 2:00 until 3:00 o'clock.

"BILL" RIPLEY IS CHEBOYGAN MAYOR

"Homatown Boy Makes Good" Goes For Popular Furnaceman

William F. ("Bill") Ripley, brother of Mrs. Addie Glossenger of Charlevoix, was elected mayor of Cheboygan, Monday of last week, defeating his Democratic opponent, ex-mayor Joseph Vlau, by 31 votes. According to the Cheboygan Daily Tribune, Mr. Ripley's victory was "a testimonial of the wide esteem which he has won among a wide circle of friends and acquaintances during the comparatively few years since he moved here from Charlevoix."

The mayor-elect, who leaves the duties of aldermon to take over his new office, was born and raised in Charlevoix and was inducted into the army here in World War I. After the war, he left here to work for the Marshall Furnace Company, in Flint, Benton Harbor and Lansing and became their branch manager.

Lest We Forget

Reviewing a Bit of Charlevoix's History Through the Time-Worn Pages of Old Courier Files.

Fifty-Eight Years Ago

Thursday, April 8, 1886

(Another tale from the inside pages — dispatch from Hastings, Nebraska, headed "Blown From A Bathtub") A remarkable accident occurred at McCook, in this state. Judge Lucas had gone into the bath-house of the town, and was comfortably enjoying a hot-water bath, when suddenly a terrible noise was heard and one end of the bath-room went flying across the street. Lucas was hurled forward after it and driven headforemost into a huge snowdrift, where he remained a moment completely dazed. Believing him but slightly injured, the crowd that had gathered around heartily enjoyed Lucas' predicament. The boiler in the basement had exploded and the chimney had fallen into the tub, so recently occupied by Lucas. (Hollywood should be able to do something with this incident.)

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Staff Sgt. Rebecca F. Hayward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hayward, of Sioux City, Iowa, well-known Sequanota summer residents, was among the 67 members of the WAC Detachment, 1114th Service Command Unit, stationed at Camp Edwards, Mass., to receive the Good Conduct Medal awarded for efficiency, faithful performance of duty and good conduct. The presentation was made at a formal retreat ceremony on April 7th.

Communication

Dear Editor:

You may be interested to know that after the publication of my letter in the Courier, I have received letters from old friends all over the world who are serving in this war. I also heard from many Charlevoixans who wanted the addresses of so and so which I was able to give them.

Most of the boys stationed around Everett called on me and we had a grand visit. Some as far away as Hanford, Wash. called just to see someone from home.

I have had a letter from Arlie Smith whom many of you will remember. He served in the last war in France and is now with a hospital unit in New Hebrides.

I have moved back to Hollywood where I lived for many years so would you print my address again and say that I shall be glad to hear from anyone who wishes to write. If anyone from home lives in or near Hollywood I will be happy to treat them to a real Hollywood welcome.

We usually take them to the community sing the first trip. The director always asks what state you're from and in that way you meet the people from your own state.

Sincerely,
Claire J. Holmes

CANDIDATES FOR CONGRESS (11th District)

Fred Bradley

I am announcing my candidacy for re-election. You made it possible for me to represent our District for three terms. It has been my aim since coming to Washington to keep you completely informed on items of national interest through the medium of this column, sent in the form of weekly news letters to every paper, weekly and daily, in our District and for the past four years through weekly radio broadcasts, originally sent over Station WSOO at Sault Ste. Marie, but since early 1943 also over station WMAM Marinette. You have at all times known your Congressman's position on matters of governmental policy and controversial legislation.

To all of you who have solicited personal assistance, I have endeavored to give conscientious, efficient and as prompt service as possible. It takes time to acquire the necessary experience, contacts and the "know-how" to become of real value to one's District here in Washington. In the past six years I have acquired that knowledge and hope in your opinion my record confirms such conviction.

Vernon N. Spencer

Vernon N. Spencer, of Kalkaska has made the announcement that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for congressman from the 11th Michigan District.

Mr. Spencer needs no introduction to the voters of this section, and his past record as a successful farmer and business man and his earnestness in his aspirations are qualities which invite the confidence and support of the Kalkaska voters, and also the district.

Mr. Spencer is a veteran of World War I and has a son Lt. Theo. B. Spencer, air medal winner in the Air Corps.

It is Mr. Spencer's first venture into politics on a large scale. He has held township offices and was always active in community affairs.

Mr. Spencer states that his qualifications are:

"I have owned and operated my farm ever since I returned from overseas duty in World War I.

"I have lived in this District all of my life and have the reputation of fighting for what I believe is right.

"I am experienced as a small business man and am acquainted with problems of labor and small salaried men.

"I am not tied to any pressure group or supported by any."

Joseph A. LaFramboise

Mr. Joseph A. LaFramboise of Gladstone, Michigan, State Senator from the thirtieth senatorial district since 1940, today announced his candidacy for Congressman on the Republican ticket, and will oppose Fred A. Bradley, incumbent for the nomination in the July 11th primary.

Mr. LaFramboise has an enviable record as State Senator. He has made a study of each piece of legislation on its merits and has voted according to his judgment regardless of party caucus. No party can apply the gag rule on LaFramboise. He sticks to principles and isn't afraid to state his opinion and vote his convictions.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. LaFramboise states that he favored an adequate soldiers bonus for the return of veterans and would work for such legislation.

"I am in favor of the best possible plan of pensions for our older citizens," Mr. LaFramboise stated.

"I have always supported state

TODAY WE FLY TWO FLAGS!

Joining Old Glory is the U. S. Government "A" Award Flag—honoring the men and women of the Gerber Products Company

This is a great day for Fremont! For on Friday, April 14th, the "A" Award flag joins the Stars and Stripes flying over the plant of the Gerber Products Company, and every one of its men and women proudly wears the "A" Award pin—the first award of its kind in the state of Michigan.

Here is recognition by your Government of a job well done—feeding America's babies.

It is an honor not easily won. The "A" stands for Achievement. To our Government, this means outstanding achievement—far above ordinary standards.

It means keeping on the job—day in, day out.

It means working together—all knowing we have a job to do that allows no time out, no absenteeism, no slackening of effort.

It means giving our best, hitting new highs in quality and production.

All this to meet the greatest demand for baby food, due to the highest birth rate in the history of our country.

The award of the "A" for Achievement puts on all of us a responsibility to keep up the good work. With our ranks thinned by men and women going to the armed forces, a bigger effort will be needed by all of us in the year ahead.

We know that all of us at the Fremont plant will see that the job is done!

"I watched conditions pretty carefully during our 13 years of prohibition in this country. The only thing I could see we got out of it was bootleg liquor instead of legal liquor... plus the worst crime and corruption this country has ever known."

"The GOOD-NEIGHBOR policy" applies to party line service, too!

LOTS OF US have found out lately that it's no hardship to share with others. Pulling together in friendly co-operation is one of the valuable lessons of the times.

Today, as a war necessity, more and more people are being asked to share party line telephone service. By treating others on the line as they themselves would like to be treated, good party line neighbors help to improve everybody's service.

A GOOD-NEIGHBOR CREED

A good party line neighbor thinks of it this way: "Somebody else on my line may be waiting to make a call, so I won't talk any longer than I have to. When the line is in use and I'm waiting my turn, I won't interrupt. When I finish a call, I'll make sure I've hung up properly, because if one instrument is left 'off the hook' it puts all the telephones on the line out of service."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Farmers Favor Soil Conservation District

Hopes that a Soils District Program in Charlevoix County might enable farmers to save their good farm lands before the land reaches the restoration stage was expressed by a representative group of land owners at a hearing held at the Charlevoix County court house recently.

The hearing was conducted under the personal direction of the State Soil Conservation Committee. Charles Figy, commissioner, State Department of Agriculture, E. L. Anthony, Dean of Agriculture of Michigan State College and Wayland Osgood, Michigan Department of Conservation, heard the testimony from Charlevoix county farmers that showed the group interest was unanimously in favor of establishing a Soil Conservation District. During the discussion, many of our better farmers testified as to the desireability and necessity of establishing a district to prevent further losses of fertilty and topsoil.

The State Committee set the referendum date for Monday, May 8th, during the hours of 7 to 10 in the evening and in each township hall, excepting Beaver Island where the election will be in the St. Jaunes town hall. The referendum will be in charge of appointed farmers who will conduct the election.

Sheep Need Care Before Summer

Labor saving can be employed with the sheep flock, but the flock should not be neglected. Here are some of the practices recommended by E. L. Benton, animal husbandry specialist of Michigan State College.

Dipping, so often omitted, gives better, heavier wool if properly done. This job should be scheduled about two weeks or more after shearing. If a tank is not available, mix up some solution. Dip the lambs in a tub and on the older sheep use a sprinkling can with the spray top removed. Pour enough dip along the backs so the liquid thruroughly soaks the animal. Use a dip which requires only one treatment per year.

Worming also may be just as easy as dipping. Mature sheep in flocks which have not had phenothiazine in the salt during the winter should have a treatment before going to pasture. Many farmers use whole milk, 1 gallon mixed with 1 pound of phenothinzine, for a drench solution. Eight ounces of this mixture treats a sheep over 60 pounds. Sheep owners who use one pound of molasses with 1 1-3 quarts of water should add one pound of phenothiazine to it. Eight ounces of this solution also treats a 60-pound or heavier sheep. While on pasture 7 or 8 pounds of phenothiazine per 100 pounds of salt seems to be sufficient in Michigan. Some bone meal should be added, depending on the appetite of the stock. Many stockmen especially in the north have thriftier livestock by adding a half-ounce of cobalt to 100 lbs. of salt.

Castration and docking is such a short job that lack of time should be no excuse for not doing it. Tails should be removed at about the second joint, prefersbly 3 to 5 days after birth. Pinching the artary on the underside of the tail will slow up bleeding. Every lamb castrated is worth $1 more than a buck lamb on the market. Do this about 10 days after birth. Disinfectants act as a safeguard. Fly repellents should be applied if weather is warm.

Office supplies of any description may be obtained quickly through the Charlevoix Courier.—Adv. 23

an instructor for telephone and wire installations. Don't know where I will be sent, but hope to have a permanent address in the near future. Until then, hold the Courier for me. This last tranafer just about broke my heart, as I was set for overseas duty.

Will close for now, wishing my friends in Charlevoix the best of health and luck.

As Ever,
Guy John
Fort Douglas
Salt Lake City, Utah."

Pvt. Herbert L. Cummings writes from Camp Roberts, Calif., to thank the Courier and the CSO for the paper each week: "I have been receiving the paper for nearly three months and I sure appreciate it. It comes each week, usually on Friday, and I sit right down and read it from baginning to and. It sure helps a fellow out to get the hometown paper.

How is everything in good old Charlevoix? I hear you havn't had much snow this winter? I haven't seen any except that on the mountain tops on the way out here. It is sort of hot here in the daytime but at night it gets cold.

Thank you again for sending the Courier. I hope to see Charlevoix within two or three weeks. Until then, good luck to you all.

Pvt. Herbert L. Cummings."

Pfc. Forrest C. Kerr, stationed at Camp Butner, N. C., writes the following letter: "I've been going to write for some time but it seems to be getting put off too often, so I'll just take the time today.

I am now in North Carolina, have been here for almost three months. Sure is nice down here. No snow like in Michigan but lots of rain, which makes lots of mud and water.

The Dismal Swamps, which run from Virginia to Florida, aren't far from here and we have been on maneuvers there often in the two years and eight months I've been in the service. I've also been stationed in Virginin, Maryland, Massachusetts and New Jersey. I like the northern states best. I guess it's because I'm a Yankee.

It's so hot here in the summer time that the mosquitoes and chiggers would like to eat you up.

We were out for a little practice on our rifles, last Sunday, and I managed to make sharpshooter. I hope I get a change to use it before long.

I hope this ordeal will soon be over, so everyone can be home again. Will close for now. Thank you very much for the paper. I do appreciate it.

Pfc. Forrest C. Kerr."

Daniel A. LaFreniere S2/c, who has been transferred from Great Lakes to the Amphibioua Training Base at Little Creek, Va., sends the following letter: "I am writing to advise you of a change of address. I certainly enjoy reading the paper and look forward each week to the news from home and Charlevoix.

I am going to school and have been assigned to the crew of a LSM, which is one of our Uncle's latest type of landing barges.

I want to take this opportunity to thank you and the CSO for making it possible for me to receive the paper. My best wishes to all my friends in the service, in Charlevoix and on Beaver Island.

Sincerely yours,
Archie."

A letter from James Annis, C. M.3/c in the south Pacific tells us that: "I am well and still in the same place. I received two copies of the Courier yesterday, the Dec. 15 and Feb. 2 issues. They were really reminiscent of the good old times when people could be seen on sunny afternoons, walking lazily through town with 'nary a care in the world.'

It's really wonderful to see Foster Boat products way out here. Harold Holm and Ralph Stephens aren't far from me, but as yet I haven't had a chance to see them.

My uncle, Charles Krulik, is really seeing the States. The only state I saw was that little 'angled off' state in the western U. S., California, by name.

My work is interesting but a little tiring, but that's to be expected in anything. I was sick at Guadalcanal, so I was unable to go to Bougainvilla Island.

Congratulations to the Blue Star Mothers and the CSO. Your contributions will make the inevitable victory much more secure.

Take care of the sidewalks, for it will be fun walking on them again.

As ever,
James Annis.

A letter from Pvt. William A. Holland informs us that he has transfered to the Hoff Ganoral Hospital, Ward 25, Santa Barbara, Calif. He writes: "I am a patient at the hospital here. I don't know how long I will be here, so send the paper to this address.

I wish to thank the CSO and also Ralph Hamilton for the wonderful gifts they sent to me.

Yours truly,
Bill."

Bill has been in the hospital since before Christmas. After many weeks at the hospital at Fort Rosecrans, he has been sent to Santa Barbara. I'm sure his friends here will write to him at the above address.

A letter from S/Sgt. Leith S. Kerr who is aerial gunner, stationed somewhere in Unly. "I have been receiving the Courier since January 12 and it is nice to have some news of the old home town. I have enjoyed reading it very much and would like to inform you of a change of address. I've found the paper worth a dozen letters, as it has all the news from home and that's the place we all think about.

Sincerely yours,
S/Sgt. Leith S. Kerr."

If anyone would like the new address they may get it by calling the Courier office as we can not print overseas addresses.

Matt Doorly Versus the Tomato

Matt Doorly's skin broke out in a rash last week. He finally admitted to Doc Hollister he'd eaten twelve tomatoes in a row just the day before.

"Shucks," said Doc. "That's all that's the matter with you. That kind of eating would turn anybody red."

So now Matt has not only cut out all tomatoes for himself. He's forbidden his family to eat tomatoes. And won't even have them in the house. Says tomatoes are anti-social and ought to be prohibited by law.

Funny how some people rush off to extremes like that. They take a wholesome thing and overdo it till it disagrees with them—or maybe find they don't happen to like it—and then they want it banned for everybody.

From where I sit, folks ought to realize there's a middle ground in everything—a middle ground of moderation on the one hand . . . and tolerance for our neighbors on the other.

AMERICAN HEROES

BY LEFF

"He gallantly gave his life in the defense of his country, ends his citation for the Silver Star. During fighting on Tulagi, Marine Private George Alfred Johnson, of Coatesville, Pa., with utter disregard for his personal safety, rushed to the mouth of a cave that sheltered Jap snipers and blasted them out with hand grenades until he was killed. He'd want us to buy War Bonds to fulfill that mission! War Bonds—The Ideal Christmas Gift.

(Here's something from this issue that is just as timely today as it was in 1914 and is a complete answer to the critic who thinks the newspaper has a little too much of this or that kind of news in it, or too much personal observations or what have you.) One of our exchanges says: "Did you ever stop to think that a well conducted newspaper is like a banquet? Everything is served up to you with a view of selection. Help yourself to what you want, but do not condemn the entire spread because pickles and onions may be included. If you do not relish them, somebody else may find them palatable. Be generous and broad enough to select gracefully such reading matter from a paper as will be agreeable to your mental taste. You, as an individual, are not compelled to swallow everything. We do not think alike on every subject, and it is a good thing, as it makes more variety and variety is the spice of existence."

Page two of this issue contains the auction sale of Herbert and Florence Fox, at their farm, two miles south of Charlevoix on the Norwood road.

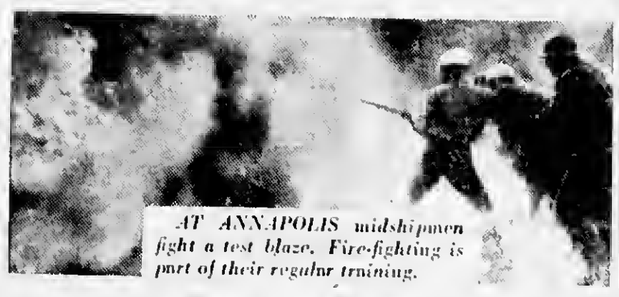
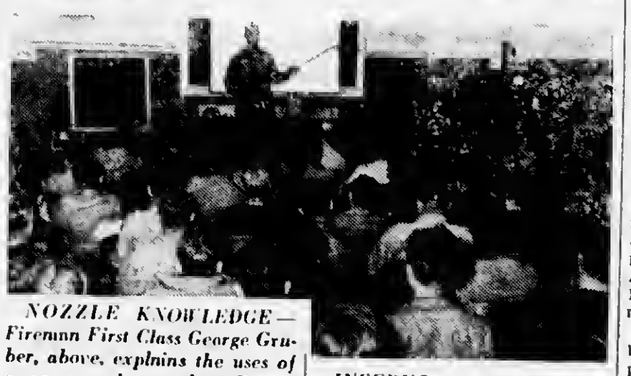
Firemen of the Fleet

During times of peace or war there is one foe eternally feared by every man that goes to sea—fire. In wartime ship fires reach their maximum deadliness. Ignited by enemy shells or bombs, the flames menace personnel already busy at battle stations. Also, every man called from his post to fight fire gives the enemy that much more advantage. Thus, the navy has founded fire-fighting schools to train specialists in the art of extinguishing fires anywhere aboard ship quickly and methodically. Fire-fighters train aboard imitation ship sections built on land in which fires can be ignited for teaching purposes.

SOOT SUITS might be a proper slang term for these weird looking asbestos suits and oxygen breathing apparatus. These student firemen are equipped to fight a fire below decks.

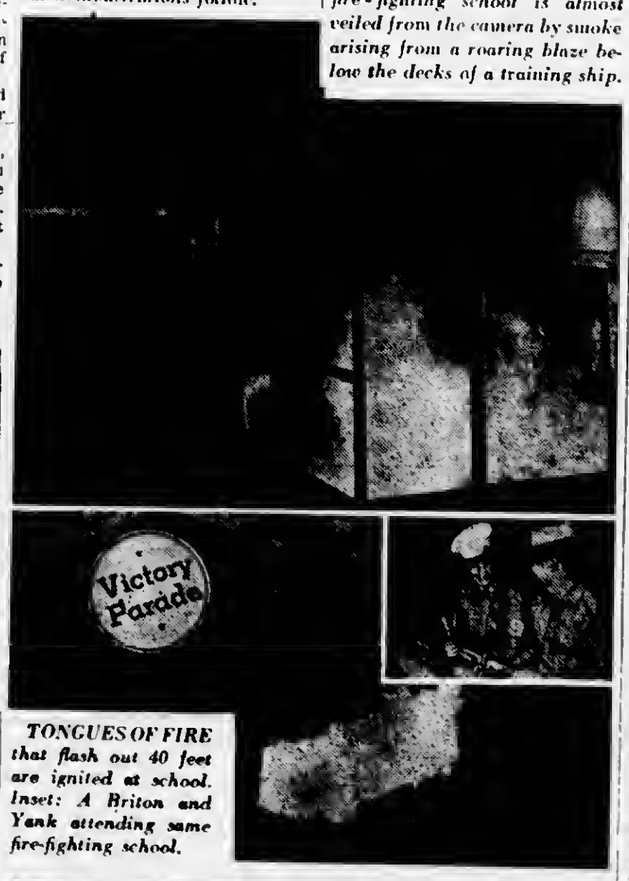


AT ANNAPOLIS midshipmen fight a test blaze. Fire-fighting is part of their regular training.



NOZZLE KNOWLEDGE—Fireman First Class George Gruber, above, explains the uses of a spray nozzle to a class. Practical demonstrations follow.

INFERNO—A member of the fire-fighting school is almost veiled from the camera by smoke arising from a roaring blaze below the decks of a training ship.



TONGUES OF FIRE that flash out 40 feet are ignited at school. Inset: A Briton and Yank attending same fire-fighting school.

DOWN THE HATCH go asbestos clad fire-fighters and soon a blaze spreading below will be out.

PACIFIC:
Japs Surprise

While troops of General MacArthur's command continued to batter the Japs in the Southwest Pacific area, main attention of the Allied world in the Far East centered on India, where the Japs struck out boldly in four directions to cripple U. S. and British communications to China.

Objective of the Japanese was Imphal, highway hub leading to the railroad carrying supplies to advance Allied bases in north Burma for air transport to China. While U. S.-Chinese troops drove forward in northern Burma to clear the new Ledo highway to China to supplement the existing air route, the wily Japs burst out of the jungle at four points in central Burma to catch the Allies off balance and advance on Imphal as Lord Mountbatten's command hurriedly organized for a stand.

In the Southwest Pacific, U. S. bombers peppered the enemy's shipping and communications to prevent strengthening of his resistance to Allied advances in New Guinea, New Britain and the Solomons.

POLITICS:
'Test' Vote

Hailed as a barometer of public sentiment in the Southwest, Oklahoma's special congressional election resulted in a Democratic victory, although less votes were polled than in 1942.

In winning, Democrat William G. Stigler drew almost the same vote as his predecessor two years ago, but the GOP candidate, E. O. Clark, polled about 3,000 votes less than he did in 1942. Rain reportedly kept many home, especially in the rural districts.

In an effort to win, both parties called upon their national big-wigs to swing the vote, Democratic Sen. Alben Barkley speaking for Stigler and Republican Sen. E. H. Moore campaigning for Clark.

Said Moore: ". . . We were decisively beaten . . . Both the federal and state New Deal machines were in the district plugging every minute. The organization got the job done."

SUPREME COURT:
Price Fixing Approved

To permit flexibility in price fixing, congress can prescribe certain broad standards and then delegate an agency to work out details, the Supreme court ruled in declaring the constitutionality of wartime economic stabilization.

The Supreme court also upheld rent control by a delegated agent, or administrator, on the same grounds, stating: "Congress has supplied the standard and the base period . . . (It) does not abdicate its functions when it describes what job must be done, who must do it, and what is the scope of his authority . . ."

In two other decisions, the Supreme court ruled that distributors of religious literature could not be licensed since licensing power might lead to their suppression, and that iron ore miners were entitled to payment for underground travel time, since the wages and hours act was not passed to allow an employer to claim all of an employee's time while compensating him for only a part of it.

AT THE MOVIES

"Lost Angel"

Police cars, sirens going, squeal to a stop before the apartment house bachelor quarters of James Craig, in a scene of M-G-M's "Lost Angel," which comes to the Palace Theatre on Saturday and Sunday, April 15 and 16.

Several hundred curious spectators fill the street, for the occasion is the capture of a notorious gangster by Craig and his six year old chum, Margaret O'Brien.

Keenen Wynn, son of comic Ed Wynn, who plays a reformed crook who aided in the raid and capture, grins at the cops. The gangster is in handcuffs.

"You never would have found this bird but for him and the kid," Wynn says to the police. "Boy, what a kid!"

Margaret plays a scientifically reared child prodigy in the film. She runs away from an institute where she has been raised, seeking Jumee Craig, who has promised to show her magic — and shows him how to handle a difficult situation.

"Crime School"

A dramatic story calculated to shock the public into the awareness of the alarming rise in juvenile delinquency since Pearl Harbor will be the new screen fare presented at the Palace Theatre, on Wednesday and Thursday, April 19 and 20. The film is "Crime School," a Warner Broe. re-release that sets forth vividly and realistically the problem of reforming erring boys into useful members of a community.

Featured are Humphrey Bognrt, the "Dead End" Kids and Gale Page. Lewis Seiler directed from the screen play written by Crane Wilbur and Vincent Sherman.

FOSTER BOAT CO. WON LAW SUIT

APPEAL COURT CONFIRMED PREVIOUS DECISION

Brunswicke-Balke-Collender Co. Is Loser To Amount of $17,094 In Long-Fought Case

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, sitting in Cincinnati, Ohio, last week, rendered its decision upholding the verdict of the U. S. District Court, Grand Rapids, by which the Foster Boat Company, last May, was granted a judgment against the Brunswicke-Balke-Collender Company. The amount awarded by the jury in the District Court had been $17,094.02.

Basis for the suit was the Foster Boat Company's charge of non-performance on the part of the Brunswicke-Balke-Colleader Company of a contract entered into in November 1940, by which the local concern was to manufacture 290,000 rough-turned bowling pins, using equipment of a specialized nature to be furnished by the Brunswicke-Balko-Colleader Company. Foster Boat Company contended that the Brunswicke-Balke-Collender Company, by refusing to furnish the necessary machinery, had prevented the plaintiff from fulfilling the agreement, thereby breaching its contract.

The decision handed down last week was the third step in a prolonged legal process which had its inception in the filing, in 1942, of suit for damages in the Circuit Court for Charlevoix County, which action was subsequently transferred to the Federal District Court in Grand Rapids.

ADJOURNED AT CALL OF CHAIR

SUPERVISORS TRANSACTED A GOOD BIT OF BUSINESS

Hear M. S. C. Representatives On Post-War Plans and Petition State Legislature

Charlevoix county's board of supervisors adjourned the first meeting of the year at the call of its chairman, on Friday, April 14. This means that if anything comes up requiring attention between now and the next regular meeting, which is set for the third Monday in June, the board may be reconvened.

Considerable business was transacted outside of the approval and filing of the reports of the various committees. Space permits only a bare outline of the board's activities at its April session. On Thursday, H. A. Berg and Louis Wolsanger, representatives of the Michigan State College at Lansing, appeared before the board to discuss postwar planning and zoning. This matter was laid on the table until a later session.

A resolution was passed, asking the legislature to enact a law making three years residence in the state of Michigan a condition of eligibility to welfare assistance or other state or county aid. This act would be particularly aimed at transient workers coming from other states for employment in war-time industries or those entering the state at harvest time for work in the fields.

Claims in the amount of $200.99 were allowed for damage done to sheep, turkeys and calves in the county by dogs.

U. S. O. CENTER IS BEING DISMANTLED

The U. S. O. Center in the Lewis building on Van Pelt Place which has been closed for several months, is being dismantled. Many people were very generous at the time the rooms were furnished and several pieces of furniture are still there. Some had identification tags on them but others did not.

If the owners who still have pieces of furniture in the building will please call 367 and identify them, the furniture will be delivered to them.

BAD FIRE AT CENTRAL LAKE

FAAS FOODS WAREHOUSE IS TOTAL LOSS

Cause Not Determined Except For Fact Blaze Was Started From Outside

What the Central Lake Torch, in its issue of April 13, terms "Central Lake's most disastrous fire in the past quarter century" occurred on Monday of last week, when the three story warehouse of Faas Foods was totally destroyed. The loss is estimated at between $20,000 and $30,000.

The cause is not definitely determined, but the railroad section crew had been burning grass and it is thought that a spark got under the steel siding of the building and thus the flames worked through the underlying wooden portions unnoticed. Other theories are advanced, but all point to the conclusion that the fire started from the outside. State police and insurance officials are still working on the case.

Canning Unit Saved

Fanned by a strong northeast wind, the fire was soon raging and the village summoned help. Fire departments from Bellaire, Ellsworth and East Jordan responded and worked untiringly to keep the blaze from spreading to the main canning unit of the plant. A cement fire wall, put in many years ago, also helped to keep adjacent buildings from catching.

The building itself was, of course, the worst loss. Four carloads of canned goods, sold and ready to be shipped, some equipment used in the canning process and some machinery stored for future use were destroyed. Townspeople turned out in force and helped tear loose and remove machinery and office equipment in the main canning unit, which was spared.

A house opposite the factory and a large field back of it caught fire, but the blaze was soon extinguished. Billowing smoke summoned half the countryside to the aid of the firemen and many watchmen were employed to guard the ruins overnight.

FARM BUREAU MET WITH FRED WILLIS

Hayes Organization Enjoyed A Pleasant Evening Here

After the business meeting, a social hour followed, with an Apple quiz: "Do you know your apples?" A delicious luncheon was served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Rislag, on Route Three. All members are urged to attend.

Lest We Forget

Reviewing a Bit of Charlevoix's History Through the Time-Worn Pages of Old Courier Files.

Fifty-Eight Years Ago

Thursday, April 15, 1886

(From the Files of The Charlevoix Journal)

Mrs. E. H. Green, prominent and much beloved local woman, passed away this week, at the close of a long illness.

Most of the business men on Bridge street have raked the street in front of their establishments.

One of the attractions at F. W. Traine & Co.'s dry goods store, this summer will be the unobstructed view of Round Lake and the resorts through the very fine telescope and a pair of opera glasses which they have there.

The observatory of the Sweetland sanitarium is an excellent place for a sun bath. The thermometer reached 108 deg. on Tuesday, when it was only 70 to 80 deg. outside. (Some April!)

At the Hopyard school, taught by Miss Gladys Jeffries, the following pupils were neither absent nor tardy for the term: Johnnie Struthers, Charlie Struthers, Lennie Cooper, Nora Cooper. Lucy Struthers was neither absent nor tardy for the last month of the term.

Cross & Son do a fair business in herring and other small fish.

Joe Beauvis was the local boat builder in those days. At his shop, back of Crouter's drug store, he "reached the highest degree of perfection [and] in Northern Michigan. One boat, which he has just finished for Mr. Crumb, of St. Louis, will compare with anything found on Lake George or Lake Winnipisseogee, the famous resorts of New York and New Hampshire. It has 17 different kinds of woods, artistically inlaid, according to colors."

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Dear Editor,

It looks like some very busy days ahead of me. We left the sunny state of California and are transfered to Fort Bliss, Tex. We are going into another training program that will last about 13 weeks. According to the training schedule, we are in for a rough deal. I have never seen so much sand in my life. All we have is one sand storm after another. Of course that is due to the windy month of March.

What I really want to say is this: Send the Courier to this address as it is really a great morale builder. I do enjoy it very much as it gives me many moments of pleasant relaxation.

As Ever,

Pfc. George Lask who is with the Marines in the Pacific writes: "Just received a January issue of the Courier, and, although it is a little late, it is all news to me. The old saying 'You don't know how much you like something 'til you have to go without it' is certainly true. The point is, I do miss the Courier loads, now that it isn't in the mail every Tuesday, like it used to be back in the States. I should say that, now, our mail isn't there every Tuesday, every week or even every month.

The service letters are especially interesting. I appreciate everything the people are doing who are responsible for me getting the paper.

Thanks,
Bill.

Dear Editor:

This is the first letter I have written to you since I have been in the service and am sorry it has been so long neglected. I really haven't much to say, except that I am receiving the paper every week and enjoy it.

I meant to thank you, Mr. Hannah, for the much appreciated letter.

It is now 5:30 Sunday morning and I am sitting here guarding Water Well No. 5. I am situated 3

Rotenone Destroys Many Insect Pests

New Insecticide Is Harmless to Man

Among the newer insecticides are those containing rotenone. This valuable product of the roots of species of Derris and Lonchocarpus (commonly called cube or timbo) was imported from the Southwest Pacific and South America, respectively, before the war. After supplies from Malaya and the East Indies were cut off, the development of derris culture in Central and South America was given impetus.

Rotenone is an organic compound toxic to many insects and poisonous to fish, but is not considered harmful to man in dilutions sufficient to kill insects. This makes possible the use of the ground derris or cube root on leafy vegetables. The roots are usually ground sufficiently fine so that most of the powder will pass through a 200-mesh screen, and it is used in diluted form. Ground rotenone-bearing roots, however, may irritate tender skin and the mucous membranes. Both the spray and dust methods are used in treating infested plants.

The most important uses of rotenone root powder are on vegetables, fruits and flowers to control the Mexican bean beetle, cabbage caterpillars, cucumber beetles the pea aphis, the pea weevil, the asparagus beetle, flea beetles, the cherry fruit fly, the currant worm, rose slugs, the Japanese beetle, spittle bugs on strawberries, and the iris thrips.

In combination with pyrethrum extract and sulfonated castor oil, rotenone is also effective against red spiders, thrips (except the gladiolus thrips), aphids, cucumber beetles, tarnished plant bugs, certain species of leaf rollers, and leaf tiers.

The department of agriculture reports that properly packaged and stored ground roots containing rotenone do not deteriorate appreciably for several years. Deterioration was also not found when the ground roots were diluted with inert carriers like pyrophyllite, neutral talc, or powdered plant products and placed in closed containers in a dark, dry room.

Imports of rotenone-bearing roots into the United States had reached a total of eight million pounds in 1941, showing a rapid increase over the preceding five-year period. With the extension of the use of rotenone insecticides through experiments by entomologists, a further upward movement in demand may be anticipated. Already, development of the rotenone industry in the Latin American countries has reached such proportions that the southern nations are establishing their own experiment stations for the further study of these root crops.

Better Grade Chicks Sell Quickly, Say Experts

Poultrymen who make up their minds early to buy good chicks are the ones who get the birds with the ability to lay eggs, says Prof. L. E. Weaver of the New York State college of agriculture. Though the chick market is not as crowded as last year, the better chicks are selling fast, and late buyers have to take whatever is offered.

While chick buying is somewhat a gamble, the grower who buys from a hatchery that has given him good birds before, has a good chance to get good stock.

Other pointers on buying are to purchase only from hatcheries that follow an effective pullorum control program to reduce chick losses; and to buy only from dealers whose chicks do not produce birds with heavy losses from big livers, fowl paralysis, or blindness. Chicks from flocks that show little of these diseases are usually more resistant.

Rabbiteye Blueberries Rapidly Gaining Favor

Harvesting blueberries from a step-ladder is not unusual in Georgia and Florida. The tall and prolific "rabbiteye" blueberries, rapidly coming into favor, are responsible. Yields of 2,000 quarts of berries per acre are not exceptional, and the variety grows faster as well as higher than other species, say the horticulturists. One-year shoots 60 inches high are common in well-fertilized fields, it is reported, and mature bushes often reach 15 feet. Valuable for home and market fruit, the rabbiteye blueberry also helps control erosion by means of its many fine, fibrous roots close to the ground surface which help anchor the soil.

New Variety of Pumpkin Is Being Developed

A small-fruited, bush-type pumpkin suitable for small gardens has been developed by plant breeders of the U. S. department of agriculture. Seed will be available for general planting in 1945, according to present plans. This is the first bush pumpkin adapted to the usual pumpkin uses, and resembles the small sugar pumpkin. It is called Cheyenne, from the field station at Cheyenne, Wyo.

MY CALL WENT RIGHT THROUGH!

YES, most Long Distance calls are handled as quickly as ever — while you hold the line.

But many others — especially those to war-busy centers and to far-away points outside Michigan — meet delay. They must pass over lines crowded with war calls and through switchboards loaded to the limit.

The tip-off that lines are extra busy is the operator's "Please limit your call to 5 minutes." This request means that others are waiting a turn to talk.

By being brief on your call, you will help other important calls get through.

Turn gas burner on full until water comes to a boil. Then turn down to a small simmer flame and leave until the necessary time has elapsed.

This type of cooking is not only conducive to better health, but is patriotic as well, inasmuch as considerable savings of fuel can be made. All fuels have gone to war, particularly the liquefied petroleum gases which we know as "bottled" or "tank" gas. These are used to make synthetic rubber, to cut and treat metals and to fortify high octane aviation gasoline.

miles from the base, out in No Man's Land. I think Coleman and Kipke would enjoy an early morning hunt for prairie dogs. They are much easier to kill — not quite so foxy.

I'd take a crack at them with my .38 revolver, but there are only five cartridges in the magazine and besides, there is a penalty of 6 days for each shell unaccounted for, unless I use some on two legged prowlers. In that case I'd get a 30 day leave of absence.

There isn't much more to say. In fact I think I've said too much already. I'd like to say hello to Ed Radle in New Guinea, Bob Heise and Big Bergmann in India, Ed Hansen, Slim Gallagher, Hallett and all the other boys, wherever they may be. Also my brother.

P.S.—Doesn't Coleman ever write letters?

Louis Brown, Y2c, U. S. Navy, stationed in Australia, in a recent letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Brown, tells of meeting Henrietta Gravuer, Red Cross club worker, now in the south Pacific. He said that he went to a Red Cross canteen about four miles from his station. He saw Miss Gravuer and before she could take a good look at him, asked her if the food there was as good as that at the Belvedere. After her letter in last week's paper, saying she'd never met anyone from Charlevoix she knew, it's easy to imagine how pleased she was. Louis said it was grand to eat some good American food, such as southern fried chicken. Miss Gravuer must have been successful in her attempt to teach the Australians to cook the American way.

The world seems to be getting smaller with every letter received from our boys overseas. Pvt. Claire C. Martin writes home to tell of meeting Lt. Mary Ann Collins, Army Nurses Corps, enroute to England. Lt. Collins is a sister of Capt. John W. Collins. They were aboard the same ship on the trip overseas and were only out a few days when they discovered the fact.

Have you written to that serviceman recently? Remember, when he went away you promised to write and tell him what was going on around home? He took you at your word and no doubt expected a letter. How many of you have lived up to that promise? All you have to do is read letters from those boys and you can know how very much letters from home mean. Just for a minute, put yourself in the place of the boys in England, Italy, India, the South seas, Australia and the other far corners of the earth and think how you'd feel without letters at mail call. And then sit right down and write to that service man.

Pvt. Eugene Bergmann has arrived safely at his overseas destination, according to a cable received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bergmann..

Capt. (Ch.) John W. Collins writes that he has arrived overseas and is "Somewhere in New Guinea."

Mr. and Mrs. George Priest have received the following letter from Pfc. Jay J. Oliver and, because of it's very interesting nature, want to share it with Jay's friends. — "After a year in Persia, I am now in Egypt. It is really much nicer here, and it is a change.

Recently, I was in Jerusalem and Bethlehem. I saw all the Holy shrines and I shall always remember my trip there as one of the outstanding periods of my life. It would take a dictionary with an encyclopedia thrown in for good measure to describe it accurately.

It is truly a beautiful place and without a doubt is the holiest place in the whole world. I was deeply touched, particularly at the tomb in the church of the Holy Sepulchre and The Way of the Cross.

The Franciscans are the custodians of the Holy City and have been for 700 years. They have done much to preserve the shrines as well as to make everyone who comes there feel at ease. Everyday for the 700 years the Franciscan Fathers have made the Way of the Cross, the fourteen stations (Via Dolorosa). I was very fortunate to witness this beautiful service.

I was in the Garden of Gethsemane, where the beautiful Church of All Nations was completed in 1023. It is built over the Rock of Agony and strange as it may seem America's gift stands beside Germany's contribution. Both gave beautiful domes. Eight of the original olive trees still stand in the Garden and, just across the way, stands the Golden Gate Christ used when he entered Jerusalem on Palm Sunday.

I saw the Jews' Wailing Wall, the holy church of the Nativity at Bethlehem and the manger and stable are still intact.

I would like to have stayed longer, but I was on a conducted tour and, consequently, I saw only the highlights, but it was the best. If, in the future, you plan to do any traveling, don't miss the Holy Land.

I wish I could go into more detail and tell you all we've done since coming overseas, but it will have to wait 'til I get back."

STANDING STILL IS TOUGH GOING

FOR THAT CAR OF YOURS!

SOUNDS FUNNY -- BUT IT'S TRUE! Cars that do a lot of "marking time" in garages actually need more care than cars that are used constantly. That's not just our idea. It's a scientific fact! When a car stands idle, water condenses in the crankcase -- greases tend to dry and harden -- there's a better chance for corrosion . . . to mention just a few of the evils that arise. So don't let the mileage fool you. In Wartime, your car needs regular attention no matter how much or how little you drive it. And that goes double in warm weather!

WARM WEATHER'S NO TIME TO RATION CAR CARE! Heat has always been tough on cars. This year, it's more than ever important to guard against it. Don't put it off. Have your car thoroughly conditioned for warm-weather driving today. With our fine products -- our tools and experience, we can not only help give your car more miles, more years in this emergency, we may even be able to save you up to one gallon of gas out of every ten you buy! And that's not idle talk! Here's our routine:

ENGINE . . Drain out worn lubricants -- replace with clean Summer Mobiloil.

GEARS . Check differential and transmission. Replace lubricants if necessary with the right grades of Summer Mobiloil Gear Oil.

CHASSIS . . Thoroughly Mobilubricate your car -- eliminate squeaks and rattles.

RADIATOR. Clean out your cooling system with Mobil Radiator Flush -- condition it against rust and scale with Mobil Hydrotone.

IGNITION. Check your battery, spark plugs. Clean or replace if necessary.

TIRES . . Give them a thorough inspection for cuts and bruises. See that they are properly inflated for Victory driving.

BE ON THE SAFE SIDE -- CHECK WITH US EVERY 30 DAYS.

CENSUS ENUMERATORS IN CHARLEVOIX SOON

In an effort to measure the country's manpower reserve both in urban industrial districts and in agricultural regions, the Bureau of the Census is conducting a special study in 68 selected areas of the United State, including Antrim-Charlevoix Counties in connection with the regular April monthly survey of the nation's labor force. Census Bureau enumerators will interview a selected sample of families in this area during the week of April 17-22, it was announced today by Donald P. Watkins, local supervisor for the labor force survey. There are 38 "sample households" in the city of Charlevoix.

"The supplementary questions to be asked this month," Mr. Watkins stated, "are designed to secure information for two purposes. The first is to provide information on the number of young people who are working or seeking work and at the same time attending school. The Children's Bureau, the Office of Education, the War Manpower Commission, and other agencies are concerned with the extent to which wartime increases in employment have been made possible by the work of persons who are attending school. National estimates are needed on the size of the group working or seeking work and continuing with full-time or part-time school. It is also important to learn in what occupations and industries school children are working.

"The second purpose to be served by the supplementary questions is quite distinct from the first and concerns the agricultural situation. It is necessary, in planning the agricultural program to know how many people are currently working in agriculture. Therefore, the regular monthly survey of the labor force includes supplementary questions designed to obtain information on the number of persons in each household doing any farm work and the number of such persons who are farm operators. These farm operators will be interviewed with a follow-up schedule during the last half of April.

"Information on the number and characteristics of the nation's farms and on the supply of workers to operate these farms is of critical importance at this time, when so much depends upon the maintenance of a program of food production adequate for our armed forces, for our allies, and for the civilian population. The surveys to be conducted will supplement data on farm employment collected in the regular monthly labor force sample."

Mr. Watkins stressed the confidential aspects of Census work, explaining that all of the information obtained will be used only in the form of statistics, totals, averages, etc., and that no figures for any individual household or farm will be disclosed. He expressed the appreciation of the Census Bureau for the cooperation received from families in the local area in connection with the regular monthly survey of the labor force which, when combined with figures from the other 67 areas of the country included in the survey, provide information on a national basis about the important problems of employment, unused manpower, and the types of skills available for the country's wartime production needs.

Artificial Insemination Program Becoming Popular

The Artificial Insemination Program for dairymen is making rapid progress in Michigan. Already several clubs have been organized in various counties. Dairymen have long known the cost of keeping a male animal for the small number of cows owned. It is generally estimated that it costs around $75.00 a year to properly house, feed and care for one of these animals. Under artificial insemination, it is possible to make a big saving in money, and better yet, to have the opportunity of using the highest quality purebred sires. All bulls used in these clubs will be proven sires and of highest production blood lines.

Mr. Baltzer, in charge of Dairy Extension, Michigan State College, is interested in organizing a club in some northern Michigan county. All that is needed is to have 300 cows of one breed signed up.

Briefly speaking, each herd owner pays a $5.00 membership fee, $1.00 per head, and then $5 for the insemination fee per cow. Thence a dairyman with ten cows would have this service performed for $65.00. When one considers the production ancestry back of the sire, and that this extra animal does not need to be owned, it seems to be a good business proposition to favorably consider this dairy development.

More complete information will be published as progress takes place.

Charlevoix High School Host To Clubsters

According to Karl C. Festerling, District 4-H Club Agent, the annual 4-H Achievement Day for Charlevoix County Clubsters will be held at the Charlevoix high school gymnasium on Friday, April 28th.

The "Clubsters' Day" will begin at 10:00 when the 4-H'ers assemble at the gymnasium and parade to the Palace Theatre for a motion picture entertainment.

Coming for the Achievement Day will be approximately 600 youngsters, leaders, teachers, parents and friends. Almost every school in the county will be represented with exhibits and numerous rural schools will close for the day.

Achievement Day exhibits will be put in place after 3:00 p. m. on Thursday, April 27th. Articles made in handicraft, dresses and aprons from sewing groups, posters from hot lunch and victory clubs, and a fine array of articles made from the American Junior Red Cross all will help to make a large and attractive exhibit.

Thursday evening and all day Friday will be open house. The public is invited to come in at any time and examine the splendid workmanship as evidenced in the hundreds of diversified things constructed.

The main program will commence in the gymnasium at 1:00 o'clock and will be highlighted by music by the Charlevoix high school band, the style review, remarks by State Club Leaders and a very nicely worked out citizenship ceremony.

State Club Leaders A. G. Kettunen and Lois M. Corbett of Michigan State College will be on hand to judge the exhibits and make the county honor roll. Pins, Certificates of Achievement and County Honor Member stickers will be given to each club member.

Government Says Containers Scarce

The supply of both new and used fruit and vegetable packages and containers for moving this year's crop to market constitutes a major problem. The outlook for this year is anything but encouraging. Containers are scarce now and from all information received by this office their scarcity will increase in the coming months. A shortage of lumber and labor constitutes the principal reasons for such a container shortage.

Growers should be encouraged to place orders for containers immediately as there are limited supplies of most containers available at this time. The fact that these supplies are available now does not mean that they will be available in the near future. Growers should take advantage of an opportunity at this time to purchase containers and supply themselves with a reasonable percentage of their needs for this year. Salvaging of all used containers should be encouraged.

Soldiers' Wives and Post-War Married Life

A psychologist offers some mighty sensible advice to husbands and wives separated by war. He believes "lack of tolerance" rather than loss of affection is most likely to cause post-war marriage difficulties.

The wife has built wonderful pictures of how perfect life will be when her husband gets back. And he dreams of evenings with her by the fire with a glass of beer, friendly conversation, and no problems or worries.

Of course, it isn't true that just getting back together will make life perfect. There'll be the same domestic problems, the same complications and adjustments, as always.

That's where tolerance is going to be mighty important. Tolerance for a husband who spills ashes on the carpet sometimes. Tolerance for a wife who spends a little too much money for a funny-looking hat. Yes, tolerance is a mighty good foundation for any marriage.

4-H CLUB MEMBERS TO BEAUTIFY FARM HOMES

Surroundings of numerous farm homes throughout this state will take on a new and attractive appearance this year with plantings of native and other flowers, shrubs and trees, repainted houses and barns, repaired fences, and wind breaks. Outstanding records in this activity will receive recognition from Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen, Chicago horticultural enthusiast, in the form of gold-filled medals to county winners, a gold watch to the state champion, and trips to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago next December to the eight highest scoring participants. PACIFIC:
On Run, on Go

On the run in the Pacific, Jap forces remained on the go in India, thrusting forward toward the Assam-Bengal railroad supplying Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's U. S.-Chinese troops in northern Burma.

With U. S. forces closing in from the west, the Japs abandoned the northern and southern coasts of New Britain and fell back toward the once busy enemy base of Rabaul on the northeastern tip of the island for a last ditch stand. At the same time, U. S. naval fliers continued to bombard the Japs' outposts in the Carolines.

Gen. Stilwell and Adm. Mountbatten

As the Japs pressed on the Assam-Bengal railway in India, they severed the network of highways feeding Adm. Louis Mountbatten's British and Indian troops in the battle zone, forcing their supply by air in the mountainous jungle area.

DRAFT:
Take Younger Men

Delay ranging from a few days to 90 days in the induction of men over 26 was forecast as the result of orders to local boards to postpone the drafting of registrants in this age group and rush the processing of those under 26, to meet the services' demands for younger men.

Following exhaustion of the pool of men under 20, those from 26 to 20, and 30 and over will be next in the order of induction, with fathers granted special consideration in all cases where other factors, such as employment in essential occupation, are equal. Meanwhile, congress studied proposals to push 1,000,000 4Fs into war work, by formation of compulsory labor battalions when 4Fs refuse to accept necessary jobs.

The navy needs 400,000 men by September 1 to reach its goal of 3,600,000, and it will require 50,000 to 75,000 monthly after that to maintain full strength. Its objective of 7,700,000 men already attained, the army needs from 75,000 to 100,000 men monthly for replacement.

SUPREME COURT:
Labor Decisions

In three far reaching decisions affecting labor, the Supreme court ruled:

1. That under the National Labor Relations act, an employer must deal with a union designated as a collective bargaining agent, and not with individual members of the union who have not formally renounced it.

2. That the National Labor Relations board can order an employer to bargain collectively with a union that has lost a majority of its membership during negotiations.

3. That under the 13th amendment and the anti-peonage act, no man could be held for criminal action if he failed to fulfill his promise of going to work after receiving money. The court declared that the complainant should have other legal recourse in such cases.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"The war stories I like best, Judge, are the ones by the special writers overseas who live right with our troops. They give us a better idea of how our men react to things going on over there and back here at home."

"I agree with you, Sam. I never miss one of those stories in the papers or magazines. And there's one thing those writers seem to agree on no matter where they are stationed with our men... and that is that the men who have left their homes and families to go away and fight this war don't want to come back and find that prohibition has been put over on them while they were away... either nationally or locally. They have heard about the attempts being made and they resent it bitterly."

"I agree with them, Judge, even though I don't happen to drink myself. Furthermore, I don't think it's fair for us at home to be making any major changes while 10,000,000 of our fighting men are away and have no chance to express their opinions."

WHAT THEY THOUGHT ABOUT SOUTH PACIFIC LIFE

Sergeant Dave Matchett and Clare Myers Tell Courier How It Seemed To Them

The Courier's news editor recently had the pleaeure of a visit with two young men who have dnne a lot of traveling around the world since the Japs sneaked up on ue at Pearl Harbor in '41 — one a soldier, the other a civilian in important war work.

Sergeant David Matchett, Company L, 126th Infantry, 32nd Division, landed in San Franciaco on March 30, relieved from front-line eervice under the plan which releases the soldier from combat operations after he haa put in two yeara in the zone of active duty. Two weeks ago, after reporting at a replacement center in Indiana, he arrived in Charlevoix for a short furlough with hia parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Matchett of Barnard, before going south to the training center at Fort McClellan, Alabama. Glenn Follett, one of hia buddies in the 32nd Division, came up with him ae far aa Traverae City.

Sergeant Matchett, who was in the first contingent of American troops to be sent into the Pacific area after war was declared on Japan, had been overseas two yeare, lacking a couple of weeks. Ha took pert in both the Buna and Saidor campaigns. The firet, he said, was a lot tougher than the eecond. During the Buna fight, ths boys in his outfit hardly tasted a hot meal. The Japs were so cloee that our

TROUT SEASON TO OPEN 29TH

GOOD FISHING IS PREDICTED BY RESEARCH EXPERT

Cool, Wet Summer, High Stream Levels and Mild Winter Favored Trout

Open season for brook, brown and rainbow trout in tha trout streams and trout lakes of Michigan und in the Great Lakes and their connecting waters will commence officially at 12:01 a.m. on Saturday, April 29 and will close at midnight on Labor Day, Monday, September 4. The open season thus includes the first and last dnys of the period named.

Special local regulations are as follows: Designated trout lake—Hoffman Lake. Personal limit: Five rainbow trout per day from Lake Charlevoix until January 1, 1945.

Good trout fishing in 1044 is forecast by Albert S. Hazzard, of Ann Arbor Director of the Institute for Fisheries Research, state conservation department fact-finding organization.

Hazzard's forecast has sound biological basis. Tha fishing pressura on trout streams was less last season than for many years and there should have been an unusually good carry-over nf large trout. The cool, wet summer favored trout as did relatively high stream levels. The mild winter also helped, for studies have shown that fish ducks take a considerable toll of fish in headwaters of trout streams when prolonged sub-zero weather freezes bays of the Great Lakes und lower stretches of rivers emptying into them, forcing the ducks upstream in search of

FIRE DEPARTMENT KEPT ON THE JUMP

Unusual Succession Of Alarms As Result of Long Dry Spell

Charlevoix's very efficient fire department was kept on the run, this past week and week before last, by an unprecedented series of fires — serious and otherwise.

Starting off with a threatening blaze at the Korth chicken hatchery on U. S. 31 South, Thursday morning, April 13, the alarms followed in almost continuous procession. The Korth fire started in the roof around the piping in the hot water heater and resulted in the death of between 150 and 200 chickens by suffocation, as well as considerable damage to the roof.

Then at the home of Frank Boss, corner Garfield and Bridge, on the afternoon of April 17, fire broke out around the chimney, as a result of burning trash in the furnace. This fire was out in less than 10 minutes.

CONCERN IS PROGRESSING

WOOD PRODUCTS COMPANY ABOUT TO EXPAND

Will Add Manufactura of Fish Tugs By Assembly Line Method To Growing Fixture Trade

Men of skill, with faith in their ideas and a desire to perform some useful service, are men hard to defeat — even when conditions are not so favorable and capital small.

This fact is aptly demonstrated in the encouraging progress shown by the Charlevoix Wood Products Company, owned and operated by Fred Kaunitz, former marine designer and builder and erstwhile engineer of the Foster Boat Company.

Started in October, 1043, in the two-story loft building at the rear of Roy Ranger's residence on Belvedere Avenue, the business has grown to proportions where the services of seven skilled artisans are required, working full time, and plans are now on foot for-tha acquirement of a permanent building site and the erection of an up-to-date boat factory and woodworking shop.

Mr. Kaunits was fortunate in securing contracts to make cigarette display cases and ration stamp draws for large chain store companies and his plant has been continuously employed in filling orders for those items, since he commenced operations in 1043. The process is complete, even to varnishing and packing for shipment.

It has long been the owner's dream to produce a standardized

"A" FLAG AWARDED REID, MURDOCH & CO.

Given By WFA In Recognition Of Wartime Food Cooperation

The Achievement "A" Award flag of the War Food Administration will be presented to officials and workers of Reid, Murdoch and Company at a ceremony to be held at the Ellsworth Community Hall, Friday evening, April 28, at 8:30. The Charlevoix City Band under the direction of Earl Beach will appear on the program, which will be broadcast by WTCM.

The flag, destined to fly over the Ellsworth plant during the next 12 months, will be presented during the ceremony, together with "A" Award pins to the 600 officers and employees of Reid, Murdoch and Company entitled to wear the pins for achievement of outstanding production records in quality and quantity of foods processed in the light of availability facilities and materials.

Other factors considered in designating plants to receive the awards are, the extent of the plant's ingenuity, cooperation with the government, employee-management cooperation and low absenteeism.

According to E. H. Rood, manager of the plant, the awards were achieved regardless of the fact that 65 former employees are now serving in the armed forces. Mr. Rood has extended over 1200 invitations to workers, farmers and guests to attend the impressive ceremony.

Have your papers and magazines ready Friday and Saturday, city trucks will pick them up.

Lest We Forget

Reviewing a Bit of Charlevoix's History Through the Time-Worn Pages of Old Courier Files.

Fifty-Eight Years Ago

Thursday, April 22, 1886

(From the Files of The Charlevoix Journal)

Storm houses come down und awnings go up (trustful souls in those days).

(Things got by the old time proofreader, too — Here's a lulu) The Smithson cottage is now in the telephone exchange.

Mrs. Phebe Thompson, while climbing over a fence, Tuesday, caught her toe in a bush and fell, fracturing the bone near the thigh.

Dallas Boulleman of Kalamazoo has rented his cottage on the Charlevoix resort to George H. Russell of Detroit, for the season of 1886.

Alfred Van Dusen has a Leicestershire ewe, nine years old this spring, which has just given birth to her ninth pair of twins — 15 rams and 3 ewes — 17 of which have been raised.

C. Budd is refitting his agate works with new laps, with iron frames, cast and fitted up by the Charlevoix Iron Works. With the new machinery run by steam, he will doubtless make the agate business lively this summer.

Twenty-four new building projects of one kind or another started, including a new wall under the Fountain City House, dock enlargement and warehouse for Upright & Emrey and two new houses under construction on Upright Avenue (the Charles Cook and Bartlett homes.)

The familiar whistle of the Clara Belle is heard as we go to press (Now we listen for the Mary Margaret — same old play, new actors — that epitomizes life, doesn't it?)

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Lt. Fred Durnl has arrived safely overseas and is now stationed in Italy according to word received by Mrs. Durni who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Smith.

Cpl. Orville Shannanquet, son of George Shannanquet, has arrived safely overseas and is "somewhere in Italy." In a recent letter to friends in Charlevoix he tells of the beautiful Italian scenery, so different from Michigan. He also mentions the beautiful Italian girls and then some who aren't so beautiful.

Mrs. A. G. Farmer, now living in Lansing, sends word that her husband, Pfc. Alex G. Farmer, has arrived safely overseas.

In a recent letter from Pvt. Guy John, he asked us to hold the Courier until he arrived at his new post, because he was being transfered from Fort Douglas, Utah. A letter this week brings his newest address and he tells us that he has been sent to San Francisco and that "they have decided to make me a military police here, after I trained with my old outfit for 21 months and got left behind. Sort of hurt my pride. Pretty country, this west coast." Pvt. Guy John, ASN 36182283, Co. B 749th M.P. Bn. Pres. of San Francisco, San Francisco, Calif.

S/Sgt. Francis L. Mason writes that he has returned from 26 months in the southwest Pacific, where he served as aerial gunner, and would like the Courier sent to Ferrysburg until he reports at a reclassification center at Atlantic City, N. J. After a rest there he will be sent to a gunnery school as an instructor. Enroute to this country, he met Herbert Ager, who had also returned from service in the Pacific.

Pvt. Perry Cheney writes from "Somewhere in England" to thank us for the Courier and to give us a change of address. He writes "I've changed jobs since the last time I wrote. I am now in the kitchen as a cook. It's a good job

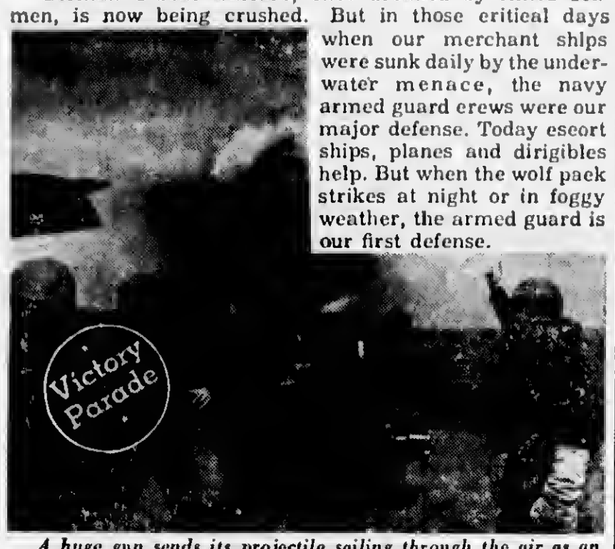
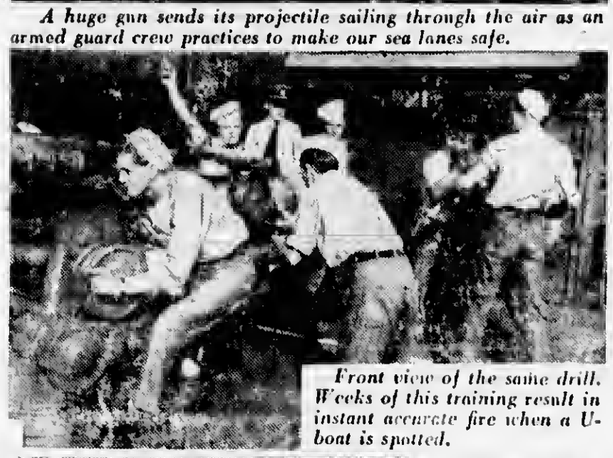
Navy Armed Guard Battles Gangsters of the Sea

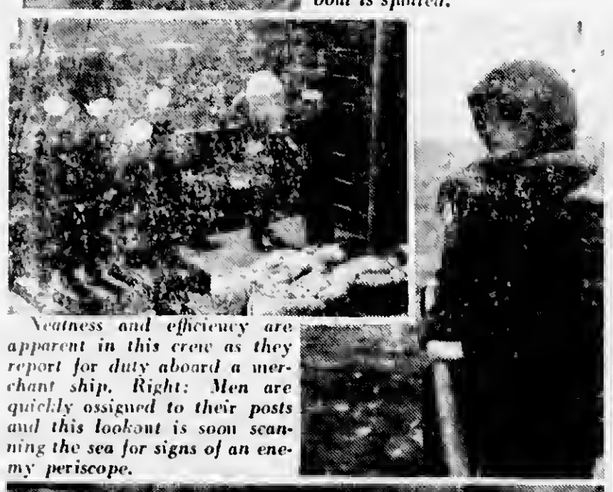
German U-boat warfare, once dreaded by Allied seamen, is now being crushed. But in those critical days when our merchant ships were sunk daily by the underwater menace, the navy armed guard crews were our major defense. Today escort ships, planes and dirigibles help. But when the wolf pack strikes at night or in foggy weather, the armed guard is our first defense.



A huge gun sends its projectile sailing through the air as an armed guard crew practices to make our sea lanes safe.



Front view of the same drill. Weeks of this training result in instant accurate fire when a U-boat is spotted.



Neatness and efficiency are apparent in this crew as they report for duty aboard a merchant ship. Right: Men are quickly assigned to their posts and this lookout is soon scanning the sea for signs of an enemy periscope.

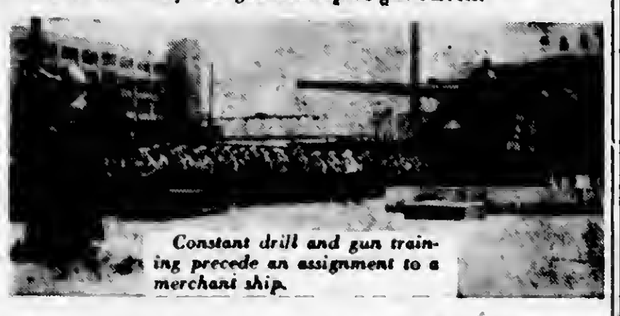
A gunner pours a stream of lead from his antiaircraft gun. Steps around the gun enable him to elevate and depress it easily. Tubes on outside of steel guard are spare gun barrels.



Constant drill and gun training precede an assignment to a merchant ship.

Business and banking under the free-enterprise system are also unbeatable — responsive to America's needs, alert, progressive. BOYNE DISTRICT GETS A SEPARATE RATION OFFICE

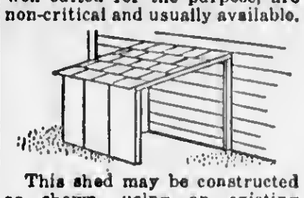
Boyne City has been awarded a separate ration office by the OPA opening May 1, to take care of that city and the territory including that part of South Arm and Eveline townships lying on the Boyne side of the Arm exclusive of East Jordan, Wilson, Bay, Melrose, Chandler, Hudson, Boyne Valley and Evangeline townships. The territory to be included in the list, as soon as definite allocation has been made and published, will be serviced through that office alone. The establishment of a separate office for that part of the county is expected to simplify the rationing problem for its inhabitants to a great degree. In creating the Boyne City office, the OPA has made an exception to the rule of allocating only one office to a county of this size. A 17 member board has also been created, with Lester Jersey, as chairman, and Mrs. Helen Krieghof, formerly of Charlevoix, one of the members of the board.

Fixing Up the Farm
by BURTON WILLIAMS

Protect Your Equipment

WEAPONS for victory! Every piece of farm equipment is just that— a weapon for victory. These tools must be protected as carefully as any military equipment on the field of battle, for they are in the battle—the battle of production. Now, more than ever, it is bad business for the farmer to leave good equipment to rot and rust outdoors.

To protect your equipment, you can build a machine shed similar to the one illustrated with a minimum use of hard-to-get materials. Asbestos cement products, well suited for the purpose, are non-critical and usually available.



This shed may be constructed as shown, using an existing building for one side in order to reduce expense, or built as a separate structure. If new lumber is not available, salvaged lumber can be used to provide a framework on which asbestos eidings or asbestos board can be applied.

Make it big enough to house all your equipment and locate it so that additions can be made if necessary. To reduce wind resistance, build your shed low, but high enough for such tools as hay loaders.

In mild climates, doors can be eliminated by extending the roof to provide adequate protection against rain. If doors are used, they should be of the multiple sliding type to permit storage or removal of one machine without having to move the others around.

A machine shed built with asbestos sidings or shingles, observing these principles of construction, is protected against weather and fire, and will give a lifetime of service with little or no maintenance costs.

AIR TRAVEL SAFE

The commercial airlines, despite the new tremendous burden of war transportation, are still doing the same meticulous job of observing mechanical and human safety rules.

Compared with other types of accidents, the air record is almost superlative. In 1943, for instance, while the commercial airliners were building up a record of millions of miles traveled at a cost of injury or death to perhaps a couple of dozen passengers, some 33,000 persons met death within the supposed safety of their homes. They fell off stepladders, tumbled down stairs, and did the innumerable foolish things which cause death within the home. Another 23,000 met death in traffic accidents.

The air safety record is largely the achievement of the commercial air industry itself, and in view of the relatively brief period of its existence, its achievements border on the extraordinary.

It isn't the safety of air travel but the seat priorities which worry the airlines. The safety is there. The priorities are not within their control.

UP IN FRONT

No industry is more alive to the need for progressive postwar policies than is railroading, judged by the advertising the nation's railways are running which picture the many conveniences planned for passengers after the war.

It is easy to see that the railroads intend to do everything in their power to make transportation by rail as efficient and pleasurable as possible.

They intend to develop their particular field of transportation to the maximum in order to render the greatest public service. Main line trains will move faster and more frequently. More comforts and luxuries will be provided in sleeping car accommodations. Express and freight traffic will undoubtedly be speeded up, and constantly increasing attention will be given to the special needs of shippers and travelers.

Railways have done a magnificent job. In fact, they have done what the pessimists at the outset of the present hostilities said could not be done. They are facing the challenge of the future with the same determination to render superlative service with which they faced the challenge of the war.

There is no reason to suppose or assume that the railroads will not be in the front line of progress in any matters relating to efficiency and conveniences for the traveling and shipping public in the transportation field.

food. Mild winters are favorable to trout production also in that stream temperatures do not remain so low that trout cease to feed. Their growth and survival should therefore be better.

All men and women in the armed services of the United States, officially stationed in Michigan, have privileges of residents of this state under the fish and game laws, the conservation department points out.

Men and women in uniform benefit principally under a statute enacted in 1927 in being able to obtain resident licenses on payment of the minimum fees established for persons living within the state. The cost is halved in the case of those seeking fishing licenses and is reduced more than nine-tenths for deer hunters.

GERMAN BROWN TROUT IN CENTRAL LAKE POND

According to the Central Lake Torch, 250 legal size German Brown trout await the efforts of fishermen in the town's local pond. They were brought from Odin last week by the Sportsmen's Club, but the regulations that the club has drawn up in conjunction with the fisheries division of the Michigan Department of Conservation are pretty stiff. Only artificial flies with line and pole. One hour before sunrise to one hour after sunset is the time limit. Daily catch may be used and no plain fishing limit—two trout, minimum length 8 inches. Each fisherman will be required to register each time he fishes.

SERVICE STATION AT CENTRAL LAKE ROBBED

Central Lake had a robbery, a week ago, last Sunday night. The Wilson Service station, east of the bridge, was the object of the thieves' attention. They opened the tanks and took approximately 75 gallons of gasoline. They also visited the M. A. Thompson place, where they took some gas and oil. This is the third time the Wilson station has been broken into in the past four years.

CHEVROLET PRODUCED ITS SHARE OF PLANE ENGINES

Ten per cent of all the aircraft engines produced by American industry in 1943 were built by Chevrolet, whose contracts are all for production of big Pratt & Whitney engines for bombers and cargo planes, according to General Motors Corporation officials. Thirty thousand of these engines have been turned out by the Chevrolet division since the first one came off the line in March of 1942 and, in November of last year, an all time record was set — Chevrolet building more of them than any other single manufacturer in the aircraft engine field.

FOREST FIRES RAGED IN WEXFORD COUNTY

Conservation authorities in Wexford county, near Cadillac had their hands full, last week. Over 300 acres of grass and timberland were destroyed in a series of fires. Mrs. Everett Holley, a woman 50 years of age, was found burned to death at her home about six miles south of Cadillac. She had apparently been caught in a grass fire of unknown origin, which spread over 53 acres before it could be brought under control. The body was found some 30 rods from her house. Two fires just east of the Four Mile Road, near Cadillac, destroyed approximately 150 acres of wooded and grass land and called out scores of volunteers. Other fires scattered over the district brought the total area ravaged up to 325 acres.

Silas Clay Gets Mad at Women's Hats

Silas Clay is complaining that his wife's new hat cost more than a bull calf. "And I wouldn't mind it, if it was a hat," he says, "but all it is, is a small bow and a piece of feather."

"It isn't the size of the hat that counts," says Biron Harp, reproachfully.

"Well, what is it that counts?" asks Si, exasperated.

"I'll tell you what it is that counts," says Doc. "It's the lift that a new hat gives to any woman. It sort of picks up their spirits . . . boosts morale. Little things can do that. Like the flower in your buttonhole," he says to Silas, "or that glass of beer that you're enjoying."

From where I sit, Doc has given us a mighty good definition of morale. Important little things. A flower in your buttonhole . . . a kind word from a stranger . . . a mellow glass of beer with friends. Little things especially important in these days of strain.

CLEAN-UP WEEK SET FOR PERIOD MAY 1-6

Now Is Time To Start 'Dolling-Up' City For Summer Display

Charlevoix's annual "Clean-Up Week" will start Monday, May 1, and continue through Saturday, May 6, and as long thereafter as is necessary for completion.

Through proclamation by Mayor Robert Bridge, that week is designated as the annual period during which health and fire officials and local citizens cooperate in the effort to make preparations for the summer season and maintain the city's slogan, "Charlevoix-the-Beautiful."

The immediate purpose of clean-up week is to clear yards, alleys and vacant property of all refuse, rubbish and ash piles, thus reducing fire and health hazards and giving the city a neater, cleaner appearance.

Leo Allard, street commissioner, asks citizens to place rubbish in substantial containers at the street curb or at convenient places in alleys to be picked up by truck. It is requested that rubbish is not dumped in piles, as this method is not satisfactory and causes extra work for the street department.

VICTORY GARDENERS MUST GET PERMITS FOR LOTS

Victory gardeners who plan to use the same state-owned lots they cultivated last season must secure new permits this year, the conservation department warns.

Without a permit, such a gardener is considered a trespasser and in case the lot is sold he is not able to harvest his crops. If he has obtained a permit, however, he can gather his crops even if the lot is sold after he has planted his garden.

Applications for victory garden permits have been coming in at a slower rate than in previous years and the lands division urges that applications be sent in early so permits can be issued in time for the planting season.

Vacant city lots owned by the state in the northern 47 counties can be leased for gardens for only $1 a year.

AT THE MOVIES

"Broadway Rhythm"

The dancing feet of George Murphy, the lilting voice of Ginny Simms and the music of Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra. Put them altogether and you have Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's musical funfest, "Broadway Rhythm." This new technicolor movie is to be seen on the screen of the Palace Theatre, Saturday and Sunday, April 29 and 30.

Others who appear in the all-star cast are: Charles Winninger, Lena Horne, "Rochester", Ben Blue, Nancy Walker, Gloria De Haven and Kenny Bowers. The picture was directed by Roy Del Ruth and produced by Jack Cummings.

"Pistol Packin' Mama"

Bob Livingston, the dashing "Nick Winner" of Republic's "Pistol Packin' Mama," coming to the Palace Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, May 3 and 4, has a newspaper to thank for his film career. He was not "discovered" by a newspaper, but — on the contrary — was "fired" by one and, as a direct result of losing his job, he drifted into pictures. He has appeared in such films as "Speed," "Three Godfathers," "The Getaway", "Public Enemy No. 2", "West Point of the Air" and "Mutiny on the Bounty."

VICTORY GARDENS
By Paul N. Krone

Sufficient quantities of most insecticides will be available to Victory Gardeners this year. Exceptions are rotenone, of which the supply is expected to be very limited, and pyrethrum, which is practically unobtainable.

For the control of chewing insects gardeners will be able to purchase calcium arsonate, lead arsennte, or cryolite. Sucking insects can be combated with readily available nicotine. As to fungicides, the supply of most copper sprays is adequate and, in contrast to last year, mercury compounds are plentiful. These may also be used for seed trentment.

Gladiolus growers who use tartar emetic to combat gladiolus thrips will find ample supplies in the market. Restrictinns on sugar, for use with tartar emetic in the control of pests, have been eased.

This year there will be more sprayers and dusters available than in 1943.

A splendid rain has just saved our northern forests, meadows and crop land from destruction. Gardening on even a more intensive scale than last year should be possible. There is plenty of fertilizer, a willingness on the part of all of us to cooperate, and a fine spirit of optimism to buck up our best efforts.

Michigan Mirror

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

There is no way to evade the question. Here it is:

Is it sufficient that Michigan men — perhaps YOUR son or husband — should die on foreign soil in 1944, just as other Michigan men did a quarter century ago, just to vanquish an enemy and to win for ourselves another war?

Michigan people are greatly concerned about tomorrow; many of them are not sure about what we are fighting for today.

They realize that the time of destiny is nearing, like the ticking of a clock that heralds the approach of midnight. When the German Luftwaffe is routed from the skies and when the spring rains have ceased and the poppies are flowering once more, the Americans and Canadians and British will unite in a mighty, determined assault upon Hitler's fortress. We have announced to the world that such is to happen.

Translate these words into home town reality, and you have inevitable casualty lists that always do not affect the "other" family across the street.

Recently we heard an interesting talk by Margaret Bourke-White, the Life photographer who visited the Cassino front in December.

A young woman whose hair is already turning gray, she gave vivid word-picture of the Italian front and the hardships which our American troops were undergoing. She closed with a poignant and unforgettable remark: "Surely, we must have a better world tomorrow to justify such a price!"

Well, how about our world of tomorrow? It is a little strange that while we have been concentrating our resources and energies to make things that are non-productive — for cannons and tanks and the such are intended only to destroy the lives and wealth of others — we have earned for ourselves a legacy of new and improved products. Let's consider some of them briefly.

As American lives are being saved today through the use of sulfa and penicillin — those "wonder drugs" that kill infection, so many American lives will be saved in post-war years by these newly developed aids.

Chemists have developed atabrine, a synthetic substitute for quinine. The army has an influenza serum that is surprisingly effective.

In the field of electronics, we will have a portable telephone — the military "walkie-talkie"—over which we can talk from a moving automobile to our home or office. General Electric has perfected a low-priced television tube for home use. Televized programs will be commonplace at theatres during the next decade. Radio is making rapid strides, too. Colleges are looking to frequency modulation as a means of extended adult education.

While the airplane will never supplant the automobile, it will become more popular as a speedy and safe mode for long-distance travel. Already a Michigan bus company is planning to inaugurate helicopter service.

This list is far from being complete. It suggests a few of the new benefits — "gasoline" from vegetable products, "rubber" from alcohol that is made from sawdust, plastic furniture and dehydrated foods and other new wonders, all for our world of tomorrow.

But will these wonders, and others like them, be sufficient to balance the cost of war, as Miss Bourke-White voiced in her report of Cassinn?

A quarter of a century ago, we were a lad of 18. We enlisted as a volunteer in our home-town infantry company, a national guard unit, and became a soldier in a glorious crusade to "save the world for democracy."

We well remember the memories of the day when our transport convoy landed in England at Liverpool, our boat docked next to a hospital ship that had just arrived from France, and we witnessed the unloading of wounded men from the front.

Today, we are again at war. Convoys are again landing in England. Hospital ships are now in port, ready for the front that is soon to come.

Can we win the peace this time? We know now that we did not win World War I. Should not peace be included in our bargain for tomorrow?

In an interview two years ago, Thomas E. Dewey said the United States must abandon its pre-war isolations and be willing to cooperate with its war Allies in preserving peace.

Leland Stowe, the war correspondent, in his new book "They Shall Not Sleep", warns that Americans are not prepared to play a role of leadership in the world; that we do now know our world neighbors sufficiently to get along with them; that "we do not know how to listen to our dead."

Stowe says other things that are disturbing, such as his conviction "that the odds are definitely against Americans winning the peace."

To men of the intellectual stature of Dr. Alexander Grant Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan, the answer lies in the field of education. He points out that "the soldiers of a democracy should know for what they are fighting" and that "international cooperation cannot be assured by political guaranties, economic nostrums, force, bland relationships, or fear, but only through knowledge and the resulting mutual understanding."

Bring that idea home to Michigan. According to the 1940 census, the average amount of education—formal knowledge possessed by

Lowly "Hot Dog" Now a Main Dish

Baked Beans with Wiener Crown

Sociable pot-luck meals are the highlight of many neighborhood gatherings these days, and their popularity during wartime is easily understood since the expense and effort is divided among the group.

Wieners split lengthwise stand at attention around the casserole. Golden brown baked beans, pieced in layers with thin slices of onion between, are topped off with a spicy tomato sauce to complete this satisfying dish that has both taste and eye appeal.

Up-to-date housewives let the oven do the watching while they take care of other things, for modern gas service is available anywhere and everywhere with "bottled" or "tank" gas which gives the controlled and constant flame heat so necessary to good cooking.

Baked Beans with Wiener Crown

6 wieners
6 cups baked beans
2 tblsp. vinegar
3 tblsp. brown sugar
4 tblsp. chili sauce
1 teasp. salt
1 large onion, thinly sliced

Mix vinegar, brown sugar, chili sauce and salt with baked beans. Stand split wieners around a 2 quart casserole. Fill casserole with alternate layers of bean mixture and onion slices. Bake in 350 degree oven until wieners are brown and beans and onions are thoroughly cooked. This will serve six and you can double or multiply the recipe for larger gatherings.

Sprouted Grain Is Source of Vitamin A

Wheat or Oat Shoots Will Supply Poultry

If you are having a hard time buying enough feeding ails, alfalfa meal and yellow corn for your poultry laying flock, Dr. M. W. Taylor, associate biochemist in nutrition at Rutgers university, suggests you try sprouted grains to supply that essential vitamin A.

Through his research Dr. Taylor has found that sprouted wheat or oats grown in flat trays for about two weeks, with exposure to sunlight to promote greenness, is a fairly good source of carotene or provitamin A.

"At least, it is a good source to use when natural grass range or silage is not available," he says. "A potency of 5,000 U.S.P. units per pound of fresh seedlings may easily be obtained and, as many poultrymen already know, this material is readily consumed by hens. Fed at the rate of 5 pounds per 100 hens per day, the seedlings will furnish about one-third the recommended amount of vitamin A which is enough to prevent a serious deficiency."

Spread Grain in Trays.

For poultrymen who have never sprouted grains before, Dr. Taylor outlines the procedure:

"Oats or wheat are your best choice, since they sprout easily, grow fairly quick and are usually available. Soak them overnight to promote rapid sprouting. Next, spread them out in one-fourth inch layers in flat trays with two or three sheets of newspapers in the bottom so the trays hold moisture around the roots. The thickness is important. If too thick, the seedlings will not develop sufficient green color. If too thin, the roots will be exposed to too much air and light.

"Keep the tray moist by sprinkling once or twice daily with water containing chloride of lime at the rate of a heaping teaspoonful to a pail (three gallons) of water. The chloride of lime will keep down mold growth.

"For the first two or three days, or until sprouting is definitely noticed, keep the tray in subdued light. After this, place it near a sunny window so it will receive as much light as possible. The stronger the light the higher the vitamin A content. Slow growth in a cool room is better than rapid growth at high temperatures."

The one drawback of sprouted grains is the space required to grow them. However, Dr. Taylor estimates that a total of 10 square feet of sprouting area, divided in three parts and used in rotation, will produce from 1 to 2½ pounds of seedlings daily, or enough for 20 to 50 hens.

"That reminds me, Mac, we ought to order our taxes into the party this year."

U.S.D.A. Has 4,000 Strains Of Barley in Collection

A collection of about 4,000 established varieties and strains of barleys from all over the world is maintained by the U. S. department of agriculture to facilitate the breeding of better barleys for different parts of the country. The only larger collection is reported in Russia. Typical of the work of government cereal specialists and barley breeders is the experiment now going on to develop new varieties of barley resistant to the green bug or aphid, which in 1942 caused a loss of more than $3,000,000 in Texas and Oklahoma barley fields.

Phenothiazine Expels Many Intestinal Parasites

Phenothiazine is today the most widely used of all drugs for the removal of internal parasites of farm animals. In less than five years this synthetic coal-tar derivative has proved the effectiveness of its anthelmintic action against most of the economically important stomach and intestinal roundworms. It is used for many kinds of livestock and is extremely effective.

THIEVES SWAP STOLEN CARS IN BOYNE CITY

Persons or a person yet unknown stole a car in Petoskey, last week, drove it to Boyne City, parked it alongside the Masonic hall and took in exchange the best car they could find standing there with a full gas tank. Their choice happened to be J. R. Dunn's private possession, bearing license number PW 11-63 — a Chevrolet coupe. State police are working on the case and all stations have been notified to be on the lookout for this car.

Hydro Electric Power Facilities At Sault Ste. Marie

For the past several years many people especially in the Upper Peninsula, have been concerned about the problem of continued development of hydro-electric power in Sault Ste. Marie.

Approximately 40 years ago, the Federal Government built a hydro electric power plant on the locks at the Soo, which now produces 4,500 kilowatts. Through a lease entered into 40 years ago with the Edison Sault Electric Company, this Company operates the Government plant and provides power for the government locks and for commercial distribution throughout the lower counties of the Upper Peninsula extending roughly as far west as Schoolcraft County and as far north as Alger County. At the present time, the Edison Sault Electric Company has a peak load of somewhere around 10,000 kilowatts. The old Government plant is in very bad physical condition with a part of it liable to fail at any time due to the relatively poor quality of the concrete of which it was constructed back about 1906 or 1907, and should now be replaced.

Relies On Diesels and Steam

The Edison Sault Electric Company has found it necessary in order to meet its requirements to rely on energy developed by diesel electric plants at Manistique, St. Ignace and at Mackinac Island, and a second-hand steam generating plant in Sault Ste. Marie itself. The 40-year lease which the Government granted originally to the Edison Sault expired two years ago but was extended for a two-year period which is due to expire July 1st of this year.

Back in 1941, during the 77th Congress, after considerable study the Chief of Engineers of the Army recommended the construction of a new power plant at the foot of the Falls in the St. Marys River at Sault Ste. Marie, to utilize the entire flow of the river to which the United States is entitled under its treaty with Canada. That power plant was to have had a total installed capacity of about 44,000 kilowatts and was to be constructed in two steps, the first step being an installation of 14,000 kilowatts.

Authorization of this large Government power plant was objected to in the Committee on Rivers and Harbors because it would have enforced abandonment of the power plant and power canal, privately constructed, owned and operated by the Michigan Northern Power Company, a subsidiary of the Union Carbide Company. Consequently the power plant item was omitted from the 1941 Rivers and Harbors Bill. The latter two companies between them pay approximately 60 per cent of the taxes needed to run the City of Sault Ste. Marie and approximately 40 per cent of the taxes collected in Chippewa County. Therefore, if we are to maintain the sound economy of this City and County, we as legislators here in Washington must see to it that insofar as we are capable of legislating, nothing must be done to interfere with the continued operation of the Union Carbide organization.

A Modified Proposal

When the Committee on Rivers and Harbors renewed hearings in October 1943 on the new Rivers and Harbors Bill, which recently passed the House, the War Department submitted a modified proposal which was for the authorization at the present time of only the first step, consisting of an installation of 14,000 kilowatts. This installation would provide power for operating the locks and dam at the Soo and would also provide all the power needed at the present for sale to the general public. The new power plant item was not included in the Bill as it passed the House, because our Michigan Member on the Committee, the Honorable George Dondero, wished to assure himself that it would not jeopardize the continued operation of the Michigan Northern Power and Union Carbide plants, upon which the life of Sault Ste. Marie is so largely dependent. It has now been concluded that the construction of the 14,000 kilowatt plant would not interfere with the continued successful operation of the Union Carbide interests and thus the past week, the aid of Senator Vandenberg was solicited in seeking authorization, in the form of an amendment to the Rivers and Harbors Bill now before the Senate Committee on Commerce, for the construction of the first step. The Senator has assured me he would cooperate and do what he can to bring about the adoption of such an amendment to the bill.

At a parliamentary maneuver in the event such an amendment is refused by the Senate or conferees, I introduced a bill, H.R. 4633, on April 19th providing for authorization to construct a 14,000 kilowatt plant in line with the recommendations of the Army Chief of Engineers. This work, of course cannot be done during this time of war due to the shortage of manpower and critical materials, but if the legislation is provided it can be built in the immediate post-war period. When this plant is constructed, it will be of sufficient size to provide in one unit a definite and adequate source of power supply for the people of the Soo and those sections of the Upper Peninsula heretofore so reliably served by the Edison Soo Electric Co. and its REA contemporary, the Cloverland Electric Cooperative.

fish tug, of sturdy construction and of greater speed than those generally in use, that could be manufactured by assembly line method, thereby reducing costs and the period required for completion of the vessels at one and the same time. Careful investigation of conditions in the fishing industry has convinced Mr. Kaunitz that commercial fishing is to assume ever greater importance in these times of scarce and rationed foods and that there is and will continue to be a real demand for a tug such as he proposes to manufacture. Orders will be secured in advance for a number of these tugs sufficient to insure uninterrupted production.

With this project in mind and a couple of anticipated government contracts for further encouragement, the Charlevoix Wood Products Company is moving to secure frontage of 120 feet on Round Lake as a location for the new plant.

Progress of leveling off the new site will be commenced at the earliest possible moment, simultaneously with the erection of a dry kiln plant. More machinery was purchased, recently, and additional lumber to take care of the large contract for store fixtures on which the plant is now working.

soldiers could have shaken hands with them, the sergeant said — providing they had cared to! He mentioned Carlton Smith, Bob Heise, Frank Pop and Orin Sutton as members of his outfit and recalled the fact that both Pop and Sutton had been wounded. After Buna, Mutchett, was sent back to Australia for a short rest before rejoining his company. He described the Saidor campaign as a pushover, compared to Buna.

Rather Reticent

Dave's reactions to his experiences were quite interesting. Of course, he did not go into detail. As he said, newspapers could tell the public back home much more than the men returning on furlough dared to, as the latters' utterances, not being subject to censorship, might reveal important military information which, to the uninformed speaker, might seem harmless and of no particular value to anyone. Then, again, he said —to relate actual battle experiences was to awaken extremely painful memories and conjure up visions of horror which the soldier would rather forget. It was pretty tough, he averred, to lie in a foxhole for hours on end alongside the bodies of one's comrades, with whom he had lived and worked for months and come to feel friendship and affection for, and not be able to give them even a decent burial.

Asked, if in his opinion, men would come back from their harrowing experiences after the war materially changed in nature and in their attitude toward life, Sergeant Matchett said he believed that it would depend on the kind of an individual a man was. All, he thought, would grow more or less hard, as you had to be hard and put sentiment aside in order to survive. Most men, he thought had the objective attitude toward their unpleasant task — a dirty job to be performed thoroughly and as quickly as possible.

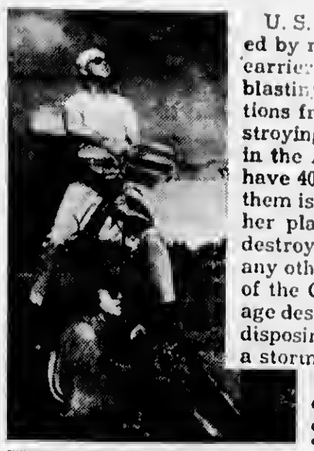
Saw No Glamor

Clare Myers, also arrived in San Francisco, lately, and came on through by way of Cleveland and Detroit, to pay a short visit to his uncle, Fred S. Myers. Clare, a graduate of C. H. S., class of 1921, has been located on Johnson island in the Pacific, near the immortal Wake, as resident maintenance supervisor of equipment for the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Mr. Myers commented on the complete absence of grass skirt and ukelele romance described so luringly in popular fiction. He did not recommend the South Sea Islands as places of permanent residence. The aboriginal inhabitants of the island, he said, were very amiable and easy to get along with. Many of them, however, had Japanese blood in their veins and these would bear watching.

Still on official business for the CAA, Myers left last week for Detroit, en route for Seattle. Alaska, he said, would probably be his next field of operations.

This Card Is an Ace



U. S. navy task forces, spearheaded by modern, hard-hitting aircraft carriers, are ranging the Pacific, blasting Japanese island fortifications from Wake to Rabaul and destroying German submarine activity in the Atlantic. At this writing we have 40 such carriers. Tops among them is the U. S. S. Card which, with her planes and escort vessels, has destroyed more submarines than any other unit in naval history. One of the Card's escorts was the over-age destroyer Boris which sank after disposing of two Nazi submarines in a stormy sea.

Left: Signal officer at stern of carrier orders pilot of an incoming plane to cut throttle. "Talker" in foreground relays orders from the captain.

This is what the pilot sees as he turns for a landing on the deck of the Card. At a higher level the flight deck of a carrier appears as the side of a match box.

Top: Torpedo planes and dive bombers on the flight deck of an aircraft carrier. Bottom: From the bridge of his carrier this captain conducts the many activities which are necessary to operate the complex mechanism of his craft. The Card, which was converted from a merchant hull, is an escort carrier of the type known as "baby flat top." Carriers are enabling our forces to control the sky from the moment they move into a new area.

Another take-off is under way. This navy Hellcat is going to help ruin a Jap Pacific base.

Studebaker Champion a money-saver says Civil Air Patrol pilot

"MY 1940 Studebaker Champion has traveled more than 110,000 tough miles," reports Civil Air Patrol pilot Lieutenant J. E. McGuiggan of Squadron 3 who is employed by Universal Studios of St. Paul, Minnesota.

"I average 25 miles to the gallon and my original tires stood up well over 60,000 miles. Of all the cars I've owned, this Champion is easily the most satisfactory and economical."

From coast to coast, it's the same story these war days—tires last longer, gas goes further, repairs are required less frequently in a Studebaker, thanks to advanced engineering principles and quality materials and craftsmanship.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"We can't argue with the Judge on that point, can we Mabel? It's not fair to penalize the many for the actions of the few."

"That, folks, is exactly what we would be doing in this country if we ever voted for prohibition again. Authorities who have made a careful study of the problem, report that only about 5% of those who drink abuse the privilege occasionally... 95% drink sensibly. Probably doesn't compare with the number of folks who overeat and do other things to excess. Prohibition certainly isn't the answer. It's not that simple. We had nearly 14 years proof of that, didn't we?

"The real answer is education and better control. In fact, the responsible members of the distilling industry are working constantly toward that end. They don't want anybody to abuse the use of their product any more than the three of us do."

"If everybody would take that sensible attitude, Judge, and cooperate as more and more are now doing, we'd be a lot better off a lot quicker."

Nancy Lee Frye, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Frye, who live in a trailer camp near Utica, Michigan, where Mr. Frye is employed, met with sudden death a week ago last Friday, when she ran out onto the highway near where the family was camped and was struck down by a passing car.

The mother and two children were coming out of a field onto the highway and, in climbing the fence, Mrs. Frye put Nancy over first and then turned her attention to the other child. It was then that Nancy ran out onto the road.

Funeral and interment were at Utica. The child was a granddaughter of Mrs. Marie Arvilla Hull, formerly of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. John McCall and daughter, Mrs. Willard Taylor, of Traverse City, accompanied by their two sons, Billy of Detroit and Lt. Donald of Lincoln, Neb. and the former's sister, Mrs. James Tree of Detroit, called at the home of Frank Richardson and family on Tuesday afternoon of last week.

Walter and Fred Ross returned home on Thursday of last week, from Bay City, where they attended the funeral of their brother Frank Ross. This community extends its sincere sympathy to the Ross family.

This community was shocked at the sudden death of Frank Ross, brother of Walter and Fred Ross, who passed away in a hospital at Bay City at the age of 76. Mr. Ross was visiting relatives in Bay City, where he had lived until 15 years ago, when he came north and made his home with Walter.

Surviving besides two brothers of Norwood, are three sons, William, Fred and Ernest and two daughters, Mrs. Jane Jacobs and Mrs. Viola Hope and one sister, Mrs. Rosa Huggard, all of Bay City.

Funeral services were conducted on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from the Bay City funeral home with burial in Oakridge cemetery at Bay City.

Occurring concurrently with the local fires was the total destruction of the Louis Boyer home, near Ironton, a bad grass fire at the Coulter farm, just south of town on Ferry Avenue, and a number of grass fires in the country, one of them a bad one, covering some 100 acres in Charlevoix township west of the Norwood road.

LETTERS FROM THE ARMY CAMPS

here under the set-up we have, but what it will be like with field ranges I can't imagine." Let's hope it won't be too tough.

A communication from Lt. Col. Airel B. Cooper states that he has been assigned to the staff of Maj. Gen. J. A. Anderson, Commanding General of the Tenth Army Corps, as his Chief Signal Officer.

Col. Cooper reports that he received many telephone calls from former Charlevoix people while on duty in Washington.

We had an inquiry about your whereabouts Colonel, from an old roommate of yours at West Point, Major Anderson, now commander of the base at Sioux City, Idaho. At the moment, your present address is speeding westward enroute to the Major in the possession of Sgt. Bernard Foster, stationed at Sioux City, who happened to be home on a short furlough last week.

Pvt. Elmer E. Poole writes from Las Vegas, Nev. "Hi, everybody, just a line to let you know how things are with me, I've just completed 12 weeks of Armament school at Lowry Field and now I'm to start 7 weeks in gunnery school here. On our way here from Colorado we came through the Rocky Mountains and are they ever high and full of tunnels. Altogether we went through 33, ons of them 7 miles long. Also saw the Great Salt Lake in Utah.

You don't know how much the paper helps the fellows who are away from home. It ist's us know what is going on. I'm sure every fellow enjoys it as much as I do. Thanks a million for sending it.

As Ever,

Sgt. H. Keith Wagner writes from "Somewhere in England:" "Now that I'm settled, for a breathing spell at least, will send you my new address. I surs hope my paper starts coming regularly from now on, for a guy gets lonesome for news of the old home town.

I wish I could tell you a bit about my work here, but you know how it is in regard to that. I can tell you, though, that the scenery here is beautiful, almost as beautiful as northern Michigan, but not quite. We have had no snow and little cold weather, so we can't kick.

In a nearby town the other day, I ran across the names of the Drost brothers (Cecil and Willard) in the Red Cross visitors book. Also saw Lyla Miles for a long chat. Small world you know.

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the CSO for their kind deeds and thoughts and the Kiwanis club for their nice Christmas card. Thank you again for the paper. Will see you in 194?

Yours, Sgt. Keith Wagner."

The Drost brothers you mentioned are in northern Ireland. No doubt had been to England on furlough.

TROUT FISHING SHOULD BE FINE

NO HEAVY RAINS OR SNOW AND FEWER DUCKS

Last Winter Displayed Features Highly Favorable To Trout Development Here

In the absence of heavy rains, or snow, anglers' prospects seem excellent, the conservation department reports. Plantings of legal size trout are well advanced in all trout waters and further plantings will be made, particularly in advance of the Memorial Day and Fourth of July holidays.

Boats are being used this year to effect wider distribution of fish in larger streams.

Trout lakes will be less affected than will streams by adverse weather conditions prior to the opening of the season. In event of heavy rains, small spring-fed creeks will offer better fishing than will larger streams which carry much surface drainage and are subject to roil. Bait fishing is apt to prove more successful than fly fishing, especially if weather and water are cold.

In addition to the plantings, the trout carry-over from last season

COMFORT WROTE, MacARTHUR SANG

Both Local Girls, But Were Not Known To Each Other

Word was recently received at this office from Mrs. Roy MacArthur (the former Mildred Eckinger of this city) that, at a recent recital sponsored by the St. Cecilia Society of Flint, where she now resides, she sang a number entitled, "Carina (Beloved)", which is the composition of Miss Annabel Comfort, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lou Comfort of this city.

Mrs. MacArthur stated that, while there were several of her Charlevoix friends in her audience who knew Miss Comfort, personally, she herself had never had the pleasure of her acquaintance, a fact which she regretted, as she liked the latter's composition immensely and enjoyed singing it.

MARRIED FIFTY-FIVE YEARS AGO FRIDAY

Alonzo and Ada Powers Have Come A Long Way Together

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Powers, well-known Charlevoix residents, will celebrate their 55th wedding anniversary on Friday. They were married in Goshen, Indiana, on May 5, 1889, where they made their home until coming to Charlevoix in 1906. Mrs. Powers, the former Ada Lautzenheiser, was born in Goshen on November 11, 1871. Mr. Powers was born in Miami county, Ind., near Peru, on December 26, 1867. He operated a heating and plumbing business in Charlevoix until he retired eight years ago.

They have one son, Leo, of this city; two granddaughters, Mrs. Ted Cooper, of Detroit; and Dorothy Powers, yeoman 3c, of the WAVES, stationed at Cleveland, O.; one great granddaughter, Jaclyn Cooper, of Detroit. Another son, Joseph, lost his life in France in World War I.

Mr. and Mrs. Powers have made no plans for the day and hope to spend it quietly at home.

CSO TO REPORT ON ITS RECORD

SECOND ANNUAL MEETING TO CONVENE TUESDAY EVE

Public Organizations Asked To Send Representatives To Hear What Has Been Accomplished

The second annual meeting of the CSO will be held Tuesday evening, May 9th, at 8 o'clock at the City Hall.

Clubs, lodges, churches and other organizations have been extended a special invitation to send representatives to the meeting and the general public is invited to attend to hear reports of the past year's activities and plans for the coming year. Suggestions and constructive criticism will be welcomed by the committee which has directed the work this year.

Since its beginning, April 8th, 1942, the CSO has tried to unify Charlevoix's war effort. One of the greatest tasks has been in helping to maintain home ties for local men and women in the nations service and to offer all possible aid to those who are hospitalized. Send-off programs and gifts have been given all draft groups leaving the county since the time of its inception.

Organized sale of war bonds and stamps have been conducted each year by the CSO in a booth on Bridge street and during the winter at the Central drug store. When the weather permits the booth will again be placed on Main Street and staffed by volunteers.

The local USO center is being dismantled through the lack of navy personell. However, USO service is being maintained at the local coast guard station where a recreation room is in operation.

The success of the CSO has been due to the splendid cooperation of the citizens of Charlevoix and their continued loyal support is needed to help carry on future activities.

REBEKAHS PLAY CARDS AT MRS. JOE MOORE'S

The members of the Rebekah lodge gave a card party at the home of Mrs. Joe Moore on Friday evening. Five tables were in play with Mrs. Grant Crandall winning the bridge prize and Mrs. Earl Blood the pedro prize. Refreshments were served by the hostess after the games.

Achievement Festivities Thronged Charlevoix With Happy Youth, Saturday

The 4-H Club Spring Achievement Day held in the Charlevoix Gymnasium last Friday, April 28, proved to be one of the best ever held. Favored with a beautiful spring day and with great interest and enthusiasm, the various activities of the day solicited much favorable comment from those in attendance. As was expected, the number of articles exhibited was not as large as last year, but the quality of the work was of the usual high standard and the facilities available allowed ample space for the exhibits.

Promptly at 10:30, 400 boys and girls marched to the Palace Theatre where free movies were enjoyed. At 1:00 o'clock, following the noon lunch, a fine musical program was rendered by the Charlevoix high school band under the

MRS. NETTLETON COMPILES RECORD

Remarkable Local History Her Gift To Library

Charlevoix public library is in possession of a most remarkable book, a real treasure in the way of historical matter pertaining to the city and its environs.

This compilation is a 448-page, typewritten, an original and a carbon — and is the very painstaking work of Mrs. Rosa Nettleton of Charlevoix. The task of compiling and typing this material, every portion of which was done by the author, herself, consumed a year's time.

The subject matter consists of excerpts, some short, some long, from the old files of the Charlevoix Sentinel and was taken from what corresponded to the Courier's present "Lest We Forget" department. The articles in this book date between the years 1869 and 1906 and are fascinating to read, as they cover a very wide scope of activities occuring over the years and recorded by the fa-

LOCAL BOYS PLANT TROUT IN NEW YORK

Crandall and Finucan Stock A Pool At A City Hospital

Harold Cartier sends in the following item from the New York Tribune, of April 17, 1944:

"A small pond in Willow Brook Park, Halloran General Hospital, Staten Island, New York, has been stocked with 223 full grown brown and rainbow trout for the pleasure of convalescent soldiers. The catch in the project, according to Miss Marion Emerson, director of the Red Cross recreational program at the hospital, is that the trout will be caught with flies and nonbarbed hooks and every fish must be handled gently and tossed back quickly into the water."

Two of Charlevoix's" native sons," Mr. Cartier states, were in charge of the operation. Verle W. Crandall, regional supervisor of fish culture, Fish and Wildlife Department of the Interior, Boston, Massachusetts, and Richard Finucan, assistant at the hatcheries at Nashua, N. H. "They had transported the trout by truck from the home waters and were pleased that every one of their full-sized, rainbow-sided, United States government-nurtured charges arrived in good condition."

Verle Crandall will be remembered as the son of the late L. E. Crandall and brother of Mrs. Arthur Wexstaff of this city.

"Dick", Finucan is a son of the late, Captain William Finuenn, for many years a resident of this city. Both men are graduates of Charlevoix public schools.

TWO GIRLS AT TOP OF LIST

HOLD HIGHEST HONORS IN C. H. S. SENIOR CLASS

Miss Lucille May and Miss Ione Wickersham Come Closest To Four Point Mark

Of a Senior class of 37 members, Miss Lucille May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Raymond May receives highest honors this year, with a point rating of 3.89 out of a possible 4 points.

Miss May has shown much interest in the work of the 4-H club. Membership on the staff of the school paper, The Crimson Flash, has indicated an interest in journalism. Leadership in the Book club demonstrated a desire for much more than the usual assigned reading of regular classes. Consistent and excellent help in the production of both Junior and Senior plays was invaluable for the directors and cast concerned. Work in a local bank has given Miss May an opportunity to put into practice ideas of commercial courses that have been of such interest.

Miss Ione Wickersham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arlo A. Wickersham, receives second place honors with a point rating of 3.60 out of a possible 4 points. Much interest in the work of the Girl Scouts has absorbed considerable time for Miss Wickersham. Ability and enthusiasm as a seamstress won an appointment as a Red Cross sewing instructor. Additional all around ability has been in evidence by membership in the TNTM club, participation in the annual orations contest, generous aid in the class plays, much work on class committees and membership in the Book club.

A student's point rating is secured by assigning numbers as follows: A-4, B-3, C-2, D-1, E-0. An average for the total of all marks is secured.

Other students, whose scholastic work places them in the upper 10 of the class of 37 members, are Jean Cellner, Clara Cummings, Otto Harvey, Marie Jancha, Phyllis Martin, Carl Schulz, Lois Walstad and Virginia Young.

PARTY PROVED GREAT SUCCESS

CHARLEVOIX'S DETROITERS TURNED OUT IN FORCE

Over 100 Adults Assembled At Y. W. C. A. for Club's 13th Annual Event

In spite of a down-pour of rain all the afternoon and evening, the Thirteenth Annual Party of the Charlevoix-Detroit Club was held at the down-town branch of the Y. W. C. A., on Saturday evening, April 22, with an attendance of over 100 adults. From eight until ten o'clock, everybody was being tagged and turned loose to just nose around in the crowd and shake hands and reminisce. They had quite a different crowd, this year, because a large percentage of those who were present had never attended any of the previous parties.

Who's Who

One of the surprises of the evening was to have some folks from West Branch walk in, known to everyone as Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Dutton and some old reliables from Flint — Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Durance, Miss Emma Lou Du-

WILL BE NINETY-FOUR THURSDAY

William S. Gregory Is A Great-Grandpa Twenty-five Times

William S. Gregory, one of Charlevoix's oldest residents, will celebrate his 94th birthday anniversary on Thursday, May 4. Mr. Gregory was born in Chatham, Ont., Can., on May 4, 1850. He came to Detroit at the age of 14, and was first employed by the Michigan Central Railroad, which ran between Detroit and Battle Creek. Detroit was a new city at that time and Mr. Gregory hauled logs down what is now Fort street.

In 1866 he came by steamboat to Charlevoix, which was then known as Pine River. He worked at the Elk Rapids Iron Works, which was later moved to Ironton and then to Mancelona.

He married Ella Baker in 1874. They were married at the McGeagh Shingle Mill by Justice of the Peace, William John McGeagh. Shortly after their marriage, they took up a homestead in Redmond township in Emmet county, near where the village of Cross Village is now located. They were one of the first white families to go there when the place was still virgin forest and cut trees on their homestead to build their first home.

The family moved to a farm in Hayes township 37 years ago. Mrs. Gregory died in 1927. Mr. Gregory lived there until he came to Charlevoix to make his home in 1932. Since then he has spent summers on the farm which was operated by his son, William F. Gregory.

Of the family of ten children four are still living. They are: Clarence L. of Harbor Springs, William F., of Charlevoix, Mrs. Arlo (Irene) Crites and Mrs. Charles (Pearl) Spare, of Detroit. He also has 17 grandchildren and 25 great-grandchildren.

Mr. J. F. Scudder
Charlevoix Courier
Charlevoix, Michigan

Dear Mr. Scudder:

Of all surprises I have had, yesterday's topped them. The issue of October 27 "Courier" was received. Almost six months, but it arrived.

Lewis Brown looked me up about four weeks ago. His family wrote him that I was somewhere in Australia. It is a real joy when the lads look me up. He and some of his friends have been out twice and they are coming out again this week end. Lewis gets quite a kick out of the chicken dinners. The first time he was out, he said, "gosh, real Stateside chicken." He and his pals stay for the movies and then we played monopoly afterward.

Wendell Rehkopf, a Petoskey lad, who used to work for me at Belvedere Hotel, also came out to see me. His mother wrote that I was over here. Wendy is now an Ensign in the Navy and is stationed in the same area where Lewis is located. Wendy spent the day swimming and enjoyed the "Stateside" hot dog roast and buffet supper which we inaugurated at this club. Until a couple weeks ago we held this affair on our back lawn where we have a barbecue pit. Now that daylight saving has gone we have to hold it indoors.

I met Carleton Smith a few months ago, so this makes two boys from Charlevoix and one from Petoskey whom I have seen since being overseas. I saw Carleton about two weeks ago when I was on a trip north of here.

I read in the Courier that Ralph Nutter is somewhere in the Pacific. Have also read that Warren Duplessis is in this theatre. It would make me immensely happy if any of the boys from "the city beautiful," or locality, who are in the Southwest Pacific, would look me up. If they go to any American Red Cross and ask for me, on Headquarters Staff, they will be able to locate me.

recovered from this when she contracted pneumonia, and has been confined to the house, until last Friday, when she started out to visit a friend and was attacked by two dogs, tripping her feet from beneath her. She fell upon the dogs, was thrown several feet in the air and struck the pavement, cutting her eye quite badly and bruising her arm and shoulder.

The steamer, "City of Boyne", started on her daily trips between this port and Boyne City, Wednesday morning.

"Control money and you control all" — HITLER

Modern Germany is an example of the dangers of centralized control of money and credit. Hitler grabbed financial power as one of the first moves to dominate the nation. Many say "It can't happen here," but there are some who want it to happen and who are working toward that end. Every American should be on guard to prevent any attempt to "centralize" control of the country's banking machinery.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman Fred Bradley

Washington Saddened By Knox Death

Washington and the entire nation was shocked and saddened by the sudden and entirely unexpected death of Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox last Friday. Mr. Knox, although 70 years old, was an extremely active and energetic individual possessed of a warm smile and a most pleasant disposition even when being subjected to severe and occasionally caustic questioning before Congressional committees.

Personally, I have not always agreed with some of Mr. Knox's policies and certainly not with some of his many and occasionally untimely public utterances, such as for instance his boast, just prior to Pearl Harbor, that we could dispose of the Japanese Navy in a matter of two weeks — one in which to locate the enemy and the other to destroy them. However, Mr. Knox was highly respected as a courageous, capable administrator. The men in the Navy, the Coast Guard and the Marine Corps felt a great respect for his leadership. He was not one to spend all his time in his office relying on field reports from his subordinates, rather he was of the school of thought whose creed is "seeing is believing." Our Navy and our war effort profited greatly by his wisdom and his untiring devotion to duty. The Nation can ill afford to lose men of his character and ability in our greatest crisis.

With the passing of Frank Knox at 70 years of age comes another proof of the physical and mental strain under which wartime leaders are operating in Washington. It justly revives the question of the health of the President and health and advanced age of some others of his Cabinet and close advisers.

President In Poor Health

It is well known here in Washington that the President has been in poor health, suffering from a series of colds and bronchitis, almost constantly all winter. As I prepare this news letter on Saturday, the Associated Press carries a report from the President's secret southern retreat that he is bronzed and greatly improved in health after three weeks in the south but still his health is seemingly not sufficiently improved to permit him to attend the funeral of one of his most important Cabinet members to be held here in Washington, which has been enjoying our usual mild spring weather.

Vice President Wallace at 56 is noted for his good health and vigor, but Harry Hopkins at 54, the President's confident and adviser, has been in very poor health for many months and is now in the Mayo Hospital. With respect to the Cabinet: on their next birthdays, Secretary of War Stimson will be 77, Secretary of State Hull 73. These gentlemen are certainly at an advanced age where wartime Washington must put a terrific strain on their physical reserves. Secretary of Interior Ickes will be 71 and Secretary of Commerce Jones, 70. Both of these gentlemen likewise have a very important role in the war effort. Secretaries Perkins at 63, and Walker at 58, Morgenthau at 53, and Wickard at 52 all play relatively minor and thus less exacting and tiring roles in the war effort. And this reminds me of the fact that back in 1937, the President when seeking to change the complexion of the Supreme Court referred to the "nine old men" and suggested that a man was of little value after he became 70 and should retire. If he is of little value in peace time under no more serious mental strain than a jurist, one certainly must be concerned about the health and stamina of our present wartime Cabinet. War calls for experience — true — but modern war also calls for the virility of youth.

I want my Charlevoix friends to know that we are trying to do a worthwhile job for their boys overseas; I know the lads appreciate it. The satisfaction I get out of my job is the expression of joy on the boys' faces when they eat real American food. It has been quite a task teaching the Aussies to cook the "American way."

At this time I want to express my thanks to Luther Hannah for his message of February 11. Time for writing individual letters is very limited and I feel I can reach all my Charlevoix friends through the Courier. Thanks for sending your paper to me. It is like a "letter from home." Many times there is a lapse and some issues are missed, but the ones received are oh, so very welcome.

With kind regards for everyone.

Sincerely,
Henrietta Gravuer.

Pvt. Alexander J. McSauba, son of Daniel A. McSauba of 508 W. Newmnn St., Charlevoix, has recently received a short orientation course at an air service command station, "Somewhere in England," especially designed to help newly arrived air force soldiers prepare for a new kind of life in a combat theatre. He has been tutored in the English monetary system, life in a new country and a lot of other necessary information.

Private Lottie Budek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Budek of Bargess, Charlevoix, Michigan, is now stationed at the 231st Base Unit, CCTS (VH), Alamogordo, New Mexico, working in the capacity of the Adjutant's Secretary.

Pvt. Budek was born in Petoskey, Mich., and graduated from Petoskey high school, class of 1938. Upon graduation, she was employed by Allan McCune, Real Estate and Insurance Broker, as stenographer and book-keeper and continued in his employ for five and one-half years.

She is one of eight children. A younger brother has been in the United States Coast Guard for three and one-half years and holds the rank of Machinists Mate, 2nd Class.

Pvt. Budek enlisted in the WAC December 20, 1943. After completing her Basic Training at Fort Ogelthorpe, Ga., she was transferred to the Alamogordo Army Air Base and assumed her duties as Secretary to the Adjutant on March 23, 1943.

She is an ardent bowling enthusiast and rolls an average score of 140. She is also quite fond of dancing and is contemplating using the Base Swimming Pool at every available moment as she is considered somewhat of a swimmer.

Pvt. Budek feels that she can do the most toward speeding Victory while in the service of the WAC. She considers the Army as affording her a wonderful opportunity toward further advancing her training in the stenographic field.

Pfc. Rolland J. McCann, of St. James, writes from India to give us a new address. He says: "Just a few lines to say I am in India. Have had no mail since last fall, so will be overjoyed to get the news again. Life here is much different from the States. We do get to see some of the movie stars who are touring this area. We recently saw Paulette Goddard, Bill Gargan, Keenan Wynn and others. Best wishes for a pleasant summer—we have summer all the time over here."

Sgt. Frank Pop Jr., who is somewhere in New Guinea, sends us the following letter: "I thought it was about time I put my two cents worth in the good ole Courier again. I want to take this opportunity to thank you and all the people who make it possible for me to receive the paper each week. I can't tell you much about what I'm doing, but you can probably figure that I'm at it again, trying to get my quota. Tojo comes over pretty often to drop a few eggs. It's usually around midnight, so he doesn't do much damage, but he does rob us of some valuable sleep.

While I'm at it I'd like to thank the Kiwanis club and the Blue Star Mothers and also some of my friends who sent me greeting cards. I would also like to say hello to all the men and women in the armed forces and wish them luck."

Sgt. Lyle Miles sends the following letter from England: "It seems that I never have as much time to write to you as I would like. Time seems to stand still while, in reality, it is flying by mighty fast. I certainly shouldn't forget to write to Charlevoix, because they definitely haven't forgotten me or any other person in the service. A couple of years ago I never would have dreamed that at this time I'd be writing from England, I had always wanted to see the place but never thought I'd have the chance. It's ok here. I'd like to send my best to all the fellows I can't write to."

Pvt. Donald Stevens sends us the following note from Hawaii: "I should have done this a long time ago, but haven't had the time until now. I do enjoy the paper and want to thank you for it.

The army life couldn't be better. I've been in eighteen months and out here ten and it seems like I arrived yesterday. If we take time out to rest, payday has gone past.

The weather is fine here now, but a month ago we had a wet period. At certain places on the island they have as much as five or six hundred inches of rainfall a year. I received a nice letter from Mr. Hannah and all the Charlevoix people. It is surprising to see the number of new people who have moved to Charlevoix since I left there.

Time for lunch so will close. I'd like to hear from my buddy, Carl Rowe. I had his address but lost it. Guess I'm not a good GI, for everything I have is thrown every place. Lots of luck to everyone at home. Hope to see you in '45."

Franklin Noonan, C. Mo, M.M., U. S. Coast Guard, has arrived in North Africa, according to a wire received recently by Mrs. Noonan.

A card from William K. Bogart, S1c, notified us of a change of address. He writes: "Just want to say hello to everyone back home and to tell you that the Courier is coming regularly. Helen is still with me and we enjoy reading it together. Noticed in the last issue where Mr. Paddock is going to be the new Captain of our base here. Thanking you I remain. W. K. Bogart, S1c, C.B.M.U. No. 593,P6T4, F.P.O. San Francisco, Calif."

A letter from Pvt. Ed Gengle, who is now stationed at Fort Warren, Wyo. brings us the following message: "I've kept just one jump ahead of the Courier, but not through any fault of mine. Uncle Sam has given me three different sets of orders in the last month or so. It looks as though I'll have a home, for a few weeks at least, at over 6,000 feet above sea level, where you get a breath of air after inhaling five or six times. When I get back to sea level, I'll be able to do the mile in nothing flat. Think Coleman could use an extra man on the track team? I'm supposed to go into tech-training in refrigeration here. Don't ask what it's about, for it's all very new to me. Thanks to you and all who make it possible for me to receive the Courier.

Pvt. Ed Gengle."

Charles Bergmann, S1c, of the U. S. Navy, who is an armed guard on a merchant vessel, writes the following from an east coast port after returning from a five months trip: "Received all the papers the other day. Got a big laugh out of Moppy Holm's letter and the item about Don Meggison's car going in the lake. I sure enjoyed those few days at home, recently, but I couldn't stay long enough. I saw Pee Wee (Bud) Webster in Baltimore, a few days after I got back. He came aboard with me and stayed over night and we had a grand time talking things over. Hope these lines will pass. Guess I'm the same as ever,

Charles E. Bergmann, S1c."

Thanks for your letters, Shod. How about hearing from the other Bergmanns in the service. Haven't heard from Bud and Big for ages.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bergmann have received a letter from their son, Pvt. Eugene Bergmann telling them he is stationed somewhere in England.

Storing Combustible Liquids

FIRE! Fire! That's a dreaded cry on any farm. It often means buildinge loat, oquipment gone, crops destroyed or homes burned. And all too frequently it means misery and suffering for the family.

Records show the most common cause of fatal burns on farms is the improper use and storage of combustible liquids. Fires thus caused cost over $9,000,000 last year. So, it's clear that more care is needed in handling such liquids as gasoline, kerosene, oil and naphtha.

Every farmer has almost daily use for these liquids. To protect your property, you can build simple, inexpensive storage facilities, which require little or no critical materials, by using asbestos cement board and asbestos shingles.

The best plan is to store your combustible liquids in an outside shed, such as the one shown. This is the only safe way if you store considerable quantities.

If you keep less than 30 gallons on hand, it may be stored inside in a suitable cabinet.

A good cabinet consists of a frame constructed of 2 x 2's with double walls of asbestos board. The door or lid should also be of double construction, with at least a 1½-inch air space. The door sill should be raised about two inches above the bottom of the cabinet.

All storage space and individual containers should be clearly marked: "Combustible — Keep Fire Away," and every member of the family should be instructed in the use of dangerous liquids.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Parrot gets Will Dudley's Goat

Will Dudley never liked his wife's pet parrot. Claimed the parrot called him "Stinky"—and ate his pipe tobacco. And the Missus said it served Will right . . . she'd told him not to smoke his pipe indoors.

To make her point, the Missus grabs Will's pipe and throws it out the window. So Will grabs the parrot and throws him out too. Looks like unpleasantness—till in comes the parrot with Will's corn cob in his mouth. (And whistling "Home Sweet Home," Will claims.)

Well, Will and his wife both bust out laughing . . . and made peace over a friendly glass of beer, allowing how it's pretty silly getting mad at one another's differences.

From where I sit, that's a mighty happy ending. If all of us would live and let live in a spirit of tolerance—whether it's tolerance for a parrot or a pipe—we'd be a whole lot happier and better off.

leadership of their director, Mr. Beach. Following this, the dress review took place with approximately 75 girls appearing on the stage in one group wearing the clothes they had completed in their project activity. This always proves to be one of the highlights of the entire day and gives the girls' friends a thrill to see this exhibition. When one stops to consider that some of the girls are only nine and ten years of age, the handiwork is remarkable.

A short address of welcome was given by Harry Bingham, high school principal, who very warmly congratulated the farm youth for their contributions. Two majorettes, Phyllis Davis and Pat Brndley from Boyne City, demonstrated baton twirling.

A. G. Kettenun, State 4-H club leader, next gave a few well chosen remarks pertaining to the high quality work being accomplished by the thousands of boys and girls who make up the 4-H club army. At the conclusion, he announced the winners who had done the outstanding club work during the winter. Miss Lois Corbett, Associate State Club Leader, announced the members who appeared on the County Honor Roll.

The concluding event was a 4-H citizenship program which depicted the responsibilities of all folks making up the American home. All of the various projects carried on were portrayed by a Club member dressed to illustrate the project. The program was short and snappy and received the applause of an appreciative audience. The following is a list of the various Club members whose work was of sufficiently high standard and quality to be included on the County Honor Roll:

Corporal Kirwan Mulligan is now stationed at a B-17 Flying Fortress base connected with the Eighth Air Force Bomber Squadron's activities, "Somewhere in England." He is assigned to a Chemical Warfare company and has charge of the shipping and receiving of incendiary bonds used by the bombers operating from this station. Corporal Mulligan has been in the European theatre of operations over six months.

An interesting personal letter from Ensign Clifford McKibbin, Jr., from which we quote, "Just finished Ordnance School two weeks ago and have been assigned to the Bureau of Ordnance, Advanced Base program, which initially involves some intensive training in New York, Washington, Boston, Great Lakes and Pontiac. If we can find a place, Jane, the children and I will be in Pontiac for about seven weeks, at which time we hope to get up to Charlevoix." If you can include Charlevoix in the itinerary of this "Cooks Tour", your many friends will welcome you here. Ed.

Buster (Clyde) Barnhart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barnhart, has enlisted in the Merchant Marine service and is now stationed at Charleston, W. Va.

AAA FULFILLS PROMISE TO COUNTY'S FARMERS

Last week the AAA starting the potato price support program, loaded four 40 ton coal cars with potatoes destined to become alcohol. This was only the starting, however, as it is expected that about 20 cars will be shipped from Charlevoix county.

Last year when the AAA Community Committeemen planned with farmers their 1943 productions, they assured the farmer that he would receive the support price for his potatoes. The farmers patriotically planted more potntoes. A very favorable season nationally produced a record crop and also a record surplus. In order not to waste any of these surplus potatoes they are now being converted into starch, alcohol and dairy feed.

"THANKS for giving the boys a break"

You do some one a real favor when you stay off Long Distance lines from 7 to 10 at night. When a lot of people do that, a lot of service men's calls get through quicker. . . . The soldiers and sailors—their folks back home—and the telephone company are all grateful for your help. . . . So tonight and every night, "give seven to ten to the service men." That's about the best time they have to call.

cile (if sometimes vitriolic pen) of the Sentinel's editor, the late Willard A. Smith. Two of the longest and historically most valuable articles in the compilation, for example, are the history of Ignatius Petoskey (Neyus Pe-to-se-ga) and the Mormon invasion of the mainland under the notorious "King" Strang.

The book is beautifully bound in green, with gold lettering (both copies) and is entitled "Charlevoix, The Beautiful", followed by Mrs. Nettleton's name and the word, "Sentinel", below that. The binding was done by the Wagenwoord Company of Lansing and paid for with moneys left by the Historical Society of Charlevoix, at the time the Society was dissolved, and turned over to the public librarian to be used for the purpose of purchasing books on Michigan history and preserving Charlevoix history. Miss Minnie E. Payton, who was entrusted with the responsibility of having the books properly bound, selected green for the color, believing that color appropriately representative of Michigan's trees.

Within the covers, first comes a dedication to Minnie E. Payton, then the foreword and then the first of the three synopses, or alphabetical indexes. The year of the occurrence of each item appearing is given, as is also the date of the issue of the Sentinel from which it was taken.

The original of the two books is kept in the safe and is not for inspection. The copy may be seen and read on application to the librarian, Neither, however, may be taken from the library.

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

Can Michigan escape from being caught in the post-war undertow back to isolationism?

This question suggested itself a few nights ago. The occasion was a private dinner in Detroit given for Senator Homer Ferguson, Michigan's junior senator who is currently traveling about the country with members of the Truman committee investigating waste in fulfillment of government war contracts.

Senator Ferguson was telling the dinner guests — and quite "off the record" — about some of the Truman committee's findings. One of these, which temporarily must remain unidentified, was about negligence and waste of rationed food in a warehouse at one of the nation's leading cities. The senator proved his statement with photographs, showing how water had flooded the warehouse floor and ruined large quantities of stored food. A side wall of the warehouse, 50 per cent open to the outside weather, resembled a venetian blind more than anything else.

Explaining that the committee investigated only alleged violations of government contracts, the senator said that such waste perhaps was not representative of all contracts. Frankly, he said, he knew about only what he had seen for himself.

We could readily picture the sensational newspaper story that would land on front pages when this, and other similar disclosures, are officially made at Washington. Congressmen will roar. Gerald L. K. Smith and Father Coughlin will orate once more, and "America First!" will again be heard.

It was only a few years ago that the Michigan congressmen at Washington, by almost landslide proportion, voted against the draft. They opposed lend-lease. They stood firm for isolationism as a means of keeping the United States out of the current war.

As a matter of fact, the isolationist had things pretty much to himself in the 1940 presidential campaign. We were for lend-lease, but we also pledged that American boys would not be called again to fight on foreign soil, a statement that has a faint echo of the 1916 campaign slogan of Woodrow Wilson who "kept us out of war."

Being an isolationist in the days when we looked upon the Atlantic ocean as our safety fire-wall against danger was merely the normal state of mind for the average American.

We remember a prophetic statement made by a Canadian newspaper editor while we were accompanying a group of American newsmen on a tour of Ontario in June of 1939. This editor of a Midland, Ontario newspaper gave a short after-dinner talk. With a smile, he said: "You have left the diving board, but you haven't yet reached the water. As a dive into war, it is the world's slowest motion plunge in history."

We recall an editorial in the Ottawa Citizen, liberal daily, which reviewed the American-Canadian situation and concluded: "There can no longer be doubt about it. President Franklin Roosevelt is taking the United States into war against Germany."

The treachery at Pearl Harbor put a stop to any dissention or disagreement we may have had about involvement in war.

Our nation had been attacked. We were forced to fight.

The anti-Roosevelt critics have no answer for that, and there has been discussion at Washington among Republican leaders whether it would be wise to inject the Roosevelt policies of foreign relations into the 1944 campaign. With a war mounting to its European climax, 1944 appears to us to be no time to rehash the causes of war. The big channel invasion is imminent. And we have a long war ahead of us in the Pacific before the Japan empire is liquidated.

Some Republican politicians would even raise the old bogey of communism, recalling how the communist leader, Browder, recently endorsed the president for a fourth term. Others believe that the Republican nominee should rally the Polish population to the party banner, accusing the president of failure to support the cause of Poland against Soviet Russia.

All of these things, potential arguments in the 1944 campaign, could have only one effect: Encourage the return to isolationism.

Recalling how World War I was followed by a popular reaction against the frustration of being regulated, ending with the election of Harding on a platform of "returning to normalcy", we are inclined at this moment to concede the probability that history will repeat itself following World War II.

Such reaction against regimentation and waste of war is bound to come.

In the opinion of Senator Ferguson it will be "terrific". As for the personal beliefs of the senator with regard to world cooperation or isolationism, we do not want to imply anything that is not written here. He is worried and concerned about it, and he is very frank to say so.

Ferguson pointed to the Willkie defeat in Wisconsin, and he said that while the Truman committee was in Milwaukee, it was very evident that the trend was strong against Willkie's views that the United States must help police the world through some kind of international cooperation.

Then we recalled a striking sentence written by Leland Stowe, war correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, in his new book, "They Shall Not Sleep." Stowe, too, is concerned about whether we shall win the war, but lose the peace. He writes:

"Inevitably what we do now will save or betray tomorrow's peace. And because I am a reporter, and because the schools of nations and of peoples has been a stern school, and usually a cruelly realistic school — because of these matters of experience, I know that the odds are definitely against Americans winning the peace.

"As a people we are still not prepared to play a role of leadership in the world. We are not accustomed to see and reject the little betrayals of our government and our national representatives. We have little contact with peoples across the oceans whose aspirations and blunderings, desires and blindnesses, are so much like our own. We are less used to hardship than they. We are not used to sacrifices for the nation's good. We are more interested in the price of corn or the level of the stock market, in time-and-one-half overtime or in larger income, than we are interested in making certain that we do not have to fight another war in thirty years.

"It is our supremely human habit to honor our dead — but like the other peoples of the world, we do not know how to listen to our dead."

If Stowe's gloomy judgement is right, and history would seem to support his conclusion, then we are due to ignore our dead once more. We are going to pronounce the penalty of death on many Michigan lads, now in kindergarten or first grade.

Our only hope is that the light of knowledge and love of Christ may lead us to understanding and tolerance of our world neighbors. This is the real challenge of tomorrow's invasion casualty lists.

USE MORE FRESH EGGS AND SAVE OTHER FOODS

Housewives of this area can make an important contribution to the war effort and save ration points by using more fresh eggs in daily meals, an official of the nation's largest food distributor announces.

"Our company is glad to cooperate with other retailers and governamental agencies in the nationwide campaign to move surpluses in eggs into consomers' hands to avoid waste of this essential food," said C. Wall, vice president in charge of A & P Tea Company operations in this area. "Housewives can help conserve less plentiful foods by using more of the nutritions, non-rationed fresh eggs at this time."

The company official reported a seasonal surplus had resulted from the patriotic response of poultrymen who, despite manpower and feed shortages, stepped up egg production to all-time records.

The company is aiding the egg merchandising drive through newspaper advertising and store posters and displays which call attention to the fact that eggs are abundant in supply, of fine quality and an economical food.

JAMAICAN NEGROES WORK IN MICHIGAN

Imlay City will see the first contingent of Jamaican negroes—two hundred in number — to work under contract of the Eastern Michigan Growers' Association. They will arrive about May 15. Members of the association decided against using war prisoners for the work. They will work only for growers contracting for their services and will be guaranteed an average of $3.00 daily wage.

Charged Fence Wire Solves Problem

Single Barbed Strand Is Sufficient

An electric fence made of a single strand of wire is being suggested by Floyd W. Daffee, agricultural engineer at the Wisconsin college of agriculture, as one way for farmers to meet their present fencing needs.

Many farmers are unwilling to buy expensive new fencing which besides being costly due to wartime restrictions may be of inferior quality. Daffee reports that lots of fencing has been taken down on Wisconsin farms along state highways and replaced by a single strand of electrified barbed wire.

The Wisconsin engineer sees a large measure of economy in installing an electric fence for the cost is only a matter of a few cents a rod, or but a fraction of the cost of woven wire fencing. The electric fence, of course, contains only one strand, compared to three or four up to six wires in the old barbed-wire fence. In addition, the farmer would have to buy a controller, but Daffee indicates that one controller will control miles of fence.

Other engineers are also warning against the purchase at present of any more wire fencing than is necessary. It is thought that the zinc coating now used due to wartime restrictions is not enough to protect the wire from rusting for any length of time.

In citing results of tests in New York state of 840 samples of fencing material, including much woven wire and barbed wire, one engineer reported that the tests reminded observers that the life of galvanized coating depends largely on the thickness of the zinc coat. It was revealed that the zinc wears off at a regular rate, and that the thinner the coating, the sooner the steel wire is exposed.

Samples of galvanized wire now under test at Cornell university have weights of zinc coating varying from two-tenths of an ounce to two ounces per square foot of wire surface. Rust never attacks wire until nearly all the zinc coating has worn away.

Cranberry Picking

Cranberries grow close to the ground in low and often marshy fields. They are harvested with a sort of scoop, somewhat resembling a wheat cradle, which is swung with two hands. Below is a machine developed in Massachusetts. The fingers on the big cylinder pick off the berries, and drop them into a hopper.

Vicland Oats Yields Heavily, Matures Early

The Vicland variety of oats was developed by the plant breeders of the Wisconsin agricultural experiment station and the U. S. department of agriculture. It is a short, medium stiff-strawed yellow oat. One of its chief advantages is that it matures early, thus ripening before the hot, dry weather of July and early August. Because it matures early, it has a much higher weight per bushel. It also has a high degree of resistance to rust and smuts.

Since Vicland does not grow so tall as the mid-season or late varieties and since it matures earlier, it is a much better companion crop for new seedings of grasses and legumes.

During this period when maximum feed production is so important, the use of superior varieties, such as Vicland oats, is an excellent farm practice.

New Treatment for 'Red' Water Is Developed

Experiment station representatives have found that rust in the water can be removed by running it through a tank containing graded limestone and gravel. It must be a special kind of limestone, however, they say. Materials needed include a tank, valves, pipes and fittings. These probably will cost about $50. If water is hard, but does not contain iron and carbon dioxide, this method is not applicable.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

National Income Reaches Record Level With Farm Total at $19,690,000,000; House Group Pigeonholes 4-F Draft; Snow, Floods Menace Midwest Farms

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

New Britain—Doughboys cluster around bogged jeep to give it lift from heavy New Britain mud after rain which stopped hostilities on both sides.

DRAFT:
4-Fs Spared

Declaring that selective service and the Manpower commission already possessed enough authority to deal with labor problems, Representative May (Ky.) announced that house military affairs committee pigeonholed the proposal to draft 4-Fs into work battalions if they failed to take essential employment.

"We heard testimony by army and navy officials that the manpower situation is critical, but then Manpower Commissioner McNutt told us there is no labor shortage and that new controls are not needed," Representative Costello (Calif.) said.

4-Fs could be influenced into entering essential war work if the army adopted a policy of inducting them for limited service if they remained in unimportant occupations, Representative Costello added.

Vets First, Ford Says

Declaring that civilians have "made a lot of money out of this war and the servicemen have made nothing," Henry Ford promised that vets would receive first call on employment in his plants when peace comes.

Henry Ford

Hoping that other industrialists would follow the same policy, Ford said that when his company starts producing cars again, all a vet need do is "to come in and go to work."

EUROPE:
Sevastopol Besieged

Their retreat across the Crimea ended, German and Romanian troops backed into the historic base of Sevastopol, while Russian forces pressed against the city's outer defenses and their aircraft trained their sights on Axis evacuation vessels in the harbor.

The Russian advance in the Crimea highlighted Europe's warfare, with U. S. and British bombers concentrating on the continued bombardment of German industries and communications in the west to prepare the invasion path, and Allied forces sparring in Italy for openings in the Nazi guard below Rome.

As Russia laid siege to Sevastopol, other Red forces encountered stiffening Axis resistance in Romania and southeastern Poland, where mixed German, Romanian and Hungarian armies went onto the offensive to launch local counterattacks.

Diplomats Curbed

Taking no chances on the leakage of any military information to the Axis, the British government prohibited the departure of any neutral diplomatic officials from the United Kingdom and also assumed censorship of any of their dispatches.

In taking the extraordinary action which was approved by the U. S. and Russia, the British explained that any leakage not only might impair Allied operations, but also might complicate relations with the countries whose nationals divulged any information.

The British action followed on the heels of the Allies' further restriction of communications with neutral Eire.

AUTO OUTPUT:
Waits on War

Sitting together in Washington, D. C., representatives of nine automobile companies and top executives of the War Production board huddled over plans for future resumption of civilian auto output, with emphasis on partial manufacture following the defeat of either Germany or Japan.

With the industry's manpower situation easing and companies fearing wholesale unemployment when munitions production tapers off, the executives returned to their plants to take under study requirements of materials, space and tools for resuming civilian output, and the time that would be needed to get machinery and set it up.

Although no quotas for different manufacturers were discussed, some executives favored a production of 2,000,000 cars during the early stages.

U. S. OIL:
More Seen

Possibilities of new discoveries and more efficient production methods should assure the U. S. of sufficient oil for the future, Socony-Vacuum President John A. Brown told stockholders during the course of a report on 1943 operations of the company, showing a profit of $35,944,083.

Besides discoveries from ordinary explorations and wildcat drilling, Brown said, additional crude oil should become available through better production technique and secondary recovery methods.

At prices no higher than the average dealers' prices of 1918-22, exclusive of taxation, gas can be produced from coal, Brown declared.

COLD STORAGE:
Big Holdings

Cold storage holdings of meat and lard reached all-time highs on April 1, but because of a reduction of pulet values, there were heavy withdrawals of frozen fruits and vegetables.

Of total meat holdings of 1,273,145,000 pounds, beef stocks amounted to 296,380,000 pounds and pork 740,651,000 pounds. Lard holdings aggregated 400,999,000 pounds.

Despite heavy withdrawals, frozen fruits stocks totaled 161,221,000 pounds and frozen vegetables 129,767,000 pounds. There were 82,038,000 pounds of butter on hand along with 149,942,000 pounds of cheese, 4,416,000 cases of shell eggs, and 168,030,000 pounds of frozen poultry.

SHIPPING:
New Rates

Continuing its policy of keeping shipping profits in line, the War Shipping administration prepared new charter rates for vessels taken over by the government.

Under the new WSA rates, a basic charter fee of $1.25 per deadweight ton per month will be paid for use of the vessel, with all operating expenses, including crew hire, borne by the government. Under time charter rates, the basic fee of $1.25 will be paid plus $1.425 per deadweight ton per month for operating expenses.

In setting the purchase value of old vessels, a basic level of $50.25 per deadweight ton will be paid, compared with the present $65.

SKY GIANT:
Good Time

Piloted by the Transcontinental and Western Air President Jack Frye, and the millionaire motion picture and aviation executive Howard Hughes, the 40-ton Lockheed Constellation airship flew the 2,467 miles from Burbank, Cal., to Washington, D. C., in the record time of 6 hours and 58 minutes.

Howard Hughes

Averaging 355 miles an hour and slightly favored by tailwinds at heights from 15,000 to 19,000 feet, the shark-shaped Constellation carried 17 passengers, although it has accommodations for 40 more. Sponsored by TWA, the Constellation was to be turned over to the army for transport.

CHICKS:
Record Number

A record number of chicks were hatched in commercial plants during March in the face of a sharp decline in the price of eggs. Estimated output is 284,915,000, compared with the previous high mark of 274,953,000 in 1943. For the first three months of this year, however, total number of baby chicks was 1.3 per cent below last year.

The break in egg prices caused considerable cancellation of orders for young chickens, dealers said, and a surplus of chicks for March was reported from most sections of the country.

ITALY

Because of the increasing issuance of paper money, the Italian lira is taking a tumble in German-occupied Italy, and Fascist authorities fear further depreciation may cause a disastrous inflationary spiral.

Spurring the use of paper money is the continued hoarding of copper and nickles because of their metallic value, with the public resorting to use of postage stamps and perforated cards for newspaper and street car fares.

AGRICULTURE:
Stormy Weather

Unseasonal snowstorms and floodwaters sweeping through the great plains area of the West and Illinois menaced sheep and cattle and relorded field work, but promised relief to some of Nebraska's winter wheat plantings, needing moisture.

Because of a shortage of protein feeds through the winter, stockmen feared cattle would be hard pressed by the wet, heavy snowfall and attendant cold weather. In eastern Colorado, heavy calf and lamb losses were reported as a result of a deep snowfall that extended to Wyoming and New Mexico.

In Illinois, farmers prepared to move their stock to higher ground in the Sangamon river valley as lowlands flooded, and downstream at Beardstown, townsfolk anxiously scanned the water gauge as the crest of the Illinois river rose near the 20-foot mark.

Lighter Hogs

With corn and other small grain disappearing rapidly on the nation's farms, lighter hogs already are being marketed, the U. S. Department of Agriculture disclosed.

With corn being consumed at a rate of 295,000,000 bushels a month since January, stocks were down to 1,113,549,000 bushels on April 1, compared with 1,374,748,000 a year ago. Also as of April 1, wheat stocks totaled 217,684,000 bushels against 325,387,000 a year ago, and oats supplies stood at 418,255,000 bushels against 709,170,000 as of January 1.

With farmers selling hogs in the largest volume in the country's history, weights received at the seven biggest markets have averaged 13 pounds less than in April, 1943.

PACIFIC:
India in Spotlight

In the Pacific area, the spotlight continued focused on India, where British and Indian troops fought with desperation to check the Jap's steady advance on the all-important Bengal-Assam railroad supplying Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's U. S. and Chinese forces in northern Burma.

While the fighting in India flared to new intensity, U. S. bombers ranged the length of the Pacific, hammering at enemy installations on the Kurile islands to the north of Japan, and blasting the foe's establishments at Truk, doorway to the Nips' major Asiatic holdings.

Bitter fighting in India occurred in the mile-high Naga hills where the Japs were closest to the vital Bengal-Assam railroad, and equally hard fighting went on to the south near Imphal, where rolling plains allowed the use of tanks.

NATIONAL INCOME:
Record Levels

With heavy increases in industrial wages and salaries, federal payrolls and farm returns, national income soared to $147,900,000,000 in 1943, the department of commerce estimated.

With income at double the 1939 figure, the department computed that private industry paid out $80,000,000,000 of wages and salaries. Farm income was estimated at $19,690,000,000. Corporate profits of $8,900,000,000 were indicated.

As the growth of national income slowed during the last three months of 1943, there were signs the nation's economic activity had reached its peak.

CENTENARIAN: Mrs. Adelheid T. Hiller of Mason City, Ill., is dead at the age of 100. She would have reached her 101st birthday on July 4. Up until a few weeks ago, she did her own housework. She was born in Germany.

WHISKY: The state of Virginia has purchased 27,500 barrels of whisky, to be sold through 102 state-owned stores.

STOCKS: Hints of invasion on the continent of Europe, and uncertainty about the Burma campaign forced stocks sharply downward in New York, and other markets followed suit. Losses ran to three points in active issues. Holders decided to lighten their portfolios, on the theory that the "Big Push" would be a disturbing factor to business for the next several months.

Farmers Buy War Bonds

by Lawrence A. Bradford
Associate Professor of Farm Management
University of Kentucky

FARMERS are buying War Bonds. Not all farmers, but most of them. Their total purchases are significant. Some farming counties bought an equivalent of thirty per cent of their gross farm sales last year. Why?

No other single group of men has as much of their traditional way of doing things at stake as do American farmers. They are traditionally and temperamentally independent in both thought and actions, and they wish to be able to remain so. A profound simple sense of patriotism is inborn in the American farmer. They chafe at Government restraint more than other individuals and they fully realize that dictators embrace agriculture early in their confiscating actions. Farmers are both bed-rock and base of democratic life. They provide cities with citizens steeped in the American way and they fully appreciate that agriculture has furnished the people who have made America great.

There are lesser reasons which have appeal to some farmers, and will appeal to others who have not already accounted for their just share of purchases. Farmers should buy Bonds because they now have funds for many things they need or want but cannot buy. Farm improvements, new machinery, home furnishings and improvements, education, travel. These "twenty-fives", "fifties", and "five hundreds" constitute a savings account for things they have always wanted but could not afford, an insurance to safeguard the future as well as a help for sons of seven sons and a start when the lads get home. A more strictly selfish reason is for old age benefits, as farmers have no governmental social security provisions.

But these are minor reasons because the farmer is individually unselfish. Farm, home, family, country, opportunity, opportunity for others, complete freedom, sons and daughters home again—these are the things they want most to provide for. These are the things they hope War Bonds will help provide. These are their principal reasons.

AMERICAN HEROES
BY LEFF

Torpedoed at night, men of the Merchant Marine abandoned their fast-sinking ship. Frederick R. Zito, Cadet-Midshipman, left his lifeboat, climbed hand over hand up the falls to free a 250-pound fireman. Unable to loosen the ropes, he cut them free, then towed the entangled man until they were picked up by a lifeboat. His is heroism beyond the line of duty. That extra War Bond you buy may save a life!

FISHERMEN WARNED OF FIRE'S MENACE

Tragic emphasis given seasonal warnings concerning the menace of forest and grass fires by the death of a woman near Cadillac and destruction of homes, farm garages and automobiles in fires that have burned over 7,600 acres in northern Michigan counties in the last two weeks. The acreage burned is more than half the total of 14,905 acres destroyed by fire in all of 1943.

Conservation department fire officials enlisting aid of the army, coast guard, Michigan state troops and Office of Civilian Defense in building their 1944 fire fighting organization, today warned that a period of high hazard was ushered in with the opening of the trout fishing season, April 29, and appealed to fishermen to exercise great caution in use of fire in forest areas.

Questions, Answers Pretaining to Soil Conservation Districts

1—What can a Soil Conservation District accomplish in Charlevoix County?

The answer is up to cooperating land owners, as the management of the district is entirely under the direction of five local directors, who are appointed or elected from local farmers and who will guide the activities to best serve the county needs, and to aid in the improvement of soils in the county. Accomplishments will depend upon the requests and response of local cooperating farmers.

2—What are some of the activities that might be possible in Charlevoix County?

The improvement of soils and the use of land to increase production are the general objectives of all District activities. Special activities likely in Charlevoix County might be:

A—Activities to Conserve Soil and Water.
1. Sod water ways.
2. Improved crop rotations.
3. Contour strips.
4. More use of green manure and cover crops.

B—Activities to prevent wind damage to soil and crops.
1. Wind breaks.
2. Strip farming.
3. Improved crop rotations.

C—Activities to increase productively of land.
1. Use of more hay and pasture crops on hilly fields.
2. Cooperative use of bull-dozers for clearing new land.
3. Planting of trees on private land not adapted to farming.
4. Use of new crops and improved rotations to provide cover and add humus to the soil.

3—Would all these activities be attempted on every farm?

The answer is definitely NO. What might be desirable on one farm might be of no value or even be a detriment to another farm. The services of a trained man without cost to Charlevoix County would be available and the individual problems on each farm would be worked out with the owner, who applies for assistance.

4—How would activities of a Soil Conservation District be conducted?

FIRST, the Local Directors would outline the activities of most value to the county.

SECOND, a trained technician would be made available to all farmers in the county as a hired man to conduct the activities outlined by the directors.

THIRD, the technician, cooperating with the State Soil Conservation Service, would work out special plans for soil improvement for each farm on an individual basis.

5—Just how would a Soil Conservation District affect an individual farm?

If the owner did not wish any help from the technician the farm would NOT be affected at all. It is not compulsory in any way. In cases where farmers desired to make use of the service, the technician would discuss the soil problem with the farmer and work with the farmer in developing a plan for soil improvement. Such problems might be; building up the fertility of a field that is not as productive as the rest of the farm; the control of water run-off that is causing a gully in the farm; protection of crops and fields from damage by wind; developing profitable hay or pasture crops on hilly fields that are unproductive at present; planning the location of tree plantings to give wind protection or to act as natural snow fences; or combinations of these problems or other problems that would aid in soil improvement or land-use.

6—Would the services of a Soil Conservation man be available to owners of land which is not farm land?

Yes, the service would be available to all land owners who request it. Tree planting, wood lot management, game cover and game food problems, are definitely related to good land use and as such would be a part of the activities of a Soil Conservation District.

7—Is a Soil Conservation District necessary to make this service available to land owners?

Yes, if complete and adequate service is to be obtained for Charlevoix County farmers. The services of the County Agricultural Agent, Michigan State College, AAA, FSA, FCA, and other agencies would still be available, but responsibilities of these groups include many activities and none provide for detailed soils work on all farms.

8—What would be the cost to Charlevoix County land owners for maintaining a Soil Conservation District?

No county, township, or local contribution would be asked. The District is prohibited by law from raising taxes or issuing bonds. Farmers cooperating with the district program would stand the cost on their own farm, just as they now build their own fences and furnish seed for planting.

9—Why is it necessary to have the land owners vote on establishing a district?

Soil Conservation Districts are only established at the request and in agreement with the wishes of the landowners. A public vote is the means of determining the wishes of the people. A large vote is necessary to show that more than a minority are in favor or establishing a district.

10—Would soil-building practices adopted by cooperating farmers receive farm payments from AAA?

Yes, all desirable and approved soil building practices meeting AAA requirements will be approved for payments. In fact some practices are over and above the regular allowance established for the particular farm.

11—When will the voting take place to determine if the land owners of Charlevoix County desire to establish a Soil Conservation District?

On MONDAY, MAY 8, 1944 between the hours of 7:00 p. m. to 10:00 p. m. (cwt.) However, if land owners can not vote at this time, they may secure absentee votes ballots by applying in person or by mail to LAVERN McGHAN, Polling Superintendent, Charlevoix, Michigan. Absentee ballots which are mailed must reach the Polling Superintendent before the scheduled time for voting.

12—Where may land owners vote?

At all township halls in the county. Landowners should vote in the township in which they live, or in the township in which they own land.

13—Who may vote on establishing a Soil Conservation District?

All land owners owning land in Charlevoix County outside of the incorporated cities of Charlevoix, East Jordan, Boyne City. Persons buying land on a contract may also vote. In cases of a joint deed or a joint contract both husband and wife may vote.

should be good. Fishing pressure was lese last seasen thnn in previous years. Milder weather conditions during the winter resulted in warmer stream temperatures with greater productian of trout foods. Treut also feed more actively and attain some growth when winters are mild. Mergansers and other fish-eating ducks were net concentrated on open trout streams where they take a heavy toll of trout when extreme cold weather freezes the wnters of the Great Lakes and adjacent non-trout waters which they frequent normally.

There is a heavy run of rainbows in the Platte this year. Many of these fish will be in the stream on the opening day of the season.

FISH INOUSTRY RATES SECOND

Eleven Tugs Use This Port As Their Base Of Operations—A Million Pounds Yearly

Fishing is really "as old as the hills." Long before man, in his primitive gropings for knowledge of the world about him, stumbled upon the idea of growing his food from the land and the first crude wooden-shared plow had been clumsily formed, he was taking fish from the water by various methods, supplementing this finny diet with the berries and fruits that grew wild in whatever region he inhabited and with what fowl and small animals he was able to snare. In all likelihood, it was the necessity for enlarging the field of his fishing operations, as his family increased and the need for food became more and more insistent, that caused our earliest ancester to frame the first rude boat. There is hardly a doubt that the search for fishing grounds was the forerunner of exploration and trade, and was then, as today, a prolific cause of friction between the tribes and the nations they later became, thus leading to war and conquest.

Fishing, like other occupations based directly upon simple human needs and their satisfaction from the world of nature, is an honorable profession. It breeds men, and men of a type who have little patience with the trickery, evasiveness or subterfuge that seem to be inseparable from most of the artificial pursuits that have grown out of our misnamed civilization. There is something about close contact with the sea and the soil that grows rugged strength in a man's nature, crowding out the petty and unworthy elements.

Charlevoix has known fishing since its beginning as the Village of Pine River back in the '60s and has learned to respect its several generations of commercial fishermen for the courage and enterprise which has built their calling into the community's second largest industry.

With eleven fish tugs and some fifty-five men employed, Charlevoix can truly lay claim to the title, "Outstanding," as respects

BASKETBALL TEAMS WERE ENTERTAINED

Banquet Held In Their Honor At Masonic Hall, Thursday

The Charlevoix High School basketball teams, their coach, Ray Kipke, and five cheer-leaders were guests of honor at a banquet given by the Masonic Lodge at the Masonic Hall on Thursday evening. Places were laid for the toastmaster, S. E. Coleman, the speaker, Arnold Wolgast, of Petoskey, former coach there, and at Arthur Hill High School of Saginaw, Coach and Mrs. Kipke, H. E. Bingham, principal, and the teams and cheer-leaders at a table decorated in the high school colors, red and white, and centered with a basketball. The other tables were also decorated in the same manner.

At the program which followed, Mr. Coleman introduced Mr. Kipke who in turn presented the members of the team. Robert Belfy, who will leave school for military service in June, and Don Bellinger and Gerald Chambers, who will graduate in June and enter the service, spoke briefly and told of their most thrilling experience as members of the team. Mr. Wolgast gave an interesting talk on basketball and told of several interesting experiences as a coach.

In paying tribute to Charlevoix as a good basketball town, Mr. Wolgast said he believed a compilation of past records would reveal that local teams had won a majority of their games. Coach Kipke's records since 1928 show 152 games won as against 92 losses for a percentage of .623. In the 1930-31 season, one tie resulted after a hard-fought game with Harbor Springs when three overtime periods were played.

The program closed with several numbers by the Charlevoices, Mrs. C. S. Webster, Mrs. E. D. Hawley, and Mrs. Charles Bellinger, which included 'Love, Love, Love," "Mary," "Wait For Me Mary," and "Don't Sweetheart Me."

A hundred and thirty were present for the dinner.

STORM BROKE SHIP IN TWO

CAPTAIN MORRISON TELLS THRILLING TALE

Former Commander Of The Yacht "Sylvia" Is Hero Of An Unusual Adventure

Imagine the emotions of a ship's captain when he sees the forward section of his vessel sail away into an angry sea while he and his startled crew remain on the stern half, staring with astonishment.

"It was the most amazing experience I've had," related Capt. Thomas R. Morrison, a veteran seaman with 30 years of sailing behind him, who is now visiting his wife and two daughters in their home at 415 Granger Ave.

Capt. Morrison, who has had to dodge enemy subs, icebergs, and mines and repel dive bombers during life aboard ship, never quite expected the Liberty ship under his command to be torn asunder as it was during a gale in the North Atlantic.

According to the captain, a terrific explosion was heard about 3:40 a. m., and at first he and his crew thought the shivering ship had been torpedoed.

Ship Going Backwards

"We had been running against a wind of hurricane force blowing about 60 or 70 miles an hour," he said, "and even with the engines going full speed, the ship was forced backward. The storm was the worst I've seen in that area, and the barometric pressure was 28.48, the lowest I've ever read. Due to the snow squalls visibility was zero."

The 52-year-old Merchant Marine captain recalled that he was in the pilot house when the explosion occurred and he ordered the engines stopped immediately.

"Sparks were flying from the breaking steel and shorted wires as the alarm sounded. The ship halted, but the forward part kept right on going until it was out of sight," reminisced Morrison. "I am certain that a torpedo was not responsible for the disaster, for there was no odor of gas and nothing was thrown upward."

Ship Was Welded

He went on to say that the reason for the ship splitting in half in the heavy sea was probably due to its being welded rather than riveted and, therefore, the vessel did not have the expansion and contraction necessary to withstand the strain on its hull.

"The freighter had previously been over minefields, and several explosions underneath the boat may have weakened the forward section," added the gray-haired captain.

If the ship had broken off six feet further aft, Capt. Morrison said he would have been on the wrong half, although he explained that the stern part would likely have sunk immediately.

"As a rule, several members of the gun crew stand watch in the front of the boat, but the weather fortunately prevented this on the morning of the ship's separation," his story continued.

Soundings Taken

Soundings were taken to prove that the ship wasn't taking any water, and the sea anchor was then lowered to hold the stern up toward the sea.

"The ship was riding well, and I didn't want to launch any lifeboats until the sea subsided because there was danger of the small craft capsizing in the rough water which would mean the loss of men," the captain said.

NATIONAL HOSPITAL WEEK CLOSES FRIDAY

Hospitals Continue To Provide Service During Emergency

From home-made gadgets to ingeninos labor-saving ideas, the remarkable experients which the hospituls of Michigan have utilized to meet the war situation constitute a saga of American resourcefulness emaparnble to that of war industry itself.

How have they done it? One hospital now mixes its floor polish in scrub water, finding that fluors are satisfactorily washed and polished in a single operation.

A standard wire basket with a home-made galvanized tin cover enables one institution to wash and rinse 40 infants' formula bottles simultaneously, whereas each bottle previously was handled individually.

Another hospital has placed strips of colored tape on all linen to speed sorting in the laundry.

Removal of dressing and other waste in a large metropolitan hospital, previously necessitating men to transport the heavy metal containers, now is handled by women who place the waste in cloth bags and drop the bags down the laundry chute in hours when the chute is not otherwise in use.

Many hospitals have converted dining rooms into cafeterias, eliminating the need for waitresses and saving time for other employees.

Visiting hours have been shortened almost universally — a change which also is beneficial to patients — to lessen the interruption to regular hospital activities.

Installation of additional machinery in many hospital laundries, business offices, and other departments has enabled fewer employees to do the same amount of work.

National Hospital Week which began May 7th, will be climaxed by the observance of the May 12th birthday of Florence Nightingale, the pioneer nurse whose efforts during another war — the Crimean War of some 90 years ago — were largely responsible for revolutionizing nursing care.

OLDEST MAN IN COUNTY PASSES

ALEXANDER CURRIE ALMOST 103 YEARS OF AGE

Born In County Antrim, Near City Of Belfast, Ireland, Year 1841—Was Farmer

Alexander Currie, 102, Charlevoix County's oldest resident, died last Wednesday morning at the home of his niece, Mrs. Lyle Wilson in Eveline Township. He had passed his 102nd birthday by 10 months and 23 days. In spite of his age, Mr. Currie had been active up until five days before his death. He was born in County Antrim near Belfast, Ireland, on June 26, 1841, and came to the United States in 1873.

The first few years he was employed by a wealthy New Yorker, who raised purebred stock as a hobby. He later went to Ontario and in 1881 came to Ironton. He purchased a farm a mile and a half east of the ferry and,

PERCH FISHERMEN ARE CATCHING 'EM

Perch fishing in Round Lake, while having its ups and downs, during the past week, has been fair and several record catches have been made. As many as 60 small boats have been counted on the lake at one time and the presence of many out-of-town cars testifies to the interest that people in the surrounding region and downstate take in Charlevoix perch runs. Weather has been on the cool side.

Quite a few visitors from the southern part of Michigan, who visit this region during the hunting season in the Fall, have been recognized in their fishing togs on the street and in restaurants. Many of them brought their own boats on trailers and car tops.

Approximately 8,200 German prisoners of war are expected to be working soon on farms and in food processing plants throughout Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, the commanding general of the Sixth Service Command has announced.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Pvt. Richard F. Hallett has been transferred from Denver to the flexible gunnery school at the Laredo army air field, Texas, and writes the following: "Graduated from the Armament School at Denver on Easter Sunday and I'm back in the 'Lone Star State' for two weeks. Ah, beautiful Texas! I like the camp mainly because of the large swimming pool, but no water can compare with that of Lake Michigan around Charlevoix. I can imagine your fair city beginning to put on its spring dress and here I am in Laredo where everything is beginning to dry up. The temperature hovers around 100 degrees in the daytime, so you can see the pool is very popular. Miss you all.

SSgt. H Keith Wagner writes from England to thank the Courier and the C.S.O. for sending the paper. He writes that he has received every issue since he entered the army, some eighteen months ago. Adrian Cooperative Teaches Economics

Adrian, Mich. — What better courses on "home economics" could any college furnish than practical experience in managing and operating the college "commons" or dining-hall, the dormitories, and the housekeeping routine for both?

Every college or university supplies plenty of textbook "theory" for this course, but at Adrian College, the wartime problems and handicaps have been put to practical use for scores of young men and women in the "co-operative" eating and dormitory plan.

Tons of produce, groceries and meats have to be purchased and processed, budgeted and served, by student members. Dormitory supplies and the daily routine has to be carried on by self-help-students, anxious to work their way through college.

Students prepare the food, serve the food, plan the menus, and budget the supplies. Rebates paid back to cash customers, as a result of this economy, proves good management, and economical buying, and a self-serving efficiency, even when wartime prices are skyrocketing.

This is the first major cooperative enterprise on the Adrian campus, but it was worked so successfully so educationally for all concerned, that other coop plans are now being charted. An official "board" solves all the difficult problems. A faculty member presides at each commons' table. Work schedules for students must fit in with curricular schedules. Only one matron, Mrs. V. L. Forbush, is required for full time service. Adrian College students have the unique experience of really helping themselves, by the characteristic "Adrian Self Help Plan."

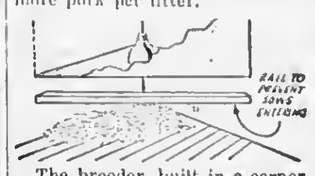
Electric Pig Brooders

KEEPING food in the fight for victory, American farmers are going to have a lot more pigs on the place this spring. And the farmer who has made preparations in advance for spring farrowing is going to be the one who collects when marketing time comes.

Electric pig brooders are inexpensive insurance against excessive baby pig losses. In addition, they are welcome labor savers during that critical first ten-day period in the life of the new pigs. Litters protected by a brooder do not require constant watching to prevent loss from chilling or from the sow lying down on them. If you will build a brooder of the type illustrated now, your ultimate return may be as high as 10 or 15 per cent more pork per litter.



The brooder, built in a corner of the farrowing pen, may be constructed of lumber or, better still because of its fireproof qualities and durability, of asbestos cement board. The 150-watt bulb used for heating has either a standard reflector or one made from a tin-coated wash or cake pan. The reflector fits over a hole cut in the roof of the shelter. To protect the bulb, the hole should be covered with hardware cloth.

In only one litter, a farmer can lose enough pigs to pay for a brooder in every one of his pens. Operating cost is about ten cents a pig.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley

This week the House Ways and Means Committee is to start hearings on the Administration's bill to raise the ceiling on the public debt limit from 210 billions to 260 billions. In this connection, it is to be noted that the total debt — according to the United States Treasury report of April 10, 1944 — stood at $186,925,496,371.49, an increase in one year of 66.6 billions and this despite an increase in income tax receipts of 17.4 billions as compared with the same date one year ago. When President Roosevelt first became President, our national debt was about 22 billion dollars. At this point it is well to remember that Mr. Roosevelt himself in his message to Congress, March 10, 1933, stated:

"Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of lose fiscal policy. We must avoid this danger."

Earlier in October 19, 1932, he stated:

"Taxes are paid in the swent of every men who labors because they are a hardeu on production and are paid through production. If those taxes are excessive, they are reflected in idle factories, in tax-sold farms, end in hordes of hungry people, tramping the streets and seeking jobs in vain."

However, under President Roosevelt, the public debt has increased approximately 900 per cent. It is doubtful that the committee will raise the debt limit to 260 billions as requested, even though the President in his budget messege tn Congress last Jaunary estimated the public debt would rench 258 billion dollars by June 30, 1945, because Administration Members have joined Republicans in the demand to curtail needless spending. Those who were always at hand tu grant the President every amount of funds for which he asked are slowly beginning to realize that Thomas Jefferson knew whereof he speke when he mede this statement:

"Whnt more is necessary to make us a happy and prosperous people Still one thing more, my fellow eltizens, a wise and frugal (thrifty) government which will restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement and shall not take from the mnuth of labor the hrend it has earned. This is the sum of good government."

The Montgomery-Ward Case—

Nothing of Inte has stirred up more indignation in the Congress and the country as a whole than the President's seizure nf the retail stores of Montgomery Wnrd & Company and the forcible ejection of their Chairman. The Attorney General of the United States flew to Chicago to assume personal commnnd of the armed forces, which he utilized to enforce his demands upon this Company. He personally, we were told, directed the soldiers to enter the office of Mr. Avery and removed him by physical force and then diraeted the soldiers to seize all books and other property of Montgomery Ward. If Attorney Coneral Biddle can use the armed feroes to seize a non-war business such as Wards without the approval of either Congress or the courts, in the werds of Senator Byrd, "he can seize any plant or business operation, using the same military power whenevar such person or a business dees something to displeass him, or dees not immediately obey a directive of one of the numerous bureaus ofthe Federal Government." And Senator Byrd went on to ask this question on the Floor of the Senate: "Have we reached a state in this country that the directives of a Federal Bureau can be so enforced at the point of a bayonet If the directives of the War Labor Board can be so enforced on a non-war business operation, then so can the directives issued by the Office of Price Administration, the War Production Board, and the dozens of other Government agencies, with the result that the constitutional right of the citizens of Amerien to adjudicatien of their rights in the proper court of law will be denied to them"

Administration Members of Congress are frank in their admission that they are considerably worried about the political repercussions which can be expected from this unwarranted procedure. The President's action in this case simply goes on to show to what lengths this New Deal will go in its persecution of its philosophy of government by decree rather than government predicated upon the laws passed by Congress, the duly elected Representatives of the people of the United States. It is proving the fact to our citizens that too much power in the hands of the executive eventually leads to the very menace to Constitutional government which our boys are told they are fighting to destroy on the Europenn Continent. It was Benjamin Franklin who said, "We have given you a republic, if you can keapt it."

Congress being greatly aroused over this Ward seizure incident lost no time in taking action and last Wednesday a sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee held an executive meeting and decided unanimously to call in all laber records from all sources and further decided to hold open hearings on this case immediatey upon securing records. The House also on last Friday took up the Dewey Resolution to investigate this matter.

He writes: "Since I haven't written in a long time, I thought I'd better write a note to show my appreciation for your continued service in this area. As long as I've been stationed here, I've yet to hear one of the boys from home say he hasn't received the Courier every week. I would also like to express my belated thanks to the Blue Star Mothers, the Kiwanis, Glenn Rose, Luther Hannah, and all those at home who have been so kind and thoughtful. Thanks for the letter, Ned. And to those of you who haven't written that 'morale builder,' that letter from home, you've still got time to get it in the mail.

EUROPE:

Straighten Lines

Thousands of U. S. and British bombers thundered over Belgium and France to pound rail and canal routes serving the channel coast as the zero hour for the invasion neared, while the heressed enemy straightened his lines in the east for a last ditch defense at the Balkans.

Big formations of the AAF and RAF joined in bombarding the Germans' communications lines in Belgium and France in an effort to impair their usefulness for shifting Nazi armies to the different sectors where the Allies may land invesion forces. Factories turning out war weapons for the enemy's military machine also were blested as swarms of Nazi fighter planes rose to challenge the attackers.

Taking up their positions alongside of Rumanian soldiers now fighting on their own soil, the Germans surrendered their last foothold in the Russian Ukraine, while farther to the southeast, Red troops threatened Nazi lines in the Crimea, the huge chunk of land jutting into the Black sea and guarding the water route to the eastern Balkans.

Nazi Aim

Defensive action aimed at a negotiated peace is in back of the heads of the German leadership, competent military authorities agree, as the Nazis shorten their lines in Russia and build up strength in the west against an invesion.

By pulling in their lines in Russia and mobilizing Rumania, Hungary and the Baltic states, the Germans can defend their new positions with less men, while still offering stiff resistance to the Reds.

Behind the extensive concrete and steel fortifications in the west, the Germans are estimated to have 750,000 troops in France and the low countries and 450,000 in the Balkans. In addition, the Nazis are said to have another 750,000 troops in reserve for quick dispatch to threatened areas.

Planning economical use of these troops behind tough defensive barriers, with the advantage of short communications lines, the Germans hope to wear down Allied resistance and receive moderate peace terms.

FOREIGN POLICY:

Hull Explains

Because Russia's annexation of parts of Finland, Rumania and Poland and all of the Baltic states might be essential to prevent future aggression and establish world security, such action would not be contrary to the objectives of the Atlantic Charter, Secretary of State Cordell Hull declared.

Cordell Hull

In explaining the significance of the Atlantic Charter, Hull said, "If the charter is not a code of law from which detailed answers to every question can be distilled by painstaking analysis of its words and phrases. It points the direction in which solutions are to be sought What is fundamental is the objectives of the charter "

Unity among the U. S., Britain, Russia and China is the key to future world peace, Hull said, and dissension among these powers can only wreck postwar stability.

VICTORY GARDENS

By Paul N. Krone

Careful preparation of the seed bed is essential to the success of any garden. For best results, the seed bed should be prepared just before the seed is sown. Spade it to a depth of 6 or 8 inches, then rake it thoroughly to break up the clods and pulverize the soil as much as possible.

Don't work the soil when it's too wet. To determine whether or not it's in the right condition, pick up a little earth and squeeze it. If it forms a compact, lumpy ball, the soil is still too wet. If, however, the ball will crumble readily with a slight pressure, the ground is ready to be worked.

Thorough preparation should kill most of the early weeds and make later gardening and cultivation easier. Just prior to seeding, pulverize the top soil thoroughly to a depth of 2 or 3 inches. Sow your seed just as soon as the seed bed is ready. Otherwise weeds will come up first and get a head start. Spade or plow plots that have a lot of weeds some time before you plan to sow your seed. Allow the young weeds to get started and cultivate them out at least once or twice before the final preparation of your soil.

The finer the preparation of the soil, the better the chance your seeds will have for germinating, since well-pulverized soil packs firmly around seeds and holds the moisture needed for proper germination. If soil is not thoroughly pulverized, air spaces left between the large soil particles may slow up germination.

Mother'll Understand

if you don't call her on Long Distance this Sunday

Mothers are understanding and patriotic. They know that under the steadily increasing burden of war-created calls, Long Distance telephone equipment is seriously overloaded.

Of course, they'd like to talk with you on Mother's Day, but they'd rather be sure the lines are kept clear for vital war messages.

This year, send your love in a letter. And if you'd like to give your mother a present, she'd truly appreciate a United States War Bond—a gift of fighting dollars to back our boys and girls overseas.

• Please make only really urgent Long Distance calls this Mother's Day.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Four Community Committees Will Meet Local Needs

A recent meeting held at Charlevoix disclosed the fact that labor needs will be greater this year than last. Miss Doris Gillespie from the State Emergency Labor Office gave a brief report covering the labor problems that are present throughout the state.

Attending the meeting were some 14 county leaders who represented all farm interests. Since the harvesting of many crops will depend largely upon the efforts of county youth, the chairmnn of each Community Committee is the Superintendent of Schools in the community or another member of the faculty. The problem of securing foreign labor and war prisoners was discussed, but it was decided not to make any plans for this type of labor. Thus it means that in time of emergency all adults and children must help in the harvest season.

The County Advisory Labor Committee was selected as follows: Leo Close, County School Commissioner; W. A. Camburn, Principal, Boyne City Schools; E. E. Wade, Superintendent, East Jordan Schools; O. P. North, Superintendent, Charlevoix Schools; and Dwight Fisher, Superintendent, Boyne Falls Schools. The following four Community Committees have been selected to handle the labor program in their respective areas:

East Jordan: E. E. Wade, Alex Sinclair, Howard Tuft.

Boyne City: W. A. Camburn, Kenneth Leckrone, Harry Behling.

Boyne Falls: Dwight Fisher, Bert DeNise, Thomas Matelski.

Charlevoix: O. P. North, Arlo Wickersham, Howard E. Brumm.

It is planned to have a meeting of the Advisory Committee in the next few days. It is hoped that some definite policy may be established in regard to the program that can be followed by all four schools. The problem of school attendance is one worthy of considerable thought. Already boys and girls who are volunteering to help in the harvest fields are being enrolled in the various schools.

In order to accommodate farmers who desire extension services, I am planning to be in the office each Saturday morning.

REBEKAHS HELD ANNUAL MEETING

visitors were Mrs. Zeeto Thipson, of Detroit, president of the Rebekah Assembly; Mrs. Louvia, of Grand Rapids, inside guardian of the Rebekah Assembly; Glenn K. Hummel, of Lansing, grand secretary of the I.O.O.F. of Michigan. The Charlevoix lodge had charge of the memorial work of the program.

Those from Charlevoix who attended were Mrs. Robert Mitchell, Mrs. Floyd Ikens, Mrs. W. E. Goss, Mrs. Elmer Poole, Mrs. Leroy Allers, Mrs. E. E. Stroud, Mrs. William Cook, Mrs. J. D. Smith, Mrs. Gene Lewis, Mrs. Walter Vemmans, and Mrs. Grace Genett.

MICHIGAN BELL HAS POSTWAR JOB PLAN

George M. Welch, president of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, has announced the adoption by the company of a comprehensive job plan for its employees returning from military service in World War II.

A statement under Welch's signature, the announcement said, is being sent to all of the company's 2,800 employees now in the armed forces, both at home and abroad, advising them of the details of the plan for their reemployment.

The plan provides for:

Prompt attention to the case of every veteran.

Individual interviews and medical examinations in order that veterans be placed in work for which they are best qualified.

The same basic wages or salaries as they had when they left, plus any general increases during their absence, for those returning to their old jobs at the same or similar locations.

Sickness disability benefits, under the company's Employees' Benefit Plan, for the temporarily disabled, pending their recovery sufficiently to return to work.

Special training to fit handicapped veterans into work in which their qualifications best can be utilized.

Assistance in contacting the proper Governmental agencies for the permanently disabled, incapacitated for work of any kind.

Some phases of the company's reemployment plan already are in effect. Seventy-eight veterans, including three women, are back on the job with the company, following their separation from military service. Twenty-nine others, including eight women, who were given military discharges, did not return to the company.

There are 65 men of the company in uniform to every 100 men on the job. The 2,800 employees in service include 104 women.

Governor Proclaims Michigan Food Month

STATE OF MICHIGAN
Executive Office o Lansing

PROCLAMATION

In proclaiming the month of May to be "More Michigan Food Month", I am asking the cooperation of the public in realizing the following objectives during 1944:

1. As consumers--become better acquainted with Michigan's diversified, quality food products; use more of them, and thus help relieve over-burdened transportation facilities.

2. As producers--grow more Michigan food and thus help prevent an anticipated shortage of vital foodstuffs next winter; plant more and larger Victory Gardens this spring.

3. As retailers--purchase and sell more Michigan foods.

As 1944 appears to be the year of crisis, so Michigan must mobilize its resources at once to win this battle of food at home. Everyone has an essential job to do. I respectfully enlist your support in its performance as an important contribution to Victory.

Therefore, I, Harry F. Kelly, Governor of Michigan, do hereby proclaim May as "More Michigan Food Month" and request that its purposes be brought to the attention of all the people in the interests of their accomplishment.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State of Michigan, this twenty-first day of April, in the year of Our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred Forty-four, and of the Commonwealth, the One Hundred Eighth.

Herman H. Dignan

after clearing the timber from it, became a farmer. For many years he furnished wood for the furnace at Ironton, cutting it on his farm, skidding it to Pine Lake and having it towed by tug to the iron works. Mr. Currie often told of the Indians who lived along shores of what is now Lake Charlevoix. At that time there were few white families in that community.

In 1892 he married Caroline Freeman of East Jordan, who preceded him in death in 1911.

For the past 35 years he has made his home with his niece, Mrs. Wilson.

Mr. Currie, who enjoyed life very much in spite of his advanced age, was guest of the city of Charlevoix at a Fourth of July celebration shortly after his hundredth birthday anniversary. One of the highlights of his life in later years was the county fairs which he attended and where he saw all his old friends.

Surviving are two nieces, Mrs. Wilson and Anna Carrie, both of Eveline Township; three nephews, Charters of Eveline Township; James of Boyne City, and Alex of East Jordan.

Funeral services were held at the Watson Funeral Home at East Jordon at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. Interment was at the Sunset Hill Cemetery. Rev. C. W. Sidebotham conducted the service.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

What Makes "A Real American Town?"

Visitor said to me the other day: "Joe, you've got a real American town here—a town you can be proud of."

Afterwards, I got to wondering just what he meant. We aren't much different from any other town our size. A few nice stores . . . a village green . . . and 27 blue stars on the Service Flag in Town Hall.

Not much exciting happens, either. We work hard . . . have our Friday evening socials at the Parish House...and the kids play baseball and go fishing . . .

In our private life, we live and let live. If we often disagree on politics...if some of us like beer, some buttermilk . . . we still respect one another's rights and opinions.

What makes our town "American"? From where I sit, it's not because we're different but because we're so much like all other towns that add up to America—where self respect and tolerance are guiding principles.

KIWANIS CLUB NOTES

Tuesday, May 2: Rev. C. R. Gold of Cheboygan spoke on the subject "What are we fighting for?" Reverend Gold indicated that free enterprise was being threatened by monopolistic international organization known as the cartel. The cartel was explained as an organization of business groups of a number of nations. The purpose of this was to secure control of raw materials such as rubber, so that other nations and individuals would have little chance.

As a tentative solution for too much Federal Government control, the suggestion was made to have the various states take more direction than has been the case.

Mike Hamlin became a member of the club.

Among the guests were Mrs. C. R. Gold and Chief Boatswain's Mate Dorman C. Pelky.

Tuesday, May 9: Dr. White of Traverse City spoke on the subject "The Murray, Dinkell, Wagner Bill." This measure is being advanced by its proponents as a solution for the health problems of the nation. It is one more step in the progress toward Federally sponsored legislation by which individuals are pushed into a program without sufficient consideration having been given to the actual effects. It is recommended by most members of the medical profession that slower and more stable means be used, such as the present voluntary plans in use in most states.

Dr. G. B. Saltonstall was introduced by Robert F. Sloan, chairman of the Program Committee, as the logical person to present the speaker of the evening.

Other guests of the club members were W. Flynn of the Beach Hotel, and Rev. Evans of the Congregational Church.

At a board meeting held at the conclusion of the regular meeting, further consideration was given the new hospital project. President Bill Meyer appointed as a committee, Robert Bridge, Clarence Meggison, and Dr. McMillan to investigate the possibilities and plans and report to the club in two weeks.

The meeting for next week will be at the Perry Hotel in Petoskey, as a part of the Inter-Club meeting for this division.

Dated May 8, 1944.

CLARENCE HEISE,

Chief of Police.

"More Michigan" is the slugan for May, 1944.

It has been proclaimed thus by Governor Harry F. Kelly. It has the official endorsement of a state agency, the Michigan Agricultural Marketing Council, which is cooperating with the Michigan Food Council in its observance.

The idea grew out of a conviction among organized food groups and state legislators that Michigan must tell its story of quality and diversified agriculture in competition with other food producing states. There is a growing belief also that such food products must be graded as to quality and then marketed according to consumer-approved methods.

The fact that Michigan rates among the first ten states of the Nation in vital war foods is something that is not fully known and appreciated even at home. In both acreage and in production Michigan rates high in fruits, vegetables, beans, sugar beets, dairy and poultry products and even honey. Michigan is not a typical corn-and-hog state. It does not rate high in production of wheat, for example. Yet corn and wheat are not major elements in the modern daily diet of Americans.

Michigan's cool climate, tempered by winds off the Great Lakes, is the major factor that has stimulated the development of the state's diversified agriculture. Drouths are virtually unknown in Michigan. Hot weather is limited, as all vacation seekers well know in July and August when other parts of the Middle West swelter in discomfort. The same air-conditioned breezes, cooled by the waters of the Great Lakes, bless both the vacation seeker and the farmer.

While the recreational resources of Michigan have been well publicized for years through the four tourist and resort associations, the state's diversified food products have been relatively unpublicized and unappreciated.

First, there has existed traditional disinclination among food growers to abide by cooperative self-regulations whereby they would establish standards of grading and marketing and then abide by such agreements. The food producer is an individualist, and only in recent years has he been willing to rely upon cooperation as a means of protecting his interests against the organized efforts of others in our competitive economy.

Hence, the development of strong grower groups, such as the Michigan Potato Growers' Association, the Michigan Horticulture Society, Michigan Livestock Association, Michigan Vegetable Growers' Association, Michigan Farmers and Manufacturers' Beet Sugar Association, Michigan Allied Poultry Industries, Michigan Milk Producers' Association, and the Michigan Bean Shippers' Association.

In addition to these, the canners have their own organization, the Michigan Canners' Association. The cherry growers are organized; there is a Michigan Honey Institute, and also a Michigan Dairy Industry Committee.

When the growers presented their problems to the agricultural committees of the Michigan state legislature in the house and senate, legislators were quick to see the need for an all-Michigan program of advertising which would be the means of cementing together these diversified food groups into one state program, coordinated with an intelligent and far-reaching plan for grading and marketing of Michigan food products. While big strides have been made in these fields, there still remains much to be done. One of the immediate needs is a better appreciation by consumers in Michigan of the state's superior food products of field and orchard.

"More Michigan" came into being as a war-time observance, timed for the spring growing season when the consumer is more food conscious, whereby Michigan consumers are urged tod use more Michigan food; Michigan growers are requested to produce more food in 1944, and the Michigan food retailers — whose annual gross business is well over two billion dollars — are encouraged to buy and sell more Michigan food.

The overloaded transportation system of the Nation is the 1944 reason why it is possible to encourage more Michigan food production and consumption without involvement in the issue of state trade barriers.

An official of the American Association of Railroads declared recently in Chicago that the railroads were short 600,000 freight cars compared with their rolling equipment during World War I. The railroad manpower also is short 100,000 men, he asserted.

The Michigan Agricultural Marketing council recognizes this fact, in behalf of the organized food groups in the state.

Hence, while invasion armies are in readiness (or likely in action) this month in Europe, Michigan is asked by its state government to increase its efforts to produce and to consume more Michigan food in 1944.

May, the planting season, thus becomes the zero hour for the growers' army on our home front. It becomes a reminder to Michigan consumers to get acquainted with the quality and rich flavor of peninsula-grown foods. It is a challenge to the food retailer to do his part also.

"More Michigan" deserves a place in your thinking in this eventful May of world history.

Stage Two-Man Reign of Terror

Marine Captains Devastate Entire Japanese Base On Ballale Isle.

By 2nd Lieut. W. K. HOLT, USMC

GUADALCANAL, SOLOMON ISLANDS (Delayed).—It wasn't the 130 plane raid on Ballale Island that gave marine Capt. Robert F. Ramsey of 1120 Viscano drive, Glendale, Calif., his biggest thrill. It wasn't the 70 plane assault that leveled Jap installations on Vila airdrome, nor the first time he led a division of marine dive bombers.

His biggest kick came when he and marine Capt. Edward C. Willard of 0550 North Glenwood avenue, Chicago, Ill., staged a two-man reign of terror on a small Jap garrison at Parapatu Point on Kolombangara Island.

"The unit was going up to pound some coastal guns near Vila that day," Captain Ramsey related. "Ed and I were spares. That means we tag along after the formation and fill in if any of the other dive bomber pilots have trouble.

"We had permission beforeband to go after the Japs on Parapatu Point if there was no need for spares. There wasn't. So we broke off and were on our way.

"We climbed to about 10,000 feet and nosed over, strafing all the way down. I could see the Japs scurrying for cover, running, stumbling over limbs, and falling into holes.

"Both of our bombs fell near some coastal guns that had been causing our patrol boats trouble. I was enjoying our party, strafing and dodging antiaircraft shrapnel, until I found that my flaps wouldn't close.

"That left me in a pretty fix. It was the Japs' turn to have some fun. I was practically creeping along over the area and the ack-ack was getting dangerously close. They popped away at me and I popped back with my machine guns, at the same time trying frantically to close my flaps.

"At last they closed, and I joined Ed upstairs. We circled to take a good look at the damage we'd caused, and then beat it home."

Captain Ramsey's bombs have helped to plaster Japanese ammunition and supply dumps, coastal artillery and antiaircraft guns, barges and bivouac areas throughout the Solomons area.

In the South Pacific combat zone only a few weeks, he has participated in six dive bombing raids, scoring hits in the target area on every mission. Officially credited to him are the destruction of several buildings, barges, and gun installations.

Clean Up Jap Base.

The huge dive bombing raid on Ballale Island devastated the entire Japanese base, Captain Ramsey said.

"As we circled to pick up our pilots just completing their run, we could see four large fires shooting flames high in the air. We must have dumped our eggs right in the middle of an ammunition or supply dump.

"The antiaircraft was the heaviest I've ever seen when we started into our dive that day. Each of us had a specific target and the men did their job well. When we returned two days later, only a few scattered shots were fired."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Ramsey, the 25-year-old marine dive bomber enlisted for naval flight training July 25, 1941, after his graduation from San Jose State college, where he played guard under the famous football coach, Pop Warner.

He won his wings and a commission in the marine corps May 15, 1942, at Corpus Christi, Texas. He was promoted to a first lieutenant last December and to captain in June.

'Skytillery Distillery' Doesn't Mean Moonshine

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC (Delayed). — "Skytillery Distillery—No Furriners Allowed."

A visitor to this remote marine outpost might think he was in the center of a moonshine-producing district upon noticing this sign.

The sign, created by marine Private First Class Gail D. Zumwalt, 26, of Williams, Calif., includes his cartoon conception of a mountain moonshiner resting against a tree.

It warns all unauthorized persons to stay out of a highly important unit of the marine airdrome stationed on this island—the water works.

The wording is the idea of Corp. William G. Oldfather, holder of the Purple Heart, who lives on Route 11, Phoenix, Ariz.

Twenty-one-year-old Corporal Oldfather, known to his buddies as "Old Pappy," is one of the custodians of the "Skytillery Distillery," which distills ocean water to supply drinking water.

Jury Disagrees, but Defendant Says Guilty

VANCOUVER, WASH.—Prosecutor R. De Witt Jones failed to convince a jury. It was unable to reach a verdict and was dismissed. He convinced the defendant, though. Ulysses Tate, 28, changed his mind and pleaded guilty to having forced H. B. Webb to surrender his wallet at knife point. Judge Charles W. Hall placed him on probation.

Adrian, Mich. — Outstanding among schools that teach journalism and the printing arts is the Adrian College Press equipment, which actually produces one weekly magazine (24 pages, with color), several monthly publications, a score of booklets and leaflets every week, and a large number of commercial catalogs, bulletins, and institutional prints, annually.

"Self Help Students" at Adrian, who wish to work their way through college by such practical employment, thus study their theory within sound of the tinkling linotypes and pounding cylinder presses which they operate, outside of class hours, for a goodly hourly wage.

They have actual experience in type-setting, paper-cutting, page-makeup, printing make-ready, commercial job work and cylinder press work. They read galley and press proofs actually in process. Those training for editorial desks, actually write and edit copy for the "College World" eight page newspaper, report for the local Adrian Daily Telegram (circulation, 16,000), and plan printing campaigns for local business.

George E. Miller, former editor-in-chief of the Detroit News, and one of Michigan's most nationally known editors, was an Adrian student, from a nearby farm home. J. S. Gray, publisher of the Monroe News, and Donald Frazier, managing editor of Adrian Telegram, were Adrian students. John F. Cowan, editor of the Christian Endeavor World magazine, listed in Who's Who as author of 16 books, and Lyman E. Davis, founder of the Recorder publications for the Methodist Protestant Church, were Adrian graduates. A steady stream of Adrian students win their way in journalism and printing fields.

The unique advantage at Adrian College for all such ambitious ones is Adrian's "guaranteed working chance" at a Christian college education, whereby boys and girls earn as they learn, and get practical experience, in their chosen line, right on the college campus. Only a few of the largest universities have a printing plant to compare with Adrian.

Nazi Airfields, Defense Fortifications Smashed by Huge Allied Air Armadas; House Group Studies Income Tax Plan; Midwest Floods Cause Heavy Damage

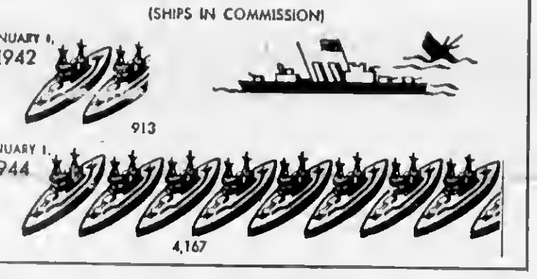
GROWTH OF U. S. NAVY

(SHIPS IN COMMISSION)



EUROPE:
Zero Hour

All the world tensed in anticipation of the U. S. and British invasion of western Europe, expected to coincide with other Allied thrusts in the Mediterranean and a great Russian offensive against German lines in eastern Poland.

As the enemy reported on huge concentrations of Allied shipping and naval formations in English waters, neutral sources quoted German strength at 90,000 men in Norway; 180,000 in Finland; 180,000 in the Balkans; 375,000 in Italy; 75,000 along the Mediterranean coast; 450,000 along the Atlantic wall, with 900,000 at strategic points in France, Germany and central Europe and finally 2,625,000 in Russia.

As the zero hour approached for the greatest battle in history, U. S. and British bombers roared over Europe, smashing at concrete and steel defense bunkers, ripping up communication lines over which the enemy might rush troop concentrations and pouring fire on industries supplying the Nazi wehrmacht.

INCOME TAX:
Plan Simplification

Of the nation's 50,000,000 taxpayers, 30,000,000 would not be required to file individual returns if congress approves the house ways and means committee's simplification bill, drawn after lusty protests over present complicated forms.

Under the committee's bill, a person earning up to $5,000 would have his whole tax deducted under the withholding plan, and he would just have to file a copy of his employer's withholding receipt at the year's end.

To simplify tax rates, the committee's bill calls for abolition of the victory tax and the creation of a normal tax of 3 per cent and a surtax starting at 20 per cent on all income in excess of personal exemptions and a straight 10 per cent credit.

CIVILIAN GOODS:
Production Urged

Following congressional pressure applied particularly by Senators Stewart (Tenn.) and Wherry (Neb.), the War Production board withdrew a previous order freezing civilian goods output to first quarter levels.

As a result of WPB's latest action, opportunity should develop for a gradual reconversion to consumer merchandise, particularly in those plants facing expiration of war contracts and shutdowns.

"Military production will not be hurt by a gradual conversion of industry to the manufacture of civilian goods," Senator Wherry said. "There is no reason why flat irons, automobile parts, general machinery parts, alarm clocks and dozens of other urgently needed products cannot be made now."

CORN:
U. S. Sole Buyer

To supply processing industries with badly needed supplies of corn, the government froze all farm or elevator sales of the grain in 125 counties in Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana except to U. S. agencies.

At the same time, War Food administration announced that the government would stand all expense of shelling and transporting corn from the farm to the elevators, where sellers would receive the local ceiling price.

Approximately 80,000,000 bushels of corn are needed by the processing industry for making food products and material for fiber board, adhesives, drugs, vitamins, explosives, chemicals, plastics, etc.

PACIFIC:
Trap Japs

Around 140,000 Japs stood trapped in the South Pacific with the U. S. invasion of Hollandia in north central New Guinea, about 1,400 miles distant from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's coveted goal of the Philippines.

As Doughboys fought inland from Hollandia to take over the airfields which would give them command over shipping lanes supplying enemy troops to the southeast, good word also came from India, where British and native forces stood up against fierce Jap efforts to sever the Bengal-Assam railroad feeding Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's Allied units hacking out the Ledo road to China from north Burma.

The 140,000 Jap troops trapped by the Hollandia invasion stretched all the way from the newly embattled area to the Solomons, with their shipping lines jeopardized by the superior U. S. air and naval forces, so far unable to draw out the enemy fleet lurking closer to its bases to the west.

FLOOD:
Extensive Damage

Town and country alike were inundated as flood waters surged throughout the central Mississippi river basin, approaching record peaks at many points, with early counts showing 10 dead and many homeless.

Northernmost danger point was around Beardstown, Ill., where the Flood scene in Illinois.

Illinois river hovered around the 20 foot mark, flooding productive bottom-lands.

Between the mouth of the Missouri river and Cairo, Ill., where the mighty Ohio river flows into the Mississippi, high waters lapped at straining levees, and a little farther down, St. Louis reported a crest of approximately 33 feet.

Extensive damage was caused in Wichita, Kansas, where the residential district stood in water waist deep. As conditions improved in Kansas, they worsened in neighboring Missouri and Arkansas.

ARSENAL:
U. S. Aids Allies

The "arsenal of democracy"—the U. S. with its gigantic, efficient industrial machine—has supplied the Allies with weapons and munitions valued at nearly 10 billion dollars since March of 1941.

Although the Allies paid for some of the deliveries, most were lend-leased, including 23,000 planes, 23,500 tanks and 550,000 motor vehicles. In all, the Allies paid for 7,000 planes, 1,500 tanks and 250,000 vehicles.

During the three-year period, the U. S. also aided the Allies with the production of $1,800,000,000 of aircraft engines and parts, $2,700,000,000 of weapons, munitions, steel, aluminum and other metals, and hundreds of millions of gallons of gasoline.

DRAFT:
Depends on Losses

Unless European or Pacific military operations impose a severe drain on manpower, selective service officials expect 1944 draft calls to be met with men under 30, it was revealed.

Induction of younger men, however, may place a heavy strain on industry and agriculture, Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey declared, adding: "Older men, physically unfit for service . . . and women can and must replace these young men at the lathes and on the tractors . . ."

Of monthly requirements for 150,000 men, General Hershey said, about 60,000 can be met from men becoming 18, and the rest must be supplied from the 1,000,000 under 26 now deferred, of whom 600,000 are expected to pass their physicals.

STEEL:
Union Grows

Philip Murray's United Steelworkers of America have grown into one of the most powerful labor organizations in the country, with membership of 936,500 and net assets of $3,313,077, including $2,174,313 in cash, according to a semi-annual report of the union.

During the year ended November 30, 1943, the USA signed up 210,875 new members and increased assets by $1,538,177, including $759,313 cash.

During the six-month period ending November 30, 1943, USA paid $227,000 to the CIO with which it is affiliated, and also raised $102,500 for the CIO's political action committee. Costs of negotiations and wage scale conferences totaled $35,376 and traveling expenses of officials and representatives were $78,161.

SUPREME COURT:
Religious Freedom

In a majority decision read by Justice Douglas, the U. S. Supreme court reaffirmed the freedom of religious worship, asserting no jury had the right to pass on the validity of any doctrine.

Justice Douglas

"Freedom of thought . . . embraces the right to maintain theories of life and death and of the hereafter which are rank heresy to followers of orthodox faiths," Justice Douglas said. "Men may believe what they cannot prove. They may not be put to the proof of their religious doctrines or beliefs. Religions experiences which are as real as life to some may be incomprehensible to others . . ."

"If one could be sent to jail because a jury in a hostile environment found these teachings false, little indeed would be left of religious freedom," the justice said, adding that if the doctrines of the parties involved in the court case were subject to judgment, "then the same can be done with the religious beliefs of other sects."

ARMY:
Ask Single Command

In the interests of efficiency, unity of command, economy and elimination of duplications, two war department officers studying reorganization of the services urged the consolidation of the army and navy into a single command instead of separate arms as at present.

However, the spokesmen refused to go as far as Representative Maas (Minn.), who also suggested the adaption of a single uniform for all branches and their functioning as teams. Declaring unity of command at the top would be sufficient, the spokesmen favored retaining the separate identities of the services.

Without a single command, the spokesmen said, the task of coordinating army and navy units and preparing for defense must be left to the President, without any workable machinery to aid him. Economies in securing munitions and other supplies would be effected through a single command, the spokesmen asserted.

WORLD BANK:
For Trade Stability

Consultant economists of 30 out of the 34 United Nations were reported to have agreed on the formation of a world bank with a capitalization of 10 billion dollars to promote international business stability in the postwar period.

Functions of the bank in which the U. S. would have a 2½ billion dollar interest, would be to provide member nations with finances for holding up the value of their money, preventing any drops that would depress their business activity.

Great Britain with $1,250,000,000 and Russia with $1,000,000,000 would be the two other biggest subscribers to the bank, on whose managing committee of nine, the U. S. would have one vote.

BRITISH TAXES

The British exchequer intends to raise about 12 billion dollars of the annual cost of the war by taxation, with the levy amounting to approximately $300 for every person in the kingdom. The year's expenditure for war will likely be double this amount, or slightly more than last year.

Further increases in the tax on non-essential items are anticipated. The basic rate is now 50 per cent on incomes and 100 per cent on luxury items.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BIG LEAGUE PILOT: Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants baseball club, has been accepted by the army. He is 35 and has two children. Ott joined the Giants at 18 and remained with them for 19 years, a league record. He also holds the league home run record of 465 and for runs batted in with 1,669. He is the first big league manager to be drafted.

DRIED EGGS: Profits of the egg drying industry will be somewhat reduced by action of the War Food administration. The WFA will now allow cost of processing and approximately five cents profit per pound of egg powder. Some processors had been buying eggs at considerably below support prices, and so were obtaining an unduly large profit.

Birds released last week were 10 months old. MUST GET PERMITS TO BURN BRUSH OR GRASS

The forest fire towers and fire wardens in Charlevoix, Emmet Cheboygan, Otsego and Antrim counties were placed on duty last week.

Persons who burn brush, grass or rubbish must now obtain a permit from the nearest Conservation Officer, Fire Warden or Towerman before the burning is undertaken. Permits may be obtained by calling in person or by telephone.

If permits are not obtained before burning is started the men on the towers have no way of knowing that such smokes are not actual forest fires and they send a fire warden to the location. The sending of Fire Wardens to false alarm fires is not only expensive but dangerous as on some occasions while the Fire Warden is on such a run a real forest fire starts and it is necessary to send a man with less experience. The permit law provides for severe penalties for burning without a permit and it will be strictly enforced.

The best way to avoid serious loss from forest fires is to prevent them by exercising care. Careless smokers, persons who fail to put out their camp fires, persons who allow grass and rubbish fires to get out of control and other people who are careless with fire cause the burning over of 36,000,000 acres of grass and forest lands in the United States each year. This is an area comparable in size to the entire state of Michigan. Less than 5% of the fires that start can be charged to causes other than man's carelessness.

Due to the lack of labor to combat fires the cooperation of the public is needed more than ever before if serious forest fires are going to be avoided.

We list a few DON'Ts to be adhered to:

DON'T throw away lighted tobacco or matches.

DON'T fail to put out picnic and camp fires completely.

DON'T burn grass, brush or rubbish on dry or windy days and always burn in the evening when possible.

DON'T burn without a permit.

DON'T cause a forest fire by your carelessness.

DEPENDENCY RECIPIENTS IN THIS AREA AIDED

Assistance in speeding payments of delayed dependency benefit checks will be given families of soldiers in the Cadillac area by Lt. John A. Rongen, Area Commander of District No. 1, Sixth Service Command, it has been announced.

Lt. Rongen will forward inquiries on delayed payments to the Personnel Affairs branch of District Headquarters in Detroit where it will be sent to the Office of Dependency Benefits for action.

Delays in receiving payments in recent weeks were attributed in most cases, by Army officials, to the failure of soldiers to submit properly completed marriage and birth certificates, causing payments to be withheld temporarily.

The Cadillac Area office at 105 State Highway Building is available for consultation on all Army matters as they affect soldiers and their families, in addition to regular Area duties.

SMELT RETURNING TO HURON WATERS

Light Run Reported In Whitney Cut, Near Au Gres River

Presence of smelt in fairly large numbers in streams emptying into Lake Huron and in the St. Clair river, and a recent run of the fish in the Menominee river, offer hope, conservation authorities believe, that the species may be able to stage a comeback in northern Great Lakes waters.

A light smelt run in the Whitney Cut near Au Gres and Tawas rivers is the latest to be reported.

While conservation authorities warn against over-optimism, they believe that the reported good condition of the smelt that are being taken may indicate that the fish will be able to reestablish themselves in waters from which they were strangely absent during the last two seasons. The cause of the high mortality that decimated smelt populations in northern lake Michigan, particularly, has not been determined.

PICKLES ARE FULL OF VALUABLE ELEMENTS

A food containing Vitamins and minerals must be thoroughly digestible if the human body is to make full use of such nutritive elements. Pickles are easy to digest. Their gastric juices are rich in acetic and lactic acid, two of nature's wonder-makers in the process of good assimilation.

Acetic acid in palatable form is instinctively craved by the human body, especially when fresh fruits and vegetables are scarce. Although they did not know it, this is one of the reasons why pickles lasted so good to our pioneering backwoodsmen during the long winter months.

Lactic acid has great therapeutic value and is often used to improve the digestibility of milk for infants and invalids. Both of these food acids, which pickles supply, do double duty. They have nutritive properties in their own right and also facilitate the digestion of other nutritive elements which appear with them in a food.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Glad you dropped in, Judge. I was just trying to explain to Mary what you told us down at lodge last night . . . about all the grain used to distill war-alcohol not really being used up. She didn't realize it, either."

"It's true, Mary. Wherever the government has permitted distillers to purchase the equipment necessary to reprocess the used grain, at least 50% of the feed value (25% by weight) of the whole grain is being recovered and returned to farms like yours in the form of premium-quality livestock feed. Only the starch is removed during distilling . . . the part recovered is a highly-prized concentrate containing valuable proteins, fats and carbohydrates. The distilling industry really has taken a leading part in the development of new cattle and poultry feed products from reprocessed grain . . . products rich in vitamins B_1 and B_2 . . . so essential to satisfactory growth and production. And the recovery of grain will apply also to the making of whiskey when production is resumed."

BROOK TROUT IN MAJORITY

OUTNUMBER OTHER SPECIES TAKEN FIVE TO ONE

Prompt Reporting By Anglers Of Their Catches Helps To Improve Conditions

Over five times as many brook trout as the combined catch of rainbow and brown trout were taken from Michigan trout waters in 1943 according to creel census figures released by the conservation department's institute for fisheries research.

Brook trout made up 84.2 per cent of the total reported catch of trout in the tenth annual census report. Total of brook trout taken was up 7.6 per cent from the 1942 figure while rainbows dropped from 12 per cent in 1942 to 11.3 per cent last year and browns dropped from 11.4 per cent in 1942 to 4.5 per cent last year. Average lengths of each of the three species taken in 1943 were greater than during the previous year.

Largest percentage of brook trout was taken in the northern peninsula (64.5 per cent), a considerable drop from the 73 per cent of the total state catch taken in the same area in 1942. The northern half of the lower peninsula contributed 25.3 per cent of the total brook trout catch and 10.2 per cent were taken in the southern part of the lower peninsula.

Greatest number of rainbow trout (53.9 per cent) were taken in the northern peninsula and the largest percentage of brown trout (63.5) was taken in the northern half of the lower peninsula.

Should Report Catches

Prompt reporting of catches by trout fishermen will help to assure continued good fishing, the conservation department's fish division points out. If all fish caught are reported promptly, hatchery workers can better determine the extent of fishing pressure on trout waters in the various districts, the approximate numbers of trout remaining from previous plantings, and can schedule additional plantings to best assure continued successful fishing.

Anglers may report their fishing experiences to any conservation officer. Creel census forms are available for this purpose. The desired information is date, place and time spent fishing, kind of bait used, number of legal-size fish caught, number of sub-legal fish caught, if any, and comment on stream and weather conditions.

There's no risk in revealing one's favorite fishing spot. The information is not published.

Small metal tags are affixed to jaws of many planted trout. One or more fins have been removed from other trout. Fishermen taking marked trout should report tag numbers or missing fins and a complete record of the catch to the Institute for Fisheries Research, University Museums Annex, Ann Arbor, or to any conservation officer. A record of the release of the trout will be furnished to each person reporting.

VESSELS WARNED OUT OF NAVY TARGET AREA

Portions of Lake Michigan waters adjacent to Grand Traverse Bay have been closed again this year, as last, to shipping and are being used for an aircraft target range for aerial machine gun practice, by planes from the Naval Air Station at Traverse City.

Following is an excerpt from the Federal Register for January 29, 1944, which has been circulated among Charlevoix owners of vessels by Harbor Master Joseph Howard, outlining the closed zone:

"The waters of Lake Michigan in the vicinity of Grand Traverse Bay, within the following boundaries: Commencing at the flashing white lighted buoy (R2), marking the southerly limit of South Fox Island shoals, about 9 miles south of South Fox Island, thence due east about 19 miles, passing about 2.5 miles north of Grand Traverse Light on Lighthouse Point, to the sailing course from Grand Traverse Bay to the vicinity of Ile Aux Galets Light, about 2.5 miles from shore; thence N. by E. ¾ E. (18 deg.) along said sailing course about 5 miles to a line drawn between the flashing white lighted bell buoy (B1A), marking the northerly extremity of shoal water at South Point, and the red spar buoy (RS4) marking the north side of deep passageway through South Fox Island Shoals, about 4.5 miles S. ¾ W. (188 degrees) from South Fox Island Light; thence westerly along said line to said red spar buoy (RS4); and thence in a southerly direction about 5 miles to flashing white lighted buoy (R2), the point of beginning."

The regulations provide that no vessel or other craft shall enter or remain within the area at any time except:

"Vessels having a length of 100 feet or more, proceeding in established lanes, may proceed through the area at any time. In case of the presence of any such vessel in the danger area, the officer in charge of firing practice shall cause the cessation or postponement of such operations until the vessel has cleared the area. The vessel shall proceed on its normal course and shall not delay its progress. Commercial fishing vessels may be allowed passage thru the area by the commanding officer, Naval Air Station, Traverse City, Mich., when training operations permit.

Prior to the conduct of firing practice, the area will be patrolled by Navy aircraft to insure that no vessel or other craft having a length of less than 100 feet is within danger area and any such vessel in the vicinity will be warned by means of signals that firing practice is to take place. The naval aircraft will employ the method of warning known as 'buzzing', which consists of low flight by the airplane and repeated opening and closing of the throttle. Any such vessel, upon being so warned, shall clear the danger area immediately."

STORM BROKE THE SHIP IN TWO PARTS

the aerial had parted, but by means of a blinker another ship in the convoy was signaled to stand by until daylight. Shortage of fuel made it impossible for the other vessel to remain, and 11 men went over the side, boarded rafts and were picked up.

"The remainder of the crew stayed on top for two days in the blizzard, because none of them could go below in case the bulkhead should give away," Capt. Morrison said.

Lifeboats Launched

Upon arrival of the rescue ship, lifeboats were launched in the raging sea under extremely hazardous conditions. When the sea carried the last lifeboat away, the captain was forced to swim to another craft.

"My clothing was cumbersome, and it was impossible for me to climb into the boat," remembered Morrison. "A huge wave lent its assistance and threw me into the lifeboat."

In Capt. Morrison's opinion, only one other ship is known to have separated in like fashion to the one he commanded, and the Ann Arbor captain's vessel is the only one on record on which no lives were lost.

"A few men were injured during the rescue," he said, "but none of them was hurt seriously.

The remaining half of the Allied ship is now resting safely in an east Canadian port after being towed 400 miles in two weeks by ocean-going tugs. The forward section is believed to have sunk.

Most of the crew members of the ill-fated ship will return with Capt. Morrison on his next voyage, accompanied by Seaman Tom Marshall and Chief Cook S. Haaxma, both of Ann Arbor.

Apparently not unnerved by his recent venture and regretful that he had to leave his half-ship captainless, Capt. Morrison remarked "I'm good for at least another 30 years of sailing."—Ann Arbor News, April 7, 1944.

TRAIN YOUNG PEOPLE FOR RESORT WORKERS

Importance of the tourist industry to Michigan, and the immediate need for steps to enable this industry to operate during the coming season, has led to provision for a tourist industry training program, George H. Fern, director of the state board of control for Vocational Education announces.

The state board has proposed that the various regional resort and tourist associations sponsor the program with the cooperation of the Michigan State College, local boards of education, and the state board.

The program is designed to recruit, train, and place available high school and college students, and other persons qualified for employment in the resort and tourist industry. These training classes would consist of 20 to 24-hour courses, meeting several times a week, prior to opening of the resort season. The training would be for waitress or maid service work, and other necessary resort jobs.

FISH INDUSTRY RATES SECOND

fishing stations on the Great Lakes. Its operators produce an average of a million pounds of fish a year, for which a gross income of $200,000 is received. While the catch of Charlevoix's fishermen is perhaps not as great as in some other localities, they produce more fish in this area for the amount of time spent in fishing. The season is very short. During the winter, it is necessary to seek open water. Some go south to Ludington, some to Frankfort, Leland and Northport, and occasionally to Traverse City. One of the favorite winter grounds is around Manitou Island, where currents and prevailing winds keep the ice pretty thoroughly broken up. Here, we have the bay and the various points of land to hold it stationary.

Fishing conditions have been excellent, so far this year, and were last year. More whitefish have been produced this spring and during 1943 than there have been in the last fifteen years, in this vicinity. Perch, trout, and chubs (the latter a member of the herring family) are other marketable varieties found in quantity that form the backbone of the local production. Cooperation of the state fisheries division of the Conservation Department has contributed materially to this favorable condition. A large number of fingerlings, grown from spawn, are being planted each year, which should — barring unforeseen setbacks — maintain it indefinitely.

One factor that keeps Charlevoix's fish operators in the front rank of Lake Michigan producers is the great improvement in gear and equipment that has come with the passing of the years that the industry has been in existence here. Most local fishing is done with gill nets and, while there have been betterments in type and quality of these nets as well as in floats, fish and net boxes and buoys, the real advance has been made in the construction and powering of tugs. Nearly all of the vessels operating out of this port are now equipped with Diesel engines, which makes for greater ease of handling and greater power and speed in a seaway.

Commercial fishermen have their full share of "grief" and grievances. One of their chief worries, at present, is the threat of a ceiling price on fish. This, they claim, is bound to force them to take serious losses. It appears to be impossible to keep up production under the ceiling arrangement without costs exceeding revenue. As one man puts it, "A ceiling price is all right if the government can guarantee favorable weather conditions and other factors indefinitely. If not, it spells trouble for us." Some local fishermen say that they cannot secure dockage for their tugs. They plead, with no little justification, that the gear and operations of the shore crews, as well as the passage of the tugs in and out of Round Lake, contribute a colorful and picturesque element to the local scene that is highly attractive to summer visitors. Losses of gear during storms are frequent and costly and insurance rates are almost prohibitive. A handsome, well-varnished yacht looks like big money, but a dilapidated old tug with the paint all battered off may be irreplaceable, with gear and engine, at twice the cost of the yacht. It is nothing unusual for a fisherman to have fifteen or twenty thousand dollars tied up in his boat and gear.

Another thing that most people do not realize is what a fish tug operator has to know in order to stay in the business. The first essential is to be able to stand rough weather on the lake without becoming seasick and to get one's "sea-legs," i.e., to be able to get around a boat and work on it when it is pitching, tossing and rolling. Some men never acquire this knack and others only after a long and painful effort. A good fisherman should have a knowledge of navigation and also some idea about the bottom of the waters he fishes on. He must know how to take fish from nets without injuring either. He must know the various kinds of fish by sight. He must have a practical knowledge of both Diesel and gas engines, in order to operate them efficiently and to make repairs, and he must know his boat thoroughly, in order to locate leaks and stop them. In short, he must be able to fit into any job he may be called upon to do on a boat and to cope with any emergency. If he is master of the vessel, he must know how to handle men and get along with them without friction.

Fish crews are divided into two groups — those who run the boats and catch the fish and the shore crew, or the men who stay on shore, dry and repair nets and overhaul the vessels and gear, after a trip to the fishing grounds. It has been found advisable to keep these two classes of operations distinct. Men who have had their hands in icy water for hours are not nimble-fingered when patching or reeling the nets, nor are they in fit condition, after a trip, to add the shore work to their exhausting labors on the lake. Members of the shore crew must work fast and for long hours in order to keep the gear in good shape. They have to know how to handle a needle, how to "slug" or patch twine and must be familiar with the different kinds of twine that they use.

The eleven Charlevoix operators and the tugs they fish with include Joe Bissel, with the "Joe-Anne," Bill Brodioe and his "Gypsy," Willis Cross and the "R.V.H.," Raymond Cross, the "Swallow," Ralph Cross, "Dorothy M."; Herb Campbell, "Inga N."; Charles Masteau, unnamed; Joe Arvith, "Buddy L."; Rasmus Hendricksen, "Lucille"; John Cross, "G. L. Darnboss," and Geo. LaBlance & Sons, "Miss Charlevoix."

Navy Captain Will Co-ordinate All Activities Of Port Hueneme; A $20,000,000.00 Base

Port Hueneme, large naval base in California, is now under the command of Capt. Hubert E. Paddock, former Charlevoix boy. A recent issue of a West Coast newspaper says:

"Five naval activities of Port Hueneme and vicinity officially became the U. S. Naval Base, Port Hueneme, as Capt. Hubert E. Paddock, U.S.N., assumed command.

Capt. Paddock arrived at the base and begnn to estnblish his headquarters in the navy administration building following a tour of inspection of the activities he will heod.

With the commissioning of the bnse, it was announced that the anti-aircraft training center near Point Mugu already is operating on a limited bnsis, providing instruction for men from construction battalions now at Camp Rousseau.

'The task of the commandant nnd his staff, as I visualize it, is to administrate nnd coordinate the wark of the activities of this nrea, to the end that wheels move smoothly and efficiently townrd the greatest possible contribution to the war effort,' Captain Paddock declared.

Commanding officers now in charge will remain in command of their respective activities. Double-Barreled Smash at 'Fortress' Europe

Here is shown the boundary referred to as Hitler's "Inner Fortress," which soon may be cracking in several places. Even as the Red army pauses in preparation for a spring drive, the Russians are at the very wall of the fortress, and are expected to hit at vital Lwow, rail gate to Warsaw and Berlin. The Allies must crack the heavily fortified coast line and break through many divisions of Germany's out standing troops. Meanwhile, pre-invasion pounds from the air continue to knock out Nazi air strength, cripple rail lines and arms factories.

MUST KEEP ALL AUTOS IN REPAIR

COMMERCIAL AND PRIVATE AUTOMOTIVE EQUIPMENT

As Demands Of War Will Not Yet Permit Of Replacement To Any Great Extent

All truck, bus and passenger car owners have been advised by Harold L. Fier, District Manager, Office of Defense Transportation, that their primary objective during the current year must be to maintain and rehabilitate the vehicles they now own if there is to be no bagging down of the nation's transportation machinery.

"It is very evident," he emphasized, "that the demands of war will prevent any extensive replacement of civilion automotive vehicles during the year. The few trucks and busses that can be built under the War Production Board's program will be needed for critical replacements."

The stockpile of new 1941 model trucks has been practically exhausted. The 1944 schedule of new manufacture includes 64,000 medium weight tracks, 24,000 heavy trucks and 28,000 trailers. Only about 25 per cent of these trucks are scheduled for production during the first half of 1944.

"If this production schedule is measured against a normal and

From Great Bend, Kan.—

Pvt. John D. Swanson writes Great Bend, Kan.: "I want to thank all who make it possible for the boys in the service to receive the home-town paper. I really appreciate it. Sometimes the copies are old, but it's still news to me. It's great to read about the other boys in the service. Was surprised to learn that Ralph Mitchell is in Italy. I would like his address so I could drop him a line. I guess the infantry doesn't waste time, for it doesn't seem that Ralph should be across so soon.

I am in the ordnance section, being trained in munitions. I never knew that bomb fuses were such intricate devices. We are getting ready for the real thing now. This is a heavy bombardment squadron, using the newest and biggest ships, and I reckon we will raise Cain with old Tojo before too long. It's a great little paper — the Courier. Keep it coming.

John Swanson."

From South Pacific—

Ted F. Joncha, S1c, who hasn't been heard from for a long time, writes the following letter from the Pacific: "Thanks a lot for sending me the Charlevoix paper. I've been receiving it now for almost two years and it is great to know what goes on at home. I can't thank you enough for sending it to me. Good luck, too, to all my friends in Charlevoix and in the service. Just a sailor,

MICHIGAN MIRROR

That the Republican purty of Michigan is due to undergo a knock-down, drag-out fight in the 1944 primary is now regarded at Lansing to be highly probable, if not practically certain.

The decision of Vernon Brown, ace vote-getter, tn become a candidate for the party nomination of lieutenant governor rather than for the office of auditor general which pays $3,000 more a year was predicated on Brown's conviction that Keyes had definitely alligned himself with Frank McKay, the Republican national committeeman, and that Republicans should have a clean-cut choice between an "anti-McKay" slate for governor and lieutenant governor and a "pro-McKay" slate for the same state offices.

It is no political secret that Auditor General Brown is regarded by Republicans and many Democrats as the Republican's best vote-getter today, next to Governor Kelly himself. He has served three terms as auditor general and five terms as a representative in the state legislature. In the 1940 general election Brown ran close to Governor-Elect Murray D. VanWagoner; in the 1942 general election he polled more votes in Wayne County than Keyes and Homer Ferguson combined.

It is also no secret to add that Brown would rather serve as auditor general. The auditor general's compensation is $7,500 per annum, divided as follows: Auditor general $2,500, member of state administration board $4,000, chairman of land board $1,000.

As lieutenant governor, Mr. Brown would receive $3,500 as a member of the state administrative board, and $3 a day as the presiding officer of the state senate — just $3,000 less than he has been receiving. The duties of this office carry less responsibility and less compensation.

Following the state Republican convention in Detroit which resulted in virtual ouster of McKay as the party's boss, Governor Kelly expressed his keen displeasure over the persistent opposition of Keyes to his policies. The Kelly-Keyes feud has been growing in intensity.

Kelly felt that Keyes had flirted with forces who were friendly to McKay — namely, Mel McPherson of Lowell and Mayor George Welsh of Grand Rapids — and that a partnership of Kelly and Keyes on the fall ballot would be both inconsistent and illogical.

How could Kelly go all-out for a man who had opposed him with regularity and who continued to hint that he might drag out their personal differences into the arena of political debate as a 1944 candidate for governor? Had not Keyes asked his supporters to circulate petitions for both the gov-

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

BY YOUR CONGRESSMAN FRED BRADLEY

Two weeks ago I had the interesting experience of visiting the United States Coast Guard Academy at New London Connecticut, as a member of the official board of visitors. All four of our service schools have these boards of visitors, the membership of which are appointed by the respective chairman of the committees handling their legislation and the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Vice-President of the United States who serves as President of the Senate.

The United States Coast Guard is the oldest Naval establishment in our Government. Its history dates back to the commissioning of the 10 cutters authorized by the first United States Congress in the Act approved August 4, 1790. That was nine years before the United States Navy, as such, was organized.

The history of the Service has been marked by two consolidations of the services engaged in promoting safety and security at sea, the original purpose for which the Coast Guard was organized. The first of these was the amalgamation of the Revenue Cutter Service with the Life Saving Service, as the Coast Guard, in 1915. The second was the consolidation of the Lighthouse Service with the Coast Guard in 1939. Both have contributed materially to the effectiveness of the Coast Guard's operations in time of peace. In peace time the Coast Guard serves under the United States Treasury; in time of war under the Navy.

Due to the highly specialized type of work performed by the Coast Guard Service, neither our Army nor Navy Academies were found satisfactory to provide the officers for this specialized service and thus in 1876, the Congress established a separate Coast Guard officer training school at New Bedford, Mass. This school was moved to Baltimore, Md., in 1900 and finally in 1910 to its present location at New London, Conn.

Appointments as cadets are offered to young men standing highest in a nation-wide competitive examination held in May of each year, which is open to all who are able to meet the prescribed stand-

REMEMBER WHEN

Fifty-eight Years Ago
(Thursday, May 13, 1886)

From the Files of The Charlevoix Journal)

The world was full of trouble, 58 years ago, as it is now. From the News Condensed column for the week in this issue, we note four men killed by militia and others wounded when "A vast crowd of Polish nihilists marched from St. Stanislaus Church to fight the militia at Bay View (near Milwaukee, Wis.). In Arkansas "many horses and cattle were choked to death by inhaling buffalo gnats." The Father of Waters was overflowing its banks, near Memphis, Tenn., and levees were being patrolled day and night. Burmese insurgents took possession of Mandalay and destroyed no less than four thousand homes by fire. Local British government confessed its helplessness to cope with the situation and called for reinforcements. In Ireland, 698 families, comprising 3,477 persons, in three months time were evicted from their homes. During the same period, 256 outrages were committed (doesn't say what these were).

Frost last Friday morning.

The old fire bell has been put on the bridge.

The new sidewalk on the East side of Grant Street is nearly completed.

Eastport is rejoicing at the prospect of a canal between Torch Lake and Traverse Bay. It would open up a big country.

It is reported, as we go to press, that an attempt was made just before noon, to move the furniture of the county clerk's office and streets were full of interested spectators. No violence was offered and no interference made beyond crowding the room so full of men that it was impossible to take any furniture out.

M. J. Stuckman is out on the street again after his wrestle with the bath in the sanitarium. His case will be watched with a good deal of interest by our people. Being the first to come under the care of the institution, on its success or failure will depend a large measure of the confidence of our people in the curative methods employed by Dr. Sweetland.

my country."

This is the pledge of the 1,500,000 members of the 4-H clubs. Accomplishments revealed at their 22nd congress and contests in Chicago indicate this pledge has been kept—$14,000,000 worth of war bonds and stamps sold, 300,000,000 pounds of scrap collected and 5,000,000 bushels of victory garden products grown. Figures, however, cannot show the democratic power generated by 4-H discussion groups and educational programs.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. MELLENCAMP

Information On Gardening Is Available at Extension Office—

All Victory tiardeners are iavited to get a copy of a new bulietin just received entitled "Michigan Garden Guide." Full and complete information on all gardeners' problems is eaclosed in this vidnable booklet. Such topics as "What to Grow," "Several Practical Garden Plans," "Varieties to Plant," "Time to Plant," "Preparation of the Seed Bed," "Insect Control," "Spraying Schedules" and other information is included in this booklet.

Individuals or groups are urged to secure copies of this material. The public seems to like all the information in one book rather than in different booklets as was the case last year. Just remember that a good home garden should be a part of your war effort and will insure a fresh supply of vegetables for your family throughout tha sumaer.

Schools Enroll Victory Farm Volunteers—

Latest reports indicate that farmers throughout the nation plan to grow approximately 4 per cent larger acreages of crops than in 1943. This means that tha problem of furnishing sufficient labor will be the big job during the aext four or five moaths. Prospects today polat to a good crop of fruit. The cherry harvest alone will need all of the available supply of both adults aad youth that can be recruited. Right now, it will facilitate making this labor available if all farmers will file their work orders at the County Agent's office, indicating their needs.

The enrollment of Victory Farm Volunteers is nearly complete in the rural communities aad is being conducted in the city schools at the present time. Only by 100 per cent cooperation between employers and employees can success come from our efforts.

All cherry growers in particular are urged to analyze their needs, as that will be the first big demand for labor. Following this will be the canning factory crops which will demand all the available help that can ha recruited in the county.

VICTORY GARDEN

Mulch your gardea: Straw, leaves, grass clippings or partly decomposed leaf mold can be used for a mulch if applied on top of the soil. Straw can be applied 3 to 4 inches thick, while grass clippings or leaf mold should be applied 1 to 2 inches thick. This mulch will retain the moisture and at the same time protect tomatoes that are allowed to run by keeping the fruit off the ground and preventing a considerable amount of rotting. Mulches are also desirable on all green crops such as spinach and chard. They keep the dirt from splashing up onto the crop and will reduce the amount of sand in your spinach.

About hilling potatoes: In poorly drained soil the practice of hilling or planting on ridges will help to provide better drainage and to raise the roots above the water level. In dry soils, however, plants are very likely to dry out. As a rule, potatoes should be hilled only enough to cover the tubers and prevent sunburn.

Plant protectors: Paper cones or hotcaps can be used to good advantage in Michigan for protecting plants that have been set out early or seed that has been sown early. Be sure that some ventilation is provided on the top of the hotcap to permit the escape of moist air.

Spray or dust: Whether you spray or dust depends on the equipment you have available. As a rule we find it more convenient to dust. The important thing, however, is to get a thorough coverage and particularly to get the insecticide on the under surface of the leaf. Dust early in the morning or late in the evening when there is little breeze and when the dew is on the plant.

Onion plants: Try some onion plants. Although they really should be in by this time, if you can still find some onion plants in the greenhouse, try some of the sweet Spanish type for winter use. These plants give excellent results.

Cutting potato seed.: It is best to cut your seed potatoes about a week before planting to allow the surface to cure. Each piece when cut should contain at least one eye. Usually three to six pieces can be cut from a potato. For early potatoes some of the seed can be sprouted indoors before planting.

Fixing Up the Farm

by BURTON WILLIAMS

Roof Protection

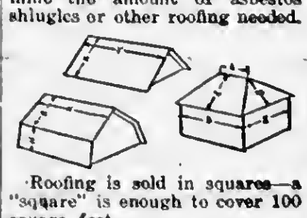
FARM bulldings are war equipment — keep them fit and fighting!

It is estimated that from 25 to 30 per cent of the nation's food supply is lost each year because of inadequate storage facilities. Roof protection is especially important in conserving farm products and equipment.

It pays to keep an eye on your roofs. Here are a few things to watch for: Check exposed nails on roll roofings to see that they haven't worked loose; keep metal flashings and valleys in good condition by frequent painting; keep drain gutters free from dirt, leaves and other refuse.

When re-roofing, be sure to use a durable roofing that will give good service with low upkeep cost — a fireproof material is preferable. Asbestos cement shingles are excellent, because they are fireproof, weatherproof and practically free from upkeep expense.

Here's a simple method for measuring roof areas to determine the amount of asbestos shingles or other roofing needed.



Roofing is sold in squares—a "square" is enough to cover 100 square feet.

To find the number of squares necessary for a shed roof, multiply "x" by "y" and divide by 100. For a gable roof, figure one side in the same way and multiply the result by 2.

A gambrel roof is figured by adding "n" to "r" and multiplying the sum by "h". Double this total, then divide the result by 100 to get the number of squares needed for the entire roof.

For a hip roof, add "a" to "b" and multiply tha sum by "c". Then multiply "d" by "e" and add the two answers. Divide by 100.

Adrian College Pioneered Coeducation

Adrian, Mich.—America's first "co-ed" to receive a graduation diploma got it from the dignified hands of Dr. Asa Mahan, who later became Adrian College's first president. Under his guidance, Adrian College became one of the pioneer colleges which led the co-educational movement, and first opened a world of equal opportunities for young women as well as for men.

The struggling college in those days had to meet much prejudice and opposition. Many were the prophets of doom. Many gifts and bequests to the college were canceled because of its co-ed policy. Some parents withdrew their sons rather than endanger them by the coed innovation. But Adrian kept steadily on its liberal course, until the coeducational practice is now universally accepted.

Adrian drew a high class of young women for students, and their later successes as wives and mothers, as well as in professional fields, gradually overcame the criticisms.

Miss Mary J. Backus, '63, was Adrian's first co-ed to win a diploma from Dr. Maban. He soon after officiated at her wedding to a prominent Adrian business man, Jerome H. Fee, and their children have continued prominent in hometown leadership ever since.

Another Adrian co-ed, from a nearby farm home, was Miss (now Doctor) Elizabeth Crosby, whose neurological studies and successes made her first assistant to Doctor Huber, Dean of the University of Michigan Medical School. Their published discoveries and books are accepted authorities around the world today.

Mr. Campbell is very active as the president of Kewaunee Manufacturing Company, at Adrian,

In scientific and educational circles he is equally well known for his activity in the National Farm Chemurgic Council, the Scientific Apparatus Makers of America, and the National Manufacturers' Association.

His enthusiasm for more practical educational methods stem from his membership in the National Educational Association, and work as trustee in several American colleges, where he has gained intimate knowledge of current problems and objectives.

Mr. Campbell's maturity and breadth of experience are a great asset to the general committee, which has chosen him as chairman for Adrian's Centennial Fund Campaign.

Democracy Versus—

The Shickelgruberinn concept of n master-race, which all other races must bow down before and worship, doesn't meet world requirements today. The authors of this hideous revivnl of tribal vnnity must be reading thot patent fnct in the "burnished rows of steel" with which the United Nations have surrounded them. "All men are created equal" and "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed" are not rhetoric alone.

Michigan's Political Pot

Lt. Governor Eugene C. Keyes and Auditor General Vernon J. Brown squared off Monday for a two-man fight for the Republican lieutenant governorship nominntion as word came from Shelby Monday that Thomas Read, former attorney general and many times lieutenant governor, is no longer interested.

At the same time rumors reached the capitol that Orrin A. Demass, of Detroit, former liquor commission chairman, will not carry out his plans to file for the governorship, thus leaving Gov. Kelly unopposed for renominntion.

On the Democratic side, Ernest T. Brooks, of Holland, State chairman who was drafted to run for the job, filed petitions for the governorship, and James H. Lee, of Detroit? veteran of the city corporation counsel's office, filed for lieutenant governor.

The evening's program was closed with many pleasing selections given by the Ballad Benders, composed of Charles Hamlin, Rev. Donald Evans, and Doctors D. C. Nettleton and G. B. Saltonstall.

The retiring officers, Mrs. Glenn See, Mrs. M. A. Levinson, and Mrs. Ray Kipke, assisted by Mrs. Louis O'Neill, were in charge of arrangements for the evening.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

New Version of an Old American Tradition

We were sitting on Ed Carey's porch, enjoying a friendly glass of beer, when a squadron of fighter planes goes over—in tight formation—swift and trim and powerful.

"There," says Ed proudly, "goes an Amrrican tradition." "What do you mean, tradition?" Eben Crowell says. "America's a hundred sixty years old—flying's the newest thing there is."

"But those planes," says Ed, "they're the best in the world—the best made and the best flown. That's what I mean by an American tradition: making things, doing things, just a little better, whether it's an airplane or a railroad or a glass of fine American beer like this."

And from where I sit, Ed has put his finger on what makes America great—and will keep her great. The urge to do things just a little better—from the planes we make to the glass of beer that we enjoy. Things to be proud of—all of them!

CSO REPORT FOR THE SECOND YEAR IS ONE OF BIG ACHIEVEMENT

expense 36.99
USO Center expense 323.49
$1660.25
Balance on hand $484.29
Memorial fund in escrow $ 50.00
City stamp fund 200.00
Balance in bank 234.39
$484.39

To explain the report in detail the following are enumerated:

The receipts of the past year of the voluntary contributions to the newspaper fund fell short by $193.28. The Tag Day, band concerts and the scrap paper drives, however, took care of this shortage.

Two paper drives were made and two carloads of paper shipped to the National Biscuit Co. for the manufacture of V boxes, netting a total of $425.15. The third drive held recently, netted approximately 12½ tons and although it does not equal the weight of the other cars, it will net about $180.

Contributions to the General Fund by nine summer residents totalled $285. Also the amount of $32 was given, with the stipulation that it be used for USO work only.

The Girl Scouts with the help of S. E. Coleman, grossed a total of $51.46. Ten per rent was given to their treasury for the work but was later given to the CSO fund.

The coin collectors on Bridge Street have netted $24.80.

The Charlevoix High School and Marine Bands and their director, E. E. Beach, deserve a vote of thanks for the splendid cooperation they have given in the Send-offs for the boys going in the service and the two band concerts they have arranged for the benefit of the CSO.

The CSO and the Senior Class '44 cooperated in the Christmas dance for the servicemen, home on leave, and the local Coast Guardsmen.

The War Fund Drive did not reach the expectations of the County War Fund Committee and we received $185.15 for the operation of the USO Center and USO expenditures instead of the $250 we had asked.

In regard to the expenditures, I would like to explain one. First, transportation: this item consisted mostly of returning boys to their homes after pre-induction examinations. At first I tried to obtain different persons, each time, to do this but, after many calls, I found that it was always the same few who answered the calls. They did the work without compensation, but when I was unable to find anyone, it was necessary to hire a taxi. I allowed 5c a mile to those who did do it and many of those people turned the checks back to the CSO.

C. chapter, the occasion being ladies' night, Charlevoix chapter returned the compliment with a stag affair last Friday night in Dr. Douglas Nettleton's game rooms on Clinton Street. Quartets were chosen by lot from the members of both chapters and competed for a prize. This was followed hy election of officers. Choras singing is also becoming a popular feature, ander the able directorship of Rev. Donald Evans.

CSO REPORT FOR THE SECOND YEAR IS ONE OF BIG ACHIEVEMENT

Board and Lodging: This amount was spent for boys who were stranded here from St. James, either in returning to the Island after receiving pre-induction examinations, or by arriving here the day before they were to report for examination.

Office Expense: Stamps, postage, mimeographing, checking expenses, etc.

Newspaper Expense: This consists of the amount paid for servicemen's subscriptions for the Charlevoix Courier. The publisher has granted the CSO a discount and approximately 500 papers are being sent each week.

Send-off Expense: Money spent for magazines during the past year, which are given to the boys as they leave. The VFW has cooperated in these send-offs by contributing cigarettes to the boys.

Awards: Although this item is almost a military secret at this time, it will soon be displayed in the Central Drug Store window. Each boy from Charlevoix will receive one. It will represent a Certificate of Recognition from the people of Charlevoix for those boys who are now fighting for us. I think it is the least we can do to give them something to remember us in post-war days and to show our appreciation for the present.

Stamp and Bond Booth Expense: Repainting the booth and signs used to designate those organizations who cooperated in the sales of Stamps and Bonds, last summer. The total amount sold at the booth, which was converted into bonds, was $29,291.45. Those cooperating in this feature were the Kiwanis, K. of P.'s, American Legion, Girl Scouts, N.C.C.M., V.F.W., Belvedere Club, SPEBS-QSA, the North Side Association and the Blue Star Mothers. It is hoped to put the booth in operation on Decoration Day and to have organizations furnish salesmen and saleswomen each week.

Window Display Expense: The Central Drug Store deserves a vote of thanks for the use of their only display window for the purpose of this display. It has been necessary to furnish another stand for the background of this.

Hospital Boxes, Etc.: This amount was used in building up a small inventory of items to be used when sending hospital boxes to boys who are confined to the hospital by wounds, injuries or illness in this country and overseas, if it is possible to send them a box. We ask the public's cooperation in notifying us of these boys. You may call Frances Martin at 367 with any information you may have on this.

Scrap Paper Drive Expense: Cost of advertising and amount paid to Norwood, Ellsworth, etc., for paper sent in car with Charlevoix paper.

Tag Sales Expense: Amount paid to Girl Scouts and later donated to CSO.

Christmas Greetings Expense: Cost of full-page inserted in Courier last Fall, conveying Christmas Greetings to men in service.

Band Concert Expense: Advertising and cost of tickets for benefit concerts.

Dance and Entertainment Expense: Explained under CSO-Senior Dance.

USO Center Expense: As published recently, we are disbanding the center and have asked that all people having furniture there call about it, so it may be delivered to them. It was necessary to keep a small amount of heat in the building to keep the water from freezing and the pool table from warping. Last summer an attempt was made to keep the center open and this expense is included in the amount stated as insurance, soft drinks, later sold and turned back to general fund, cleaning, etc. Radio, records, games etc., have been loaned to the local Coast Guard Station. Drapes, curtains, and other furnishings are being stored for the time being, awaiting final disposal. Games, ping pong balls, recording discs, were purchased for the Coast Guard room and subscriptions to magazines paid for. Subscription to the USO monthly record service was obtained and each month a movie program is given the boys. With the center out of operation this year and with the above service we are giving the local Coast Guard Unit, the cost for the ensuing year will undoubtedly be about half of the amount spent last year.

The amount in the bank at the present time is $234.39. The newspaper subscriptions are paid until August, with the exception of the new subscriptions added since February 1st. It will undoubtedly cost more for hospital boxes this year, with many more boys in the service.

Although the Honor Roll does not come under the scope of the CSO, as it was the city council who planned, built and maintain it, we have been asked to see that the names are inserted as the boys leave for the service. This feature has been turned over to Anne Higman, and any questions regarding this should be forwarded to her.

Members of the Charlevoix Service Organization committee are Ralph Hamilton, chairman; S. E. Coleman, Mrs. P. R. Ross, Mrs. Charles Bellinger, Mrs. Harry Walstead, Rev. A. V. Ulanowicz, and E. J. Edwards.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Guess we're pretty lucky in our town, Judge, that we don't have the youth problem you read about in other places."

"Don't know as you can call it lucky, Harold... we saw it coming with the war and we did something about it before it hit us. We gave our 'teen age youngsters the recreational facilities they needed and really wanted. Those familiar with this wartime problem know that young folks go to places they shouldn't only when the proper places are not provided for them. Young people always want to be with others of their own age... want their own type of entertainment. Town after town has found out that once these simple wants are met, the problem is well on its way to being licked."

"Guess I didn't really know how far-sighted our town really is, Judge. If we hadn't looked ahead we wouldn't have had anybody or anything to blame but ourselves, would we?"

Farm Income Up 23% Last Year Over 1942

Livestock, Oil Crops Made Largest Gains

Another good year for farm income from marketings appears to be in prospect for American farmers. Returns in 1943 were 23 per cent greater than in 1942, according to reports from the U. S department of agriculture, and a continued peak demand for crops and livestock may be anticipated.

Livestock was responsible for last year's marked upswing, figures show, returning $11,189,000,000 out of the total income of $10,092,000,000 from farm marketings. Crops brought in $7,815,000,000. The livestock break-down shows a total of $5,953,000,000 received by farmers for meat animals, $2,705,000,000 for dairy products, and $2,322,000,000 for poultry and eggs.

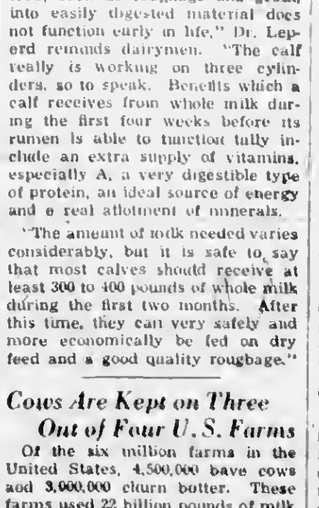
Gain of 40 Per Cent In South.

Income from livestock as a whole showed a 20 per cent increase in the Western region, and a 40 per cent rise in the South Atlantic region. In Georgia poultry and egg returns were nearly twice the 1942 figure, and in Delaware they went up 87 per cent. The South Atlantic region reported a 70 per cent increase in income from poultry and eggs. Receipts from hogs were high in all sections, with the West North Central region reporting an increase of 41 per cent and the state of Iowa an increase of 39 per cent.

Income from feed grains and hay went up 36 per cent over 1942, with receipts for 1943 totalling $1,114,000,000 compared with $815,000,000 in 1942.

Striking gains were reported for the oil crops, with an income of more than three times the 1942 figure reported in the North Atlantic and South Central regions. The income from oil-bearing crops for the United States as a whole was $611,233,000, compared with $166,000,000 in 1942. Peanut income in Texas was some six times the 1942 return, and soybeans brought in 12 times as much.

Income from vegetables and truck crops increased in all regions with the largest percentage shown in the South Atlantic region where an increase of 52 per cent was reported.



"Grandma insists upon helping to increase soybean production."

Don't Skimp on Milk in Feeding Young Calves

Calves raised in a market milk area often receive a limited amount of whole milk. This is all right, according to Dr. Olin L. Lepard, assistant professor of dairy husbandry at Rutgers university, provided you don't skimp to the point where it will be harmful to the young animals. And that is apt to happen in times of a scarcity of fluid milk.

"We must remember that even though a calf has four stomachs, the one which is able to change coarse food, such as roughage and grain, into easily digested material does not function early in life," Dr. Lepard reminds dairymen. "The calf really is working on three cylinders, so to speak. Benefits which a calf receives from whole milk during the first four weeks before its rumen is able to function fully include an extra supply of vitamins, especially A, a very digestible type of protein, an ideal source of energy and a real allotment of minerals.

"The amount of milk needed varies considerably, but it is safe to say that most calves should receive at least 300 to 400 pounds of whole milk during the first two months. After this time, they can very safely and more economically be fed on dry feed and a good quality roughage."

Cows Are Kept on Three Out of Four U. S. Farms

Of the six million farms in the United States, 4,500,000 have cows and 3,000,000 churn butter. These farms used 22 billion pounds of milk in 1943, more than 11 billion pounds being consumed on the farms where produced, 7½ billion going into production of farm butter and over 3 billion pounds being fed to calves.

Fluid milk and cream consumption in the U. S. is highest in history, according to the WFA.

AGRICULTURE:

Wheat Prospects

With an indicated yield of 12.8 bushels per acre, the U S department of agriculture predicted a 1944 winter wheat crop of 601,759,000 bushels, 72,153,000 more than last year's production.

Western Kansas and the adjoining wheat sections of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Colorado benefited most from recent rain, the precipitation offsetting a moisture deficiency of last fall. Nebraska, however, still was reported in need of rainfall to perk weakened plants.

Frequent rains or snows gave the crop producing areas of the country the wettest March since 1922, the department said, delaying farm work in nearly all states.

Farm Values Up

Average prices of farm land in the U. S. were pushed up 15 per cent in the year ending March 1, the department of agriculture reports, with values now 38 per cent above the 1935-39 figures and sales of land are more numerous than during 1919. Much of the acreage is going into "active-farmer ownership" it was stated. More than half the sales were for cash.

Some buyers resold for a quick profit, but the majority of purchasers are seeking additional land for planting. Compared with the 1935-39 averages, values have increased almost three-fifths in the East-South-Central states and more than two-fifths in the South Atlantic, Mountain and Pacific states.

POLITICS:

Dewey Boomed

Growing strength of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, N. Y., as the favorite for the Republican presidential nomination in June, and the strong showing made by Gen. Douglas MacArthur for the position in the Illinois GOP primary, highlight political talk.

Of equal interest, however, is President Roosevelt's continued popularity in the Democratic party, reflected in his capture of the Wisconsin convention delegates, and his heavy vote in the Nebraska preferential primaries.

Governor Dewey's candidacy boomed sky-high in the Wisconsin primaries, when 18 convention delegates pledged to him won handily over the field. In the Nebraska primaries, approximately 15,000 voters expressed their favoritism for him by writing in his name on the ballot.

Running strongly in the rural districts, General MacArthur polled over 450,000 votes in the Illinois primaries.

MEXICO:

President Saved

As Mexico's President Manuel Avila Camacho stepped from his automobile in the courtyard of the executive offices in Mexico City, a 30-year-old army lieutenant strode toward him. As the two men approached each other, the lieutenant suddenly whipped out a revolver and fired point-blank at the president, but the bullet merely ripped through the coat and vest of the president without wounding him.

President Camacho

Quickly overpowered by Camacho himself, the lieutenant was taken into custody, where he complained of a recent law prohibiting Mexican army officers from attending church in uniform. Later in trying to escape from guards, the assailant was felled with gunfire.

As the news of the attempted assassination stirred the emotional Mexican populace, Camacho calmly warned against turbulence, declaring: "I wish you to see this as an incident possibly caused by a sole individual or at the most a small group. Under no circumstances must we divide the Mexican nation. We must continue our effort for the conservation of its unity."

RUM:

Admit Old Stocks

Because restrictions against importation into the U. S. would not help to divert alcohol to the synthetic rubber or other war industries, the War Production board lifted all bans against the shipment of rum three years old or older into the country.

As a result, it is expected that 2,000,000 gallons of the rum will be imported from Cuba, Mexico, Jamaica and other foreign countries. Heavy rum producing areas like Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands will not be affected, however, since the U. S. regulates the production of beverage cane spirits in its territories and possessions.

Since the rum affected by the new order was manufactured before the present emphasis on volume sales and lighter grades, it is of high quality, the WPB said.

CIVILIAN GOODS

To prevent a drain on manpower in war industrial centers, the War Production board froze production of civilian goods at the level of the last three months in 183 labor shortage areas throughout the country.

Reflecting the changing needs of warfare, the WPB also raised production of heavy artillery, munitions and gun carriages to top priority.

One effect of the order freezing production of civilian goods is expected to be the reduction in output of electric irons.

U. S.-British Heavy Bombers Continue Blasting of Nazi Defenses, Railroads; Task Force Hits Jap Base at Truk; 'Riot' Sales Reflect Need for Goods

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union

Bougainville—Yanks from 37th division, formerly the Ohio National Guard, go into action behind U. S. tank against Japs infiltrating into their lines on Bougainville in Solomons.

MEATS:
Supply Plentiful

Because of a halt in meat lease buying, reduced military demands and bulging warehouses, the OPA removed all meats except beef steaks and roasts from rationing.

Even as the OPA acted, packers were being deluged with heavy receipts of hogs, reflecting the tight feed situation recently aggravated by the government's embargo on all private corn sales in 12a midwest counties in an effort to divert 80,000,000 bushels of the grain to industrial processors for war uses. In one day, 20 leading markets received 200,000 hogs compared with 116,000 the previous week and 140,000 a year ago.

After one week of extensive solicitation by county AAA officials, it was announced farmers offered more than 27,000,000 bushels of corn for sale to the government for the newly created processing industry.

OPA's action removed from rationing all cuts of pork, veal and mutton; all beef except the steaks and roasts; beef hamburger and stews; all kinds of variety meats; sausage; ready-to-eat meats; canned meats and canned fish.

EUROPE:
Invasion Bombardment

Thundering over western Europe, thousands of U. S. and British planes continued their round-the-clock bombardment of Nazi coastal defenses and rail lines feeding them, as Berlin anxiously eyed the heavy concentration of shipping in invasion waters.

As the west rumbled under the crushing bombardments, quiet settled over the long active Russian front, but here, too, the storm reportedly brewed, with the Reds massing forces for an all-out blow at the Germans to coincide with the U. S. and British invasion.

About 1,100,000 Nazis were at arms along the heralded German "Atlantic Wall" under supreme leadership of Marshal Erwin Rommel, but leaving no stone unturned, they were reported prepared to protect their flank by flooding the Netherlands by blasting the dikes and dams holding back the rumbling sea water.

CIVILIAN GOODS:
Scarcity Rule

Reflecting the demand for civilian goods, crowds rushing to buy 1,500 war model alarm clocks in a Chicago department store, smashed display cases and created a mild riot before police were finally summoned to restore order.

Although such riots are not expected to become the rule during the rest of 1944, scarcity of many items is. For instance, a few war model alarm clocks are expected to be produced in the second quarter of this year and some electric clocks with plastic cases will be available in July.

Baby carriages of prewar construction containing nine pounds of metal will continue to be marketed in limited numbers. Despite increased use of metal in upholstered furniture, the shortage of lumber is expected to hold down production. Electric flat-irons should reappear in stock later in the year. No refrigerators but ice-boxes of plasticized wood pulp will remain available.

MacARTHUR:
Out of Race

With a return in the Philippines his only ambition, Gen. Douglas MacArthur once and for all put an end to efforts to forward his candidacy for the Republican nomination for president.

Returning to his New Guinea headquarters after the successful assault on Hollandia, General MacArthur declared: "... I request that no action be taken that would link my name in any way with the nomination. ... I do not covet it, nor would I accept it."

General MacArthur's blunt disapproval quieted the flurry caused by the publication of his correspondence with Representative Miller (Neb.) in which the latter urged him to become a silent candidate and he himself commented on domestic conditions.

Typical was Sen. Tom Connally's reaction. Said he: "... I have never believed he would halt in his war services to pursue politics."

PACIFIC:
Truk Lambasted

On their way back from Hollandia where they assisted Gen. Douglas MacArthur's invasion forces, a fleet of U. S. aircraft carriers launched a sustained attack on the big Jap base of Truk and outlying atolls, hammering formidable ground installations.

In India, the British massed strong defensive forces as the Japs continued to press on key junctions dominating the roads to the Assam-Bengal rail line supplying Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's troops, fighting to clear a new overland route to China through mountainous North Burma.

The navy's attacks on Truk and outlying islands which reportedly cost the Japanese 126 planes besides damaging their ground defenses, was a continuation of the heavy assaults on these enemy outposts, standing athwart the overseas route to the Philippines and Asiatic mainland, where stands the bulk of Tojo's armies.

MOSCOW VISIT:
Mission Assailed

One of the strangest and most startling incidents of the war was the sudden appearance of the Rev. Stanislaus Orlemanski of the Holy Rosary Catholic church of Springfield, Mass., in Moscow by the side of Marshall Josef Stalin and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

Reverend Orlemanski

Long a champion of closer Polish relations with Russia despite the latter's claim to eastern Polish territory, U. S. born Reverend Orlemanski left his diocese without ecclesiastical authority.

While the official Russian press played up Rev. Orlemanski's visit, the reported aim of the priest to sell the idea of collaboration with Moscow to U. S. Poles drew hot fire from some of their prominent leaders. Said John Olejiczak, president of the Polish Roman Catholic union: "... Father Orlemanski does not represent any one at all..."

LABOR:
Union Security

Perked by Montgomery Ward and company's persistent opposition to the maintenance of membership clause compelling employees to remain within a union for the life of its contract with a firm, the industry representatives on the War Labor board opened up a fight on the provision.

Asking that the WLB agree to test its power to impose the maintenance of membership clause on employers by taking the case to court, the industry representatives declared:

1. Maintenance of membership restricts a worker's freedom to decide his own union affiliations;

2. Maintenance of membership has yet to be proved a device for stimulating production, and,

3. Maintenance of membership might disturb harmonious relations between labor and capital.

Foremen Strike

Opposed by industry generally on the grounds that foremen properly are a part of management, the question of unionization of foremen came to the front in Detroit's automobile plants.

In the five plants of the Briggs Manufacturing company, 6,000 members of the United Auto Workers staged a two-hour sit-down in support of the walkout of 1,600 foremen over demands for recognition of the Foremen's Association of America.

At the Hudson Motor company, an undetermined number of foremen struck in protest against the alleged discharge of a supervisor without a hearing, but the firm continued production despite their absence.

OLD WARRIOR:
Comes Back

At 90-year-old Jacob S. Coxey stood on the steps of the nation's capitol in Washington, D. C., in a faded blue suit and high old fashioned collar with a black string tie, there were memories of his celebrated march to the same site at the head of 1,000 unemployed in 1894.

Jacob Coxey

Then, Coxey had intended to petition congress to issue interest-free government money for erection of public works, but police herded Coxey and his followers to the outskirts of the capital.

Fifty years had not changed Coxey's views. As he appeared in Washington, D. C. this time in connection with his attendance at the 36th annual convention of the Hoboes of America, he again shouted for government issuance of interest-free money instead of dependence upon the private banking system for currency, provided through its purchase of U. S. Bonds.

NEUTRALS:
Curb Axis Business

Responding to U. S. and British pressure to curb shipments of tungsten to Germany, Spain agreed to limit deliveries of this vital metal-hardening ore to the Nazis to 20 tons monthly during May and June and 40 tons monthly thereafter.

As a result of the agreement which also included the ouster of all German agents in the Gibraltar region, the U. S. and Britain pledged to resume shipments of 48,000 tons of bulk oil and 15,000 tons of packaged petroleum products monthly to Spain.

U. S. and British pressure on Turkey to stop increased chrome shipments to Germany resulted in a temporary suspension of deliveries pending review of the request, but Sweden has held out against Allied demands for termination of its lucrative ball-bearing trade with the Nazis.

SUPREME COURT:
Can't Tax U. S.

In a 7 to 2 decision read by Justice Jackson, the U. S. Supreme court ruled that government-owned property is not taxable, regardless of whether assessments are made directly against the government or its lessee.

The court's opinion was handed down in a case where Alleghany county, Pa., had placed a higher valuation upon a gunmaker's real estate because the factory on which it stood contained government equipment used in manufacturing operations.

Declaring the county's procedure amounted to placing a general property tax on government-owned equipment with resulting higher costs to the government for defraying the gunmaker's increased tax payments, the court said that actually the assessment was made against the machinery and not against the real estate.

AUTOS

There are only about 47,000 new passenger automobiles on hand, the Office of Price Administration reports. At the beginning of rationing, there were 532,000, most of which have been sold to purchasers in war essential activities.

Explaining the policy of holding on tightly to the small number still remaining an OPA representative said, "It is essential that some new cars be made available as long as possible to take care of highly important services."

HIGHLIGHTS ... in the week's news

BASEBALL: Attendance at major league baseball games is 13 per cent higher than last year, club secretaries report.

ASCAP: Two new members have been admitted to ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers). They are Leopold Stokowski, symphony orchestra director, and Al Trace, band leader, who introduced "Mairzy Doats."

LEATHER: While good quality hides are scarce, there will be sufficient leather for shoes within the limits of rationing, according to trade sources.

SWOON-CROONER: The British have begun a nationwide search for a singer who can send the girls into "swoons of rapture" as Frank Sinatra is reported to do, says the London Daily Mirror.

ernorship and lieutennnt governship, saying that he would make up his mind later on?

Such was the pressure by the governor on the Auditor General. Brown had previously announced that he was a candidate again for auditor general, because of "unfinished business" in which he was greatly interested.

Brown mustered arguments to convince the governor that he could perform greater public service as auditor general than as lieutenant governor.

Finally Brown became convinced that, for the good of the party, Republicans should be afforded the opportunity of nominating candidates for governor and lieutenant governer who were acknowledged to be opposed to McKay. His decision to become Kelly's running mate, subject to primary approval, was predicated entirely on a personal belief that the people of Michigan had been good to him, as expressed in democracy through party ballots, and that he should support the party's efforts, as crystallized at the Detroit convention, to rid itself of so-called "boss control."

The governor's office expects that this choice will be given to Republicans this spring in the form of a Read-Keyes ticket, supported by McKay.

There also is speculation that McKay followers may not take a primary defeat without making an effort, at the November election to inflict hallot retaliation by swinging Barnard-McKay followers into the Democratic camp, possibly under some pre-arranged deal of political condition.

A factional split will be welcome ment for the Democrats who apparently have settled on State Chairman Ernest Broeks of Holland as their choice for the governorship after weeks of hesitation and unsuccessful attempts to draft Picard, Van Wagoner, Fry and others. As Republican factionalism grows, democratic hopes will rise.

Auditor General Brown's knowledge of state government is profound. He is a successful country newspaper publisher at Mason who served ten years in the state legislature and is concluding six years' service as state auditor general. He is known to be dry; his newspaper will not accept alcoholic beverage advertising, and, in fact, has even refused cigaretto advertising because of the editor's personal ideals.

He is a Protestant and thus a good team-mate for Kelly, a Roman Catholic. He is a farmer by original vocation and owns a farm today; Kelly is a lawyer. He has been a vigorous supporter of generous appropriations for civilian defense: Kelly is a distinguished veteran of World War I whose limping walk is a constant reminder of his own personal sacrifice as a soldier-patriot. Brown is an upstater; Kelly hails from metropolitan Detroit.

Back of his new decision is also a belief that the office of lieutenant governor, in today's modern world of many complexities, should be elevated into new dignity akin to that of an "assistant governor." This official would be truly a partner to the governor and thus fully qualified by intimate knowledge of daily problems to preside with efficiency and wisdom should fate ever impose responsibility of the office upon him.

Keyes' rise as an unknown comet into the Michigan political sky dates to the 1940 primary when nine candidates vied for one nomination. He is a crusader at heart a man who thinks of himself as a knight battling for the people in a world of scheming, greedy politicians. Keyes' strength has been the ability to impress others of his sincerity and his zeal.

In Vernon J. Brown he will find more than a real match.

ANTHONY KENNY A PIONEER SETTLER

East Jordan Dreyman Passes At Ripe Age Of Seventy-five

Anthony Kenny, 75-year-old East Jerdan pioneer drayman, passed awny at his home Tuesdny evening, May 9th, following a protracted illness.

His father enme to Canada from County Galwny, Ireland, and from there to the United Stntes, where he married an Ogdensburg, N. Y., girl, Miss Adelia Burney, in 1857. Ten years later, the couple enme to East Jordan with their three older children and teok up a homestead near what was then the village. Anthony was born there on June 30, 1868.

Mr. Kenny retired in 1942, nfter 50 years in the teaming and draying business, because of failing health. MUST KEEP AUTOS IN GOOD REPAIR accumulated demand for more than a million trucks," said Mr. Frier, "it is obvious that no truck owner should be encouraged to expect thnt he will automatically obtain a new truck as a repiacement for the worn out or outmoded truck which he now owns."

This situntion is directly attributable to the fact that manufacturing plants equipped to make trucks, busses and cars are engnged in manufacturing military vehicles and munitions of war.

Since this materlal is "expendable" there must be n constant flow of new trucks, jeeps, tanks, gun carrinpes, guns and tires to the army nnd navy. To supply this imperative demand, practically all truck, bus and automobile manufacturing facilities are being used to capncity.

Despite this pessimistic outlook, however, there is a brighter side in spite of the great demands on truck manufacturers, the replacement parts situntion is better. With a more ndequate supply of parts which should be nvailable this year, the nation's trucks can be kept in operation by minimum overhauling and by regular preventive maintenance. While this improved situation will not mean that there will be a generous supply of parts on every dealer's shelves, the supply should permit an orderly overhnul of essentinl trucks, said Mr. Frier.

"Both before and after overhaul, however, present trucks, and their tires should be conserved to the utmost hy careful use, proper loading, proper speed, and by complete preventive maintenance," he declared.

nrds. The mental requirements are in general those required for admission to a high grade engineering college. The figures show that on the average for the past 10 years, approximately 2,500 boys file applications to take the examinations for admission to the Academy. Of these approximately 500 succeed in passing the rigid entrance examinations in mathematics and English. Of these 500, approximately 150 are selected, based upon their scholastic attainments in the test and their superior physical qualifications. Thus it is easy to see that the Coast Guard in selecting 150 out of an initial application of 2,500 is theoretically accepting only the "cream of our youth." There are at present 330 regular cadets in this Academy. These cadets come from 44 states, the District of Columbia, Alaska, and Hawaii. Michigan has but seven boys in the Academy at the present time; one of the seven is Cadet 2c R. L. Kallin of Escanaba with whom I also had an interesting visit.

The accelerated 3-year course instituted in 1942 remains in effect, but the Academic Board has recommended return to the normal 4-year course for the class due to enter this year.

I sincerely hope more of our boys from the Great Lakes' area will become interested in the Coast Guard and above all in putting forth the necessary competitive effort to qualify for admission to this outstanding educational institutional, dedicated to knowledge of the sea and the defense of our country. If any young men would like descriptive literature on the Academy, same is available upon request of my office.

Agricultural Bulletin Requests—

Early this spring many of you received from my office a bulletin list from which to order agricultural bulletins in which you were especially interested. Quite a few orders were received by my office which did not contain the name and address of the sender. Consequently, if you have not received your order, it is doubtless for this reason and I would be glad to receive your duplicate request.

LAKESIDE RITES FOR SAILOR DEAD

PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR TUESDAY, MAY 30

American Legion And Veterans Of Foreign Wars Unite With Other Organizations

Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226, American Legion, and Veterans of Foreign Wars No. 1153, in cooperation with local schools and civic organizations, plan an impressive memorial service for Tuesday, May 30th.

While Memorial Day services will conform closely to those of previous years, this year, in the third year of America's participation in the war, should make the day one of the most significant in American history as a memorial to those who gave their lives in past wars and those who have and those who may make the supreme sacrifice in the present struggle to maintain liberty.

O. P. North, Legion chaplain, has announced that Probate Judge Rollie L. Lewis will deliver the address.

With Floyd Black acting as marshal, the parade will form on Park Avenue at 9:30 a. m. and begin marching at 10 a. m. The order will be colors with U. S. Coast Guardsmen as color guard, school band, Blue and Gold Star Mothers, veterans, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, patriotic organization, school children.

All service men and women on leave are extended a special invitation to join the parade.

The ceremonial of casting a wreath on the water for the sailor dead will take place at Memorial Park, conducted by the Blue Star Mothers. Taps will be sounded and the march resumed to Brookside Cemetery.

Program at the cemetery will include: "Star Spangled Banner," school band; invocation, Rev. Leigh H. Hagle; "Gettysburg Address," Marion Craig; address by Judge Rollie L. Lewis; floral tribute; salute, taps; "America," by school band; benediction, Rev. Wilford D. Wood.

Aside from the regular services, St. Mary's Catholic Church will conduct a memorial mass at 8:00 a. m. at the church.

Legion members will decorate graves of veterans at the cemetery Friday evening.

Charlevoix business places, schools, city and county offices will close Tuesday.

The cooperation of all people is earnestly sought to carry out Tuesday's program. It is little enough to ask and little enough to give in honor of those who have given their all for our country.

Ray H. Knight Is Captain

S. S. Charlevoix Throws Spray On Way To Oceans Of World

Three hundred thirty-eight feet long, five thousand dead-weight tons, the S. S. Charlevoix splashed into Wisconsin's Kinnickinnic River at the stroke of 12 noon, Saturday, May 13th, sending sheets of driving spray that doused workmen on both banks with showers of ice-cold water. The Charlevoix, named for our county, was the second coastal cargo carrier to be launched at Froemming Bros., Inc., Milwaukee yards for the Navy. Twelve more are to be built.

The U. S. Martime Commission, at whose order the vessels are being built, called upon the Milwaukee County Chapter of the American Red Cross to name one of their members who would act at the christening ceremonies. As a result, it was Mrs. Edwin Buchanan, wife of the vice-president of Milwaukee's First Wisconsin National Bank, who smashed the bottle of champagne across the Charlevoix's bows as the Navy vessel slid down the greased skids. Mrs. Buchanan was chosen for her outstanding work with the motor corps — she delivers sewing and bandage materials, picks up finished products, and drives plasma groups to the blood donor center. In addition, she joins in sewing and office work. She has a son, Capt. Thomas E. Buchanan of the Air Service Command, now stationed on the West Coast.

The name of Capt. Ray H. Knight, master of the new Charlevoix, will be intriguing to old-timers in this section. Capt. Knight spent his boyhood here, and was the last one to run a boat, The Mabel, between Charlevoix and East Jordan back in 1918-1919. In a letter to the Courier, the captain says:

"It has been many years since I left the old home town, but Charlevoix was brought back to me quite forcibly on May 11th when I was handed orders making me captain of the new ocean cargo ship, named for the town and county where I spent my happy childhood days. This ship will take the name Charlevoix all over the world, supplying our boys on the far-flung battle fronts. I am happy to have this opportunity to be the first captain of a ship named for my old home town."

Ships of the Charlevoix type have a beam of 50 feet, are single screw and Diesel-powered, and have a speed comparable to the big new Victory ships now being built by the commission.

Ships of more than 259 feet in length cannot be taken directly into the Atlantic Ocean through the St. Lawrence Waterway due to lock restrictions. Because these carriers are considerably longer, they will be taken to Lockport, Ill., pontoons fitted to their sterns, and they will then be towed down the Illinois River to the Mississippi, to New Orleans, and into the Gulf of Mexico.

GOVERNOR KELLY ANNOUNCES PLANS TO OBSERVE D DAY

LANSING—Plans for universal observance of "D-day" in Michigan have been announced by Governor Kelly.

The special observance will be initiated by the ringing of air raid sirens, ringing of church bells and blowing of factory whistles, the governor said.

All Michigan residents will be asked to pause wherever they are and remain silent in prayer and reflection for one minute, he said.

The governor said he plans to proclaim the observance immediately after official word is received that the invasion of western Europe has been launched. If possible, the time of observance will be fixed within two hours after the announcement.

The governor's proclamation will be distributed throughout the state by the Michigan Office of Civilian Defense's air raid warning system, according to Capt. Donald S. Leonard, state director.

METHODIST YOUTH FELLOWSHIP MEETS

A sub-district meeting of the Methodist Youth Fellowship was held at the Methodist Church in Petoskey on Sunday evening. The meeting opened with a talk by the Rev. Oscar Wells, of the Parr Memorial Church in Petoskey, who told of his experiences as a Jap prisoner, and about his work as a missionary in China for several years before the war. A cooperative supper in the church dining room was attended by more than a hundred members. Bernard Matchett, of the Barnard Church, presided at the evening session. Rev. Ross Stokes, of Petoskey, had charge of the service. Among those from Charlevoix who attended were the Rev. and Mrs. Leigh H. Hagle, Audrey and Douglas Byers, Don North, William Poole, Robert Crain, Beth Meggison, Eileen and Eddis Leigh Hagle.

CHIEFS OF POLICE TO MEET HERE AGAIN

Select Charlevoix As Site For Second Consecutive Year

A long distance call yesterday to Rae Ann Gravuer, manager of the Belvedere Hotel, informed her that the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police will meet here on July 10th, 11th, and 12th.

Commissioner Olander will arrive on Thursday to meet with Miss Gravuer, Mayor Bridge and Chief Heise to formulate plans for the convention.

The hotel and the city are to be congratulated in being able to cause the association to establish a precedent by convening in successive years in Charlevoix. Attendance last July was the largest in the association's history and the delegates were lavish in their praise of accommodations at the Belvedere, and of Charlevoix as a setting for their meeting.

CUB SCOUTS TO RALLY AT RECREATION HALL

Charlevoix Pack No. 111 of the Cub Scouts will hold a meeting at St. Mary's Recreation Hall at 8 o'clock Monday evening, May 29. "Pete" Sutton's Medals—

On April 17, 1942, just before he embarked for overseas duty, Sgt. Orrin C. Sutton, wrote a comforting letter to his mother, Mrs. Carrie Sotton, telling her among other things that no matter what happened he wanted her to be proud of him. That was two years ago. Everyone knows about his exploits that made the front pages of every newspaper and many magazine sections in the country, rolling up a score of 30 to 40 dead Japs deep in the jungle mire of New Guinea. This week Mrs. Sutton brought to the Courier office the medals he has since received and sent to her. They include the Purple Heart for being wounded in action, the Distinguished Service Cross for braving enemy fire in the ruck and muck of New Guinea to rescue his buddies. Orrin was inducted into the service in April, 1941, one of the first from this section. His brother Bertram was inducted in October, 1942, and is now in New Guinea but as yet they have not met. Another brother, Pvt. Harlan Sutton was inducted in April of this year and is now training in Texas.

23rd Annual V. F. W. Poppy Sale To Be Held Saturday

Proceeds of the 23rd annual Buddy Poppy sale by Charlevoix County Post No. 1153 Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, will help meet the welfare needs of men in active service as well as ex-service men and their dependents, regardless of color, creed, nationality or political affiliation, according to Commander Clarence Coblentz. Post No. 1153 will conduct the 23rd annual distribution of V.F.W. Buddy Poppies in Charlevoix on Saturday, May 27th.

This year the proceeds of the Buddy Poppy sale will be devoted in part to welfare activities among the dependents of soldiers, sailors and marines now fighting in defense of this country, Commander Coblentz explained, as well as for those who have served the colors in previous wars.

One cent from each Buddy Poppy sold by Post No. 1153 will be contributed to the maintenance of the V.F.W. National Home, Eaton Rapids, Mich. This home provides a refuge for the orphans of deceased or totally disabled veterans. Here the children are reared in "family units" under the supervision of a house mother. Whenever possible, mothers and children are enabled to live together. Clothes, education and vocations to enable them to earn their own livings when they become of age, are among the advantages provided the orphaned children of America's war dead by the V.F.W. National Home.

Retire from harsh-laxative customer list. Add gentle bulk to daily meals with new Post's Raisin Bran — toasted flakes of wheat and bran plus choice raisins. (21t1)

CURRENT FICTION

The Same Desires

By STANLEY CORDELL

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

KEITH HALL, sitting alone before the open fire in the Chestnut Hill mansion's drawing room, wondered why he and Martha, now that they had attained the affluence which they had both desired, didn't have the sense of comradeship which they shared when living in their little two-room apartment. He sought for answers to the problem that had made him unhappy, and slowly, painfully, the answers came.

To begin with, Martha had become almost a stranger. He never saw her at breakfast, seldom at luncheon and not too often at dinner. This, of course, was only natural. Now that they could afford it, Martha was indulging the hundred and one extravagances that are the cherished dreams of every deprived woman, and those indulgences were keeping her pretty busy. Keith didn't begrudge them, even remotely. He was glad that his finances permitted them. And he understood how they occupied a great deal of her time. Only if she could have found a few more hours to devote to him . . .

Martha had changed in other ways, too. She seemed colder and more distant, scarcely, if at all, interested in his business. She rarely questioned him about what he'd been doing or how he felt or where he'd eaten his lunch. And he missed those questions tremendously. Without knowing why he longed for the little intimate chats they used to have together, the exchanges of confidences, the dreaming together of a future day when Keith's income would permit a certain freedom to their activities the sharing of joys and sorrows and all the little occurrences that go to make up the life of the small apartment dweller.

And suddenly Keith knew he had a decision to make. An important decision. He had been fighting against it, ignoring it for weeks. But the day and the hour had come in which he must choose, if he were ever again to have a peaceful state of mind.

Two avenues lay open to him. On the one hand was a continuance of things as they were. This would entail a firm resolution on his part to make the most of his unhappiness, without complaint. To forget the past and live only in the future. To accept Martha as she was. To shut from his mind those joyful, carefree, companionable days that had meant so much back there in the two-room apartment. To consider them a closed chapter in his life and never think of them again. To face the future with only one purpose in mind: That of maintaining his present financial standing and endeavoring to make Martha happy and keep himself contented.

The other avenue was tempting. It led directly back to the two-room apartment and those happy, joyous days. It could be accomplished with the least possible effort—simply by announcing to Martha that their fortune had vanished as quickly as it had come. She wouldn't doubt him. She would accept the situation. They would go back to the old life and pick up the thread of existence where they had dropped it, slipping once more into the old routine, living again as they had lived before.

Keith sat for an hour without stirring, living in the joys of a future created by his selection of the second avenue. Yet remotely, annoyingly, there always lurked in his mind the specter of his own selfishness. For, to deprive Martha of the luxuries she now enjoyed, the very luxuries about which she had always dreamed and repeated to him during their most intimate chats, would be an act of greed that, he feared, would lessen the joys of its results a hundred fold.

Uncomplaining, helpful, kind and loving though he knew Martha would be, Keith wondered if his conscience would permit a continuance of his deception once it were started.

Keith stood up and paced the floor, his thoughts a riot of conflict. It occurred to him that the very thing that mocked him was the wealth for which he and Martha had so cheerfully worked. Of what little worth it seemed now that he knew it had deprived him of the one thing he had always cherished. And yet there was more to consider than his own feelings in the matter, so much more. There was Martha; the thrill and joys she was enjoying because the self-same wealth was transforming dreams for her into reality.

Keith paused before the mantel piece and bowed his head. Behind him his clenched fists dug the nails into his palms until they smarted. He stood there for many minutes, a graven figure, the lines of his face deeply furrowed. No one knew or would ever know the fury of the conflict that raged within him. No one but Keith himself, and because his mind was strong and because his sense of honor and unselfishness was firmly embedded, he fought his battle and triumphed. He would go on, keeping things as they were. He would forget the past, accept the present, suppress his longing, glean happiness from the situation as it existed, and permit Martha the pleasure of never having again to live in dreams when reality could be had for the asking.

Keith raised his head at last, and there was a peaceful, contented look in his eyes; the look of a man who was thankful for the strength that gave him the courage to triumph over his own longings.

He sat down again, feeling a little weary, glad that it was over, glad that the conflict was forever stilled in his mind.

Behind him a door opened, and he turned his head. Martha stood there, looking at him. She was dressed for a party, and Keith suddenly remembered that he had promised to accompany her.

She came across the room smiling, regarding him reproachfully, a trifle mischievously when he apologized.

"Always forgetting, aren't you darling. Always making excuses so you won't have to go out with me." She smiled at him, a little wistfully, he thought, sitting down on the arm of the chair and drawing him into the seat.

"I'm sorry, Martha. I didn't mean to forget. I do want to go with you. I'll be ready in fifteen minutes."

But her hand remained on his shoulder, and there was a sort of sadness in her eyes.

"Let's not," she said suddenly. "Let's stay here tonight. Just you and me, alone." She turned and looked into the fire. "It seems as though we're never together any more—like we used to be. Those little intimate chats and exchanges of confidences. Sometimes I—I almost wish we'd never made all this money. Things are so different."

Keith's eyes grew wide. "You—you mean you'd like to have the old days back again?"

"Almost. We were happy then, darling, and closer to each other. Sometimes I almost wish we could give this up and go back to our little two-room apartment." She smiled at him, patted his shoulder, stood up. "But, there! I've said too much and I'm sorry. I know this is what you've always wanted and that you're tremendously happy. I shouldn't even suggest such a thing as giving it up. In fact, I've decided never to mention it again, and I shan't. So stop worrying, darling, let's hurry along."

She started away, smiling brightly, but Keith suddenly reached out, grasped bold of her wrist and drew her into his lap, a strange, happy gleam in his eyes.

Aluminumware Market Saved by Salesman

The universal use today of aluminumware in homes once faced an obstacle that threatened its widespread adoption by housewives. It was immensely popular, naturally so, when first introduced. Its natural properties which make for quick diffusion of heat throughout the utensil; its bright, shining appearance, its low consumption of fuel, immediately attracted the favor of housewives.

But it had one drawback . . . one that seriously threatened its sudden eclipse. It was very difficult to clean, and keep clean, by ordinary methods. Stains and incrustations were very stubborn. And it is almost axiomatic that anything which adds to housework is definitely out.

It remained for a persistent young salesman to seek (and find) the solution to the problem. His bread-and-butter naturally depended on finding the answer. It was he who perceived the possibilities for cleaning aluminumware with these square metal-fiber pads in combination with a specially compounded soap of vegetable and mineral oil ingredients.

Horrible examples of stained aluminum pans were subjected to this new method.

"It's brilliant" was the exclamation of an onlooker, meaning the previously dull metal. The aluminumware salesman had saved his job by the application of a little thought and a large amount of perspiration.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. MELLENCAMP

Local farmers attended an Emergency Farm Labor meeting last week and made different recommendations toward improving the effectiveness of the program. All present felt the need for some plan whereby a closer check could be obtained in regard to the work accomplished. Tentatively, it was agreed the leader of each group sent out should keep an accurate account of work done.

It was decided that there should be established one central point where both volunteers and farmers could meet every morning. Last year several farmers had their own pick-up points, and it was most difficult to distribute the workers to the different points to the best advantage. It is planned to have a dispatcher appointed for each city who will distribute the youth and who will receive the reports of the previous day's activity.

Improve V.F.V. Labor

A suggestion was offered by one of the schools that they would like to have each volunteer in school three days each week. The three be chosen by the volunteer. In days selected in each week would other words, school officials find it very difficult for pupils to make up their mind if they are out of classes for several weeks. It is expected that all of the schools in the county will arrive at some program that will work out for the best interests of all parties concerned. The school enrollments are nearly completed and show a fine response.

FARMERS MAY SPEND ONLY TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS ON HOME

Recent changes in War Production Board regulations regarding construction of homes has resulted in confusion, especially in farm construction. Under a new interpretation construction on a home, including a farm house, cannot exceed $200, says Harvey R. Comrie, priorities manager of the Grand Rapids office of the W.P.B.

Under previous interpretations a farmer was entitled to spend $1,000 a year on new construction. He could use that $1,000 on a home, on his barns, in fencing, or any way he chose. Now, this regulation has been changed, and while a farmer is entitled to spend $1,000 a year on his farm, only $200 may be spent on his home.

The WPB has recently defined a farm as a place used primarily for raising crops, livestock and poultry for the market. This eliminates Victory gardeners or others who do not raise market crops or stocks. It is wise for anyone planning any construction to consult the nearest WPB office to determine whether a permit is required.

WPB cites several recent cases in which farmers had proceeded with erection of homes, using building blocks and other non-critical materials. After construction had started they applied for priorities for nails, wiring and other items, only to find that permission to build must be obtained even when non-priority materials are used.

Cement blocks as well as all other new materials and labor requiring a cash outlay are included in the cost limitation, and no priority assistance can be given to anyone starting construction in violation of WPB regulations.

FERTILIZER IS NEEDED TO GROW CUCUMBERS

Commercial fertilizer can be used profitably in growing cucumbers, especially in conjunction with stable manure and other organic materials. A complete fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash is usually best especially where supplies of stable manure are limited or where green manures are plowed under. One of these mixtures is recommended: 3-12-12, 4-12-6 or 4-16-4. On soils that are rich in nitrogen, one of the following should be satisfactory: 2-12-6, 0-20-10 or 20 per cent superphosphate (0-20-0).

The value of commercial fertilizer depends on the method of application. It should be placed deep in the soil where the feeding roots can reach it. An economical method is to place it in concentrated bands beside the rows 4 inches deep if possible and 3 inches from the row, at time of planting the seed, at the rate of 150 to 200 pounds per acre. Placing the fertilizer in the row directly under the seed is not a safe practice.

Commercial fertilizer also may be broadcast and plowed under or drilled in as deeply as possible over the entire field just before planting. When broadcast an application at the rate of 500 to 600 pounds per acre is recommended.

BEAVER ISLAND H. S. HAS GAY FESTIVITIES

Juniors And Seniors Enjoy Their Annual Prom And Banquet

The annual Beaver Island Junior-Senior banquet and prom was held Wednesday evening, May 17, in the parish hall. Red, white, and blue decorations in a patriotic theme, adorned the banquet table and dance floor. As centerpieces, models of tanks, planes and ships, ingeniously fashioned by George Van Erklo of the junior class, served to remind a miniature graduate that he was "sitting on top of a world at war." Vera Mae McDonough acted as toastmaster.

Following the banquet, an evening of square dances and modern dancing was amusingly interrupted by youthful entertainers. Catherine Marie Schmidt, as Romeo, serenaded a charming Juliet in the person of Mary Margaret La Freniere in a hilarious burlesque of "Romeo and Juliet." Three majorettes: Barbara McDonough, Mary Margaret La Freniere and Barbara Nackerman, entertained with a military tap in regulation red, white, and gold costume. The climax of the evening came when the majorettes led out Catherine Marie Schmidt and Charlotte Martin disguised as "Old Dobbin," who proved that, although "she ain't what she used to be," she could still dance.

EMMET COUNTY GRAPHIC SOLD TO C. H. FOWLER

MEAT POINTS WASTED BY SHRINKING ROAST WITH TOO HOT OVEN

Conventional high temperature oven cooking wastes meat. This has always been known but its importance has been recognized generally since the scarcity and rationing of meat.

Following is a chart which indicates the cooking time for various meats when roasting, uncovered, at 325 degrees.

	Minutes to Lb.
Beef (rare)	20-25
Beef (medium)	25-30
Beef (well)	30-35
Poultry	25-35
Veal	30-45
Lamb	30-40
Pork	35-50
Ham (fresh or smoked)
4 to 7 lbs.	40-50
8 lbs. or over	30-40
Stuffed flah	20

Cooking with low steady temperature will give you plump juicy roasts without charred bones or fat. Even though the cooking period may be slightly longer, less gas fuel is used because the oven is not turned on quite as high. This fuel saving is both economical and patriotic, particularly if you are using "bottled" or "tank" gas which serves those in suburban, small city and farm areas. This gas is now doing war work and you can help by conserving it.

WAR BONDS

N HEROES

EFF

Major Lyle J. Defenbaugh, infantry, of Omaha, earned his Silver Star for gallantry in action in Tunisia. Under heavy machine gun fire aimed directly at his position, which silenced the radio, he disregarded all personal safety, and remained in full view of the enemy within close range to shout directions and orders to two of his companies. Our praise for his heroism is not enough, we must buy War Bonds and hold 'em.

U. S. Treasury Department

Federal Researchers Aid Food Production

Dept. of Agriculture Lists Discoveries

Aids to the increased production, utilization and conservation of food figure prominently among recent accomplishments of the U. S. department of agriculture's scientific research workers. Such developments are vital to a nation at war, it is pointed out, with food needs increasing and expected to continue to rise.

Food production developments reported for 1943:

1. Found that sweet potato meal, made from dehydrated sweet potatoes, compares favorably with corn as a feed for steers.

2. Determined that mowing of sagebrush encourages the growth of better species of pasture plants, thus increasing gains of beef cattle. In some cases production of beef per acre was more than doubled.

3. Showed that when hogs are fattened to weights beyond 275 pounds, the rate of gain decreases materially while the feed required per pound of gain increases.

4. Found that hogs can utilize small amounts of hay, about 5 to 10 per cent, in their rations with benefit. Legume hays proved most satisfactory.

5. Determined that when laying hens were fed grain sorghums (yellow milo and hegari) in a well-balanced diet, the sorghums were equal in value to corn.

6. Established methods for rearing calves satisfactorily with less milk than customary, thus releasing additional milk for human use.

7. Showed that when cows receive all the legume hay and silage they want, they will produce well and economically on a single-grain ration.

8. Demonstrated the efficacy of substitutes for scarce insecticides in controlling the potato leafhopper, pea weevil, tomato fruitworm, Mexican bean beetle, Colorado potato beetle, and plant bugs that feed on seed pods of sugar beets.

9. Made available 35 new varieties of important crop plants developed by plant breeders.

Ground Hogs' Hoofs Make Protein Feed Supplement

Swine hoofs, waste product of packing plants, can make a good protein supplement for animal feeding when finely ground and mixed with other protein feeds, Gordon Newell and C. A. Elvehjem, research men at the U. of W., found.

It will probably not be practical to use hoof powder as the only protein supplement, since apparently it must be used in large amounts—as about 30 per cent of the ration—to get good results in chick rations.

Indications are that hoof powder "teams" very well with soybean oil-meal, the most popular and economical of present-day supplements. Neither is a complete protein, each being low in certain amino acids, but one helps supply what the other lacks.

Hoof material is low in histidine, methionine and tryptophane, since additional amounts of these amino acids improved it so as to give good results when fed as 18 per cent of the ration.

Powdered hoof obtained thus far has proved to be a variable product, some samples being quite unsatisfactory. Evidently methods of processing it need to be standardized.

Thus far packing houses have not seen their way clear to prepare powdered hoof for the feed market. They are interested, but the shortage of labor and equipment is a formidable obstacle in launching new sidelines at present.

Office supplies of any description may be obtained quickly through the Charlevoix Courier.—Adv. 23

Let Wheels Save Work

IN THE fast moving pace of things today it seems that everything is on wheels. Many people are even living in houses built on wheels.

The farmer can save himself a lot of hard work by putting wheels on various chores. For instance, why lug silage in a tub when you can make one trip with a cart, easier and quicker? Backaches from shoveling the silage can be eliminated too—build the cart so it can be rolled under the chute to be filled. And instead of making separate trips to cows with grain and supplement, just mix the feed in the cart and do the whole job in one round trip. Many a mile of walking each year can be eliminated in this simple way.

Almost every farm has some spare wheels around that have been taken off worn out equipment. Using these and a little lumber and asbestos cement board, an excellent cart can be built which will give many years of service.

The body is built of rough, scrap lumber; then lined with asbestos board to provide a smooth, tight inner surface which will prevent leakage and can be cleaned easily, while also having the advantage of being impervious to rot and rodents.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Did you hear that Tom is going to be inducted into the Army next week, Judge?"

"Yes, Frank told me this morning down at the barber shop. Our town's got a lot of men in the service now, Jim. In fact, all towns have. I was just reading in the paper where there are more than 10,000,000 men away from their homes in the armed forces. And, from all reports, they're doing a grand job bringing victory closer every day.

"We folks at home have a mighty big obligation to those 10,000,000 fighting men. We've got to produce the food to keep them well fed. We've got to keep them supplied with the ammunition and equipment they need to finish their job. We've got to help the Government pay for all these supplies our men need by buying more and more War Bonds. We'll have another big chance to do that by helping to put the 5th War Loan drive over the top, Jim.

"And, in addition, we must be sure that, while they're away and can't express their opinions, we don't go voting on and deciding any things that will displease them when they come back."

Isolationism (?)

A bright young man from the public relations department of the Pan American Airways got out a timetable a few days ago in which he listed the hours of flight and the cost of trips all over the world. He probably didn't realize that his office would be flooded for reservations, but that has happened.

This time-table, if you read it carefully, is dated July 15, 1948, and there is every reason to believe that Pan American will stand by the commitments it has made. That being the case, there will be week-ends in London, Paris and Moscow, and all at a reasonable cost. If you want to drop in on Hongkong, that will not be difficult, and not too expensive.

If you want to look into the future plan on a three-day vacation in Paris, once the Nazis are driven out, look at this: You will be able to leave New York at 2 p. m. Friday, and be back by 7 a. m. Monday. Distances will be measured in hours and minutes rather than miles and for that reason Pan American assumes that the world will have abandoned a. m. and p. m. and we will be on a clock which will have 24 numerals.

Here's what Pan American promises when the shooting ends: Friday afternoon for Paris, a flight of only 15 hours in a Strato-Clipper, with the return ticket costing only $202.50. If you want to go to Hongkong, figure on just 44 hours in the air and a round-trip cost of $594. Moscow and return will cost $259.20 and will require 19 hours each way. The airways list about 20 points all over the globe, which can be reached any week-end.

RECORD CHERRY CROP IS IN SIGHT FOR 1944

If cherry orchards of this region can escape frost for the remainder of this month and early June, a record crop will result.

Recent weather has been excellent for pollination as the bees have been able to work unceasingly and, unless unforeseen difficulties arise, a record cherry production is possible.

County Agricultural Agent Carl H. Hemstreet of the Grand Traverse region says:

"Saturday, Sunday, and Monday saw sweet cherries in full bloom in most orchards with weather ideal for pollination where adequate bees are available. Growers reported Monday that sour cherries were coming into bloom on the Peninsula and were in early bloom stage away from the bay. A few more days of good weather like the present should mean a crop of 50 to 65 million pounds of cherries in the Grand Traverse region.

"It is now too late in most orchards to apply a pre-blossom blight without damaging the blossoms.

"If the weather remains bright, clear and sunny, brown rot blossom blight will not cause trouble. If humidity becomes high, with plenty of rain then growers can apply four to six pounds per 100 gallons of wettable sulphur while the trees are in bloom. If this is not done and if weather is wet at the close of the blossom season then 3 lbs. of wettable sulphur or proprietory material or Bordeaux could be used.

"It is essential for leaf spot control that growers be prepared to apply the petal fall spray just as soon as half of the petals fall and bees have stopped working. The poison should be left out of the first spray as open blossoms make it dangerous to bees. In this case the next spray should be put on about a week later including poison to control curculio.

"Do not use arsenate of lead or other poison in sprays being applied on open blossoms," Hemstreet warns. "Poison in spray at this time will result in killing great numbers of bees with loss to both fruit growers and bee keepers. Sprays of wettable sulphur may be applied while trees are in bloom if necessary to control apple scab or brown rot blossom blight."

CHARLEVOIX ROADS GET MORE MONEY

Attempt Will Be Made To Meet Higher Standards

LANSING—The State Highway Department will spend $68,540.00 during the present fiscal year ending June 30, 1944, on maintenance of state trunkline highways in Charlevoix County, an increase of $32,914.00 over the $35,626.00 spent for the same purpose during the 1942-43 fiscal year, Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler reports.

The increased expenditure of state funds in Charlevoix County this year for state trunkline maintenance is in line with Commissioner Ziegler's policy of an intensive program designed to bring the trunkline system up to satisfactory standards. Trunkline maintenance had been allowed to lag in recent years and many miles of trunklines were in poor condition a year ago. This condition and the necessity for keeping roads in good condition to protect the people's heavy investment in these roads, to reduce tire wear and to speed wartime traffic prompted the Commissioner to adopt a maintenance program calling for an increase of 40 per cent in expenditures over the entire state as compared to any previous year.

Light Words are 'Grave' Words

There's a poster on the wall of Sam Abernathy's store that doesn't say much. It just shows a cross, with a Yankee helmet on it—and the caption: "Light words are 'grave' words."

It isn't hard to figure out what that sign means. Loose talk has dug a lot of graves . . . and done a lot of harm here at home, too. And still you hear it.

You hear, for instance, talk about our soldiers drinking and carousing around Army Camps. Of course, when you get the facts there's not an atom of truth in it. A U. S. Government survey found our soldiers were the soberest, the best behaved in history—with most of them drinking nothing stronger than a moderate glass of beer.

From where I sit, that kind of "loose talk" can do just as much to undermine morale as any rumor that the Axis could invent. And it's up to every one of us to spike that kind of sabotage before it spreads.

Hybrid Corn Yields 95 Bushels to Acre

By Planting Thicker, 104 Bushels Resulted

Hybrid corn's ability to produce more bushels per acre than open-pollinated varieties was compared to the "superiority of a well-bred dairy cow over a scrub animal" by Prof. D. F. Beard, extension agronomist of the agricultural extension service of Ohio State university.

"In hybrid corn, we have a better bred strain of plants capable of converting raw meterials such as nitrogen, phosphorus, potash, water, carbon dioxide and other elements into corn at more efficient rates than the old scrub open-pollinated varieties. On the same land and with the same 'feed' provided, good hybrids will yield 10 to 12 bushels more corn per acre than open-pollinated varieties. Moreover, the hybrid plants are sturdier and show less tendency to lodge."

In the case of both hybrid corn and pedigreed dairy stock, the matter of ample feed and a well-balanced ration are essential if maximum production is to be achieved. With hybrid corn, this means providing the soil with sufficient plant foods in the proper balance, via the fertilizer bag.

Four Plants Per Hill.

Professor Beard emphasized that in addition to the use of more fertilizer, farmers could profitably adopt the practice of planting hybrid corn thicker to obtain greater yields.

"At the Ohio agricultural experiment station," he said, "good corn hybrids yielded 95 bushels to the acre as a two-year average, and open-pollinated corn 80 bushels, when both were thinned to three plants per hill. With four plants per hill, however, the hybrids yielded 104.3 bushels per acre and the open-pollinated varieties 84.1."

The difference in favor of hybrids increased from 15 bushels to 20.2 bushels per acre for the extra plant per hill. This principle was borne out last summer, in a southern Ohio location, with later maturing hybrids; where stands of three plants per hill produced average yields of 92.8 bushels per acre and stands averaging 3½ plants per hill gave yields of 101.9 bushels per acre.

"Unless heavier fertilization and thicker planting go along with good corn hybrids, users of hybrid seed fail to cash in on all the advantages of hybrids."

"You know, pop, we ought to do some repair work on this barn."

Hens With Paralysis Should Be Culled Out

When culling hens, look them in the eye, says Dr. W. C. Thompson of Rutgers university.

One of the telltale signs of fowl paralysis—it has several forms—is a gray eye with an irregular pupil. That is, the iris, the colored part of a normal eye, is gray, and the pupil is irregular in outline when a bird is diseased, instead of being evenly oval or well rounded. In addition, the eye may be "fishy" or bulging.

Any bird with this eye condition should be removed from the flock. Lame birds that show no foot injuries to account for the lameness should be removed too as suspected carriers of fowl paralysis. The diseased birds may lay for a while, but eventually they lose weight and go out of production. If left in the flock, they endanger the other birds.

The majority of fowl paralysis cases occur in birds from 4 to 12 months old, the poultry specialist says, although older birds frequently contract the disease. Since the disease effects many birds just as they begin to lay and repay the expense of their raising, fowl paralysis is costly to the poultrymen.

Hatching Eggs Should Be Carefully Selected

Best results in hatching are obtained from eggs that run about 24 ounces per dozen. Eggs should be well formed of good shell texture, and of the color which is proper for the breed you are growing. Eggs which are small, round, short or thin-shelled should not be saved for hatching. During the cold weather they should be carefully stored to prevent chilling and other dangers which may make them infertile.

Science Awaits Postwar World

See Huge Telescope Mirror As Help in Solving Many Problems.

PASADENA, CALIF.—That colossus of astronomy, the 200-inch telescope mirror, has been sidetracked by the war, but a man behind the glass, a quiet, slender scientist, has some ideas about what it may reveal in the postwar universe.

He is Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the Carnegie Institution Mount Wilson observatory and one of five scientists in charge of the giant reflector.

Two delicate jobs remain to completa the largest astronomical mirror ever made. These must wait while the opticians of Mount Wilson and Caltech concentrate on technical work for the war.

"When work is resumed the disk must be worked to its final shape, that of a paraboloid, which will make it slope to just a few one thousandths of an inch deeper at the center than the curve of a perfect sphere," explains Dr. Adams.

Then, when it finally is installed at the huge dome at Mount Palomar, what new light will it throw on the mysteries of the vast galaxies and nebulae that whirl in space?

Help in Every Problem.

"The 200-inch telescope will aid in every problem where more light is needed," says Dr. Adams.

The scientist referred to one major dilemma the new disk may help solve: The question of whether the universe is expanding.

"We shall be able to tell more about distribution and motions of the great universes of stars or nebulae as we go farther and farther into space and obtain data which may turn the scales one way or the other on this vital question."

The expanding universe theory, he says, presents the problem: "Whether millions of stellar systems hurtle outward as the result of some explosion-like phenomenon which occurred when they were bunched together in a relatively small space."

Or: "Whether the results observed can be interpreted in some quite different way, possibly associated with enormous distances light must travel through space.

"The number and positions of the lines are fixed by the elements that produced them.

Stars Moving Away.

"In the cases of nearly all the distant nebulae, although lines in the spectrum still appear in their usual array, they are displaced from normal positions toward the red end of the spectrum. And the farther away the star the more the shift of the lines."

What causes these shifts?

"We know rapid motion toward or away from the observer can produce displacements of the lines and frequently the 'red shifts' have been explained as velocity effects showing that the nebulae are receding or 'expanding' from each other at terrific speeds.

"Twenty thousand miles a second of recession has been shown in certain cases. However, I am inclined to be agnostic on the expanding universe theory. The theory gives a short-time scale," he said, referring to computations which have shown the universe would be doubling in size in only 1,300 million years, or would have started from a condensed form in the same length of time. Practically all astronomers are convinced that the universe is tremendously older than that.

"At the same time we should remember motion is the only cause we know definitely can produce these displacements, and suggestions that light may become 'tired' in its passage through vast distances of space are purely speculative," declared Adams.

These leading garden pests will soon be destroying precious bean, pea, tomato, and potato plants unless Victory Gardeners study up on insect killing poisons. The war has drastically cut supplies of rotenone — the grower's most trusted insect killer — and this year's supply will fall far short of essential needs. Garden experts warn that only by using the new synthetics will growers be able to wipe out threatening insect infestations.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

What will happen after the war when Uncle Sam is no longer Michigan's most important single customer?

Here is a question being asked by many Michigan growers today.

Remember, when the United States government comes to Michigan and buys our food products, it requires careful grading of these products so that the quality is defined and the price paid is in proportion constantly to the value received. Because Michigan food products were inspected and graded, Uncle Sam purchased in 1943 some 8200 carloads of Michigan fruits and vegetables; 1169 carloads of Michigan shell eggs; 5,000,000 bags (1ft pounds) of Michigan dry edible beans; and also dairy products by the millions of pounds. Cherry orders totaled 71,596,180 pounds; grapes 26,595,596 pounds, and tomatoes 74,243,510 pounds.

Michigan growers have received millions of dollars from sale of food to the federal government only because these products were properly graded and inspected to meet the government's rigid requirements.

Miles Nelson, director of the state bureau of foods and standards, an agency of the department of agriculture, points out that grading and inspection were first adopted seven years ago when progressive growers became convinced that they could sell food at higher prices if they met the wishes of the American consumer.

"Many of the products of our 187,000 farms are highly perishable, such as fruits and vegetables, and should be moved expeditiously and efficiently from producer to consumer," said Nelson. "This can best be accomplished by grading, packaging and labeling in accordance with known standards of quality — grade standards that are uniform from market to market and region to region. For this reason Michigan has adopted federal standards for most of their farm products and several years ago entered into cooperative agreements with the United States Department of Agriculture for the Federal-State Inspection of fruits and vegetables, dry edible beans, and poultry and dairy products.

"The grading and inspection of food products has produced definite beneficial results, by reducing economic waste, and by eliminating inefficient practices that increased costs to consumers and decreased prices paid to farmers. Consumers, retail and wholesale buyers have been quick to recognize the value of the grading of food products.

"However, the wants of the consumer should be one of the first considerations, and should not be overlooked. After all is said and done, the consumer is the judge. Too often, the growers efforts have been governed by the conditions and problems which have confronted them at the point of production, but growers should disregard their own preferences, and consider only the consumers wants and desires.

"If some growers were forced to buy and eat some of the products they place on the market, they would soon realize the necessity of a sound grading and marketing program. The consumer's market basket has no room for producer excuses. If consumers' demands are not satisfactorily filled with graded Michigan food products, they immediately become customers for satisfactory products from some other state.

"For several years, money has been appropriated by the Legislature for advertising Michigan farm products, but such expenditures would be just a waste of time and money if the products are not carefully graded to known standards of quality.

"A sound marketing program is not complete without sufficient funds to advertise the farm products this state has to offer, but first the products should be graded to known standards that are acceptable to the buyers and consumers. If U. S. No. 1, Michigan Grade 1, Grade A, or any other grade declaration appears on the container, or is advertised, the food products so described must meet the grade declared.

"Any relaxation in maintaining the quality and grade standards, or in the enforcement of the food laws and regulations, causes buyers and consumers to lose confidence and the markets for our products are lost to more alert and progressive competitors.

"It would be a serious mistake to let the difficulties encountered in war time production and distribution deter us from maintaining a sound, practical and efficient grading and marketing program for Michigan food products.

"We should not be wrongly influenced by the few producers and dealers, who, under the guise of acute food shortages, want to throw all grade standards overboard, and think we can stretch the available supply of a farm product by selling everything just as it comes from the field or orchard, including immature or damaged fruit or vegetables, vines, stones, dirt, worms, and insects.

"Such a short-sighted policy, adopted even as a temporary expedient, can only end in disaster. It is detrimental to the producer as well as the dealer, disgusts the consumer and will soon wreck any good marketing program."

If Michigan growers expect to derive the greatest benefit from the advertising of Michigan food products, then they must keep their own house in order — especially in the postwar period which will bring an end to government purchase of foodstuffs.

"When we see hundreds, yes, even thousands of carloads of produce grown in other states shipped into Michigan each year and sold for more money than the same Michigan-grown products are bringing, we can quickly realize the crying need for the strict grading of our food products, the necessity for rigid enforcement of suitable laws and regulations, and the desirability of some adequately financed and timely advertising," concluded Mr. Nelson.

"We should prepare for the time when Uncle Sam will cease to be the food producers' most important single customer. The transition from war-time to peace-time economy, as it will affect the marketing of Michigan's food products, will be much easier to accomplish without disastrous results, if we continue to market carefully-graded food products, maintain well-known quality products, backed up with a rigid inspection service."

Transferred—

Pfc. Louis McKenzie has been transferred to Dalhart, Tex., and writes: "I try to keep you up on my new addresses, for I like to receive the Courier as soon as possible. In the past month I have moved so many times I haven't had a permanent address, but now, I think, I will be here for a while. I am stationed in a part of Texas that even the Texans won't claim — the northwest. The dust blows even worse than the snow in Charlevoix in the wintertime. I don't believe there's a house between this camp and town, for no one could stand the dust. Our outfit was broken up and a basic unit made out of it. We now train pilots in gunnery. It spoils my chances of going across for a while, but the army does some funny things. Wishing I was in Charlevoix, and hoping to receive the paper soon, I am, as ever,

Louis M. McKenzie."

From Hospital in Maryland—

Clarence McCalmon WT3c, who is a patient at the U. S. Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., writes: "I'm still alive and kicking and hoping to get out of here soon. I was on liberty this afternoon and went over to Washington, D. C. While there I went through the Capitol Building, the Senate and the House of Representatives. The House was in session and I heard them discussing several bills, but they were all in the millions and billions and I got a little bored. I then went over to the House Offices and visited our congressman, the Honorable Fred Bradley, of Rogers City. I still say I think we are lucky to have such a fine man down here. My regards to all my friends in Charlevoix and in the service.

Clarence McCulmon."

From Camp Polk, La.—

Pvt. Benjamin Walker, stationed at Camp Polk, La., writes: "I just finished reading last week's issue of that great little Courier and want to thank you for keeping me on your mailing list. Bennie."

From Fort Sill, Okla.—

Pvt. Joseph E. Troyer sends a letter from Fort Sill, Okla., where he is stationed: "I was surprised and pleased when I received the first copy of the Charlevoix Courier, recently. It does one good to read about the fellows he has known for so many years. Although I'm an outsider, after living there for 11 years, I feel that I've always lived there. I'm in Field Artillery here and, as far as army camps go, this one is tops. I'd rather be back in the garage on Antrim Street, though, or fishing at Lake 26. Hello to everyone in Charlevoix and thanks again for the Courier.

Pvt. Joe Troyer."

Pause For Prayer On Invasion Day Gets State-Wide Response

90-SECOND SIGNAL BLAST TO NOTIFY

NO CELEBRATION BUT AN APPEAL TO PROVIDENCE

If Invasion News Is Received In Evening Observance Will Be Held Next Day

LANSING—Lumberjacks in the logging camps of the north woods, sailors on Great Lakes ships, factory workers, clerks and shopkeepers, and persons in their homes — all will take part in Michigan's state-wide "D-Day" minute of prayer when that day arrives, according to reports sent in to the Michigan Office of Civilian Defense.

Since announcement recently that Governor Kelly was asking for a simultaneous state-wide pause in all activities for one minute when it is definitely known the invasion is under way, there has been a steady flow of responses from every corner of the State expressing approval of the proposal and the intention to participate in the observance.

Municipal and county Defense Councils have the responsibility of arranging the observance. Notification of the moment when all activity is to cease is to be sent to each community over the state air-raid warning system. Immediately preceding the 60-second pause there will be a 90-second signal period during which air raid sirens, factory whistles and church bells will be sounded. This signal will not only announce the one-minute pause, but also designate that this is the day when

Now Is Time To Register With County Agent

"The prospects for one of the biggest cherry crops in Charlevoix County are most encouroging at the present time," B. C. Mellenkamp, county agricultural agent said today. "The cherry trees have now passed the full bloom stage and all trees are loaded to capacity. In fact, a June drop will be necessary to eliminate some of the fruit. Trees can only produce a certain quantity of fruit and nature usually does a good job during the month of June in establishing a proper balance.

"This means that a big problem confronts the fruit grower in harvesting this anticipated crop and all available manpower will be needed if the crop is to be harvested without loss. It is not too early to make your plans to help in the cherry harvest. In the near future a survey will be made of every orchard in the county to determine how much labor will be needed.

"We expect to recruit labor from Emmet and Otsego counties to help in the harvest season," Mr. Mellenkamp declared. "The Extension Office acts as a clearing house for all Emergency Farm Labor needs. Please inform this office during the month of June if you are willing to pick cherries this season. Out of county visitors will also be urged to assist. In all probability at the height of the season, we will need at least 1500 pickers. This will require close cooperation between the Emergency Farm Labor program and the entire public."

Cherry Leaf Beetle Is Causing Serious Damage

BOYNE CITY, Wednesday— Some cherry growers are reporting large numbers of cherry leaf beetles on their trees. This pest, if not controlled, will will defoliate cherry trees in a short time and cause serious losses. This is the first time this pest has been prevalent for many years. This insect is a small, dark red beetle a little less than a quarter of an inch long, oval in form, with dark markings on the body and legs. The use of lead arsenate in the spray at the rate of two to three pounds per hundred gallons of spray material will result in nearly complete control. The beetle emerges from the soil late in May or in early June, climbs up the trunk and becomes very active when warm weather arrives.—B. C. Mellenkamp, County Agric. Agent.

FOUR-H'RS CANNING TO HASTEN VICTORY

Rural girls throughout this state are enlisting in what promises to be the largest Victory Brigade of its kind on record. It comprises fully a half million 4-H Club members of practically every state in the Union whose wartime motto is "Can More in '44 to Speed Victory."

An indication of the volume of foodstuffs these girls will put up this year is reflected in the 1943 4-H canning records, which show that roundly 400,000 4-H girls canned 25 million jars of foods.

Many of the girls will receive training essential to the successful preservation of vegetables, meats and fruits in the National 4-H Canning Achievement Activity. Awards for outstanding records of achievement include silver medals to county winners, an all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago next December to the state champion, and a $200 college scholarship to six national winners.

Last year's state-national winner in Michigan was Mildred Kleger of Saginaw.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

BY YOUR CONGRESSMAN FRED BRADLEY

New Fort Brady Hospital—
Early last week, Governor Kelly sent a delegation, consisting of Herman Dignan, Secretary of State, Fred Striffler, Budget Director, and C. F. Wagg, Executive Secretary, to Washington to work in cooperation with myself and Senator Ferguson in an effort to bring about some mutual agreement between the Army and the State of Michigan whereby the State would take over the new Ft. Brady Temporary Hospital.

You will recall that the Army declared this hospital surplus several months ago which meant that no other Governmental agencies' desiring it, it would be sold at auction, dismantled and removed.

However, I was successful in persuading the Army to suspend action until such time as we could ascertain whether the State of Michigan could utilize this Facility. It would have been folly and an inexcusable waste of the taxpayers' money for the Federal Government to permit disposition of this property to private individuals for a salvage return of somewhat less than ten cents on a dollar, especially at a time when none of us knows what our even-

TAXPAYERS DUE FOR LONG AWAITED BREAK

30,000,000 To Be Freed From Tangles Of Tax Filing

WASHINGTON — The House has completed congressional action on the individual income tax simplification bill which will free approximately 30,000,000 Americans from the necessity of calculating their federal taxes.

The measure, effective next January 1, also would simplify the returns which must be filed by the remaining 20,000,000 taxpayers and would revise withholding schedules to make amount withheld by employers cover, as nearly as possible, all federal income taxes due.

The bill has the treasury's approval and is expected to be signed by President Roosevelt.

Over 200 Inquiries A Day

Great Tourist Year Is Predicted

SODUS, Mich.—An unprecedented demand by tourists for resort accommodations was predicted last night in closing sessions of a conference attended by 47 summer resort operators.

William Palmer, secretary-manager of the West Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, said a survey shows members have received more reservations than ever before.

"Inquiries are coming into our main office at Grand Rapids at the rate of over 200 a day, and our service offices at Cleveland, Lansing, Chicago are swamped with requests for vacation information and literature," he said.

Palmer said many hotels and resorts will open two weeks early and remain open late in September to accommodate war workers, from whom the bulk of inquiries have been received.

(Some people thought the village needed waterworks worse than a fire engine.)

Attention is called to the revised telephone exchange list on the fourth page of this paper. Cut it out and paste it up near your instrument for future reference. (There were 31 telephones in the village. Only seven of them were residence phones).

The bark trade has begun, several loads appearing on our streets yesterday.

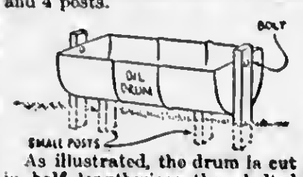
Fixing Up the Farm
by BURTON WILLIAMS

Inexpensive Water Trough

"IS THERE plenty of water on the place?" That question is usually among the first asked about a farm. Some disadvantages can be overcome, but water is one thing that is absolutely essential.

Next in importance to the quantity of water is its location. Is it convenient? Water on one end of the farm isn't much good to stock kept at the other end unless it can be made convenient to them. Due to the fact that elaborate troughs are expensive and difficult to construct, many farmers fail to utilize otherwise excellent locations on their farms for stock.

If you need an additional trough on your farm, here's an idea that will save you a lot of money and labor and provide a convenient trough which may be moved if necessary. The materials needed to build this trough are an old steel oil drum, 2 bolts and 4 posts.



As illustrated, the drum is cut in half lengthwise; then bolted at the top of each end to a post set so that the drum is about 8 inches off the ground. Two short posts are set between the larger ones to give additional support at the bottom of the drum.

When the trough needs cleaning, all you have to do is loosen the bolts and it can be turned upside down.

Tin Can Drive

THINGS at the jail is in a mess. There ain't no place to set, no place to stand, nn place to do nothing. There ain't even room to lock up a prisoner if we had one. And Dirge, who is the sheriff of Rasa county and my boss, looks at me with loathing and says: "Hod," says he, "the next time you have a brain storm, I hope you choke!" It happened like this:

The other day, me and Dirge was setting in the office, him taking a nap and me wishing it was warm enough to go fishing, when all at once he opened his eyes and says: "Hod," says he, "since all the young fellers has gone to war and the older men are too busy planting victory gardens to get into trouble, we ain't been doing much business. People is liable to forget about us."

"Yes," says I, "and there is another election not far off."

"Exactly. Hod, as my deputy, I appoint you a committee of one to think up something that will get us in the public eye."

"Dirge," says I, "I have already been thinking. I have seen in the papers where other towns is gathering up tin cans for victory. It is time Rosebloom did likewise."

"Hod," Dirge says, a smile wrinkling up his fat face, "you have hit the nail on the head. We will sponsor a Rosebloom Tin Can for Victory drive. I will be chairmen and you will be my assistant. Hand me the phone. We will get the ball rolling right away."

On Sunday Dirge drove up in front of my house and honked. "Hod," he says, "hurry! We borrowed Joe

The other day me and Dirge was setting in the office.

Lutz's truck and he has to start loading cattle at six."

So I run back to the house for my hat. And what should I do but step through a broken board in the porch what I hadn't time to fix, and turn my ankle. "Dirge," says I, limping back, "I cannot hardly walk. Maybe you had better get another assistant."

"Ain't time to find anybody else," he says. "I guess I will have to load the cans while you drive." By five o'clock, the truck was full.

"Well, Hod," Dirge says after he had tossed up the last box, "with you crippled, it has been a lot of work for me, but we have really done something for Uncle Sam. I am mighty proud of us. Now, Hod, what do we do with these? Joe will be along pretty soon."

"Why," says I, "you know, Dirge, I never once thought of finding a place to park them cans."

"What!" Dirge says. "Didn't I say you was to take care of the details?"

"Yes," says I, "but that is one I overlooked."

"Well," he says, "no matter. We can drive down to the city hall and dump them there in the vacant lot."

So we went to the city hall and started to dump the cans, when along came Mayor Osgood. "Gentlemen," he says, "I cannot permit you to leave that junk on these grounds. We are expecting the district representative tomorrow. It would look something awful with all them cans there."

So Dirge put them back on the truck. "We will take them behind the jail, Hod," he says.

When we got there who should be waiting but Deacon Stout, a commissioner. "Hey," he says, "we cannot have the courthouse lawn cluttered up this way. I am surprised at you."

Just then Joe Lutz hove in sight. "Well, boys," he says, "I have got to start for the cattle. Get them tin cans off."

"We ain't got no place to unload," I says.

"Look," Joe answers, "gathering tin cans is fine, but I need my truck. You two gents think fast what you are going to do. I will give you exactly two minutes." Now, Joe is a big man with a very determined disposition.

"Hod," Dirge says, getting pale, "there is only one spot left." He turns to Joe. "Back the truck up to the front door of the prison. We will put the cans inside until my assistant can think of somewhere else."

So as I said before, the jail is a mess. No place to set, no place to stand, no place to do nothing. And Dirge is mad at me on account of he had to do all the work.

Twenty Years to Go

By ELEANOR WALSH
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features

MARION WILSON looked through her desk drawers that morning for the last time to make sure they were empty. She glanced briskly about the private office, which she rated as executive secretary to Mr. Swift, and saw that no relic of the many years she had spent there remained. Only on the desk itself was there anything of hers, a glass paper weight, and this she put in her handbag. Then she walked into Mr Swift's office. She felt shaky, after all these years as if she had come to ask for a job, not to give one up.

Mr Swift grbaned. "Well, Miss Wilson, so you're still set on it, eh? Don't know that I blame you. Must be a wonderful feeling to wake up in the morning and think, I don't have a thing to do today. It's a feeling I've never had." He laughed comfortably.

"Oh, but I'll have plenty to do," she insisted. "Plenty. I'm going to do the things I've been putting off all these years. I'm going to read and travel and — oh, everything. Don't think for a minute that I'll be bored. Why, I've a whole lifetime to catch up with and I'm going to do it while I still can."

He looked at her curiously. "You've never told us your age, of course. All I know is you've been here twenty-five years, made a fine place for yourself, and now you're retiring. And you don't look over forty. I'd expected you to stick around another twenty years."

She made no reference to her age. "I went to prove to myself that life can be something more exciting than coming to the office at nine every day, getting off letters, dictation, interviewing, phoning, and leaving at five."

"You'll find travel possibilities limited right now," he reminded her. "There's a war on, you may have heard."

"What have you done about replacing me, Mr. Swift?"

"I have someone coming in the day after tomorrow."

"If she needs instructions, don't hesitate to call me. You're sure you can count on her?"

"Pretty sure. Of course it's a woman's privilege to change her mind."

"Not in business it isn't." Marion put out her hand. "Goodby," she said. "It's been a wonderful twenty-five years." She walked quickly through the outer office where the stenographers sat, and looked neither to the right nor to the left until she was in the city street.

In less than an hour she opened the door of the comfortable apartment where she had lived, alone except for a maid, for eight years. "Henrietta," she called, and Henrietta came trotting from the kitchen. "We're unemployed," Marion told her gaily. "We have the whole world before us."

"Yes'm," Henrietta said dubiously. "What you gonna do with yourself?"

"Why, I'm going to clean my desk and answer some letters that have been lying around for months, and—oh, I may take a trip. I haven't decided. But I'm free!"

Marion looked at her rather blankly. Then she hung up her coat and proceeded to the spinet desk and got to work. When she had sorted and discarded, she was startled to find that the entire job had taken only twenty minutes. That was strange, surely; she had been dreading the task for ages. She started to look over some of the letters she must answer. They were all more than a month old, and out of date now. There wasn't one person to whom she could find anything to say. Write her old friends she was retiring? Maybe they'd think that was only her way of putting it, that she'd really been forced out by advancing years. She smiled a little. Many of them were grandmothers now. No, she wouldn't brag about her leisure until she was used to it.

Well, there were a couple of novels lying around that she'd meant to read. She picked one up and read the first page three times before it began to make sense. She put it aside. For some reason she couldn't concentrate. "Henrietta," she said. "Is lunch nearly ready?"

"Yes'm. About ten minutes."

She walked about the apartment straightening a few things. Nothing needed doing, because Henrietta was so meticulous.

Finally lunch was ready. Marion ate in peace. It was totally unlike the crowded drugstore at the noon hour. She told herself that this was no end of an improvement, that she didn't miss the bustle at all, that she was delighted to be away from it. When she finished she glanced at the clock. It was one. Mr. Swift would just be getting back to the office. Suddenly with a gasp almost of terror she rushed to the phone and dialed his number. "This is Marion Wilson," she said—and then didn't know how to go on.

He came to her rescue. "Think you'll feel like coming back tomorrow?" he asked.

"Oh, yes!" she panted. "But—the new girl?"

He chuckled. "You're the new girl, although I wasn't expecting you till the day after tomorrow. Thought you had more endurance. Shame on you!"

Her face was [illegible] new hope. Another twenty years, he had said earlier. Twenty more busy years!

Ralph W. Tenny, director of short courses at Michigan State College, announces that rural youths 16 through 21 years of age in Charlevoix County are eligible to apply for scholarships in agriculture and home economics which will be given at the college during the coming year.

A total of 360 scholarships valued at $48,200 will be granted young men and women of Michigan. Each scholarship provides for eight weeks of training at the college, course, fees, books, room and board.

Requests for the scholarships should be made to the county agricultural agent, who has application forms. The eight-week courses for those selected in this county and 20 other counties in the southern part of the state will run from October 23 to December 15th. A third group from 42 counties in the northern part of the state and the upper peninsula will be enrolled in the spring term, extending from March 6, to April 27, 1945.

In addition to the age requirements, candidates for scholarships must be planning to make farming their vocation, have completed at least the eighth grade, and be in good health. Boys must be living on farms, but girls who apply may be from small communities although they must be interested in rural life, according to Director Tanny.

VICTORY GARDEN

Vegetables of the home garden are subject to attacks of various diseases and for best production of quality need protection of the leaves and stems.

Most leafy vegetables are not seriously affected. It is usually not necessary to consider them in a disease control program.

However such plants as tomato, eggplant, pepper and potato often are seriously affected by disease which attack the leaves and fruit and should be protected. Tomato plants should be given a light but thorough application of spray or dust with a copper fungicide for leaf and fruit disease control beginning about a week after they are set in the garden. Further applications should be made at intervals of 10 days until the latter part of the season.

Potatoes should receive similar applications of copper fungicide beginning when the plants are about 6 inches high and continued throughout the season at weekly intervals for blight and leaf hopper control.

Early in the season, calcium arsenate should be added to the spray or dust material for chewing insect control. The same schedule may be followed for pepper and eggplant for leaf and fruit spot disease control.

Fungicides usually employed in spraying for disease control contain some form of fixed copper. These materials may be applied without addition of lime and in the right concentration will not cause foliage injury. It is often advisable to add a small quantity of wheat flour in making up the solution to insure that the material sticks to the leaves. Fixed copper spray materials should be applied at strengths recommended by the manufacturer based upon their metallic copper content.

Fungicide dust materials are obtainable ready-mixed from dealers. These should contain fixed coppers for general garden use. They are applied as a thin, thorough coating to the plants and usually at weekly intervals.

SO. MICHIGAN HAS A RABIES EPIDEMIC

Disease Is Spreading Says The State Veterinarian

Because of one or more found infected with dog rabies recently, in 18 South Michigan counties, a quarantine has been placed on these counties by Commissioner of Agriculture Charles Figy. The quarantine covers a ninety-day period and started May 23rd.

According to the Department of Health records, the infected animals so far this year exceeds that of last year. The disease is spreading and anyone noting a dog trying to bite, or acting sick in any way, should report to the county sheriff or local health officer.

His face torn by shrapnel, Staff Sgt. Donald G. Maryott of Hooper, Neb., waist gunner, gathered up exploding incendiaries set afire by the hit, and saved the plane from destruction. OPEN SEASON ON FROGS COMMENCES ON JUNE 25

LANSING—Open season on frogs, this year, coincides with the start of the bass and panfish season, June 25th, the conservation department reminds small boys today. It continues through November 15th. The season opening was advanced from June 1st by the legislature last year when it was shown that the earlier opening day had resulted in disturbing fish on spawning beds near shorelines of lakes. The later closing day was ordered because commercial frog takers pleaded that the former November 1st closing date halted their operations in the year's best season and that their operations did not reduce frog populations.

TOMMY TIT IS ACCUSED OF BOASTING

IT ISN'T safe to say anything before Chatterer the Red Squirrel, unless you are ready and willing to prove that what you say is so. Chatterer never forgets, and if he thinks he has caught you bragging you never will hear the end of it. Tommy Tit the Chickadee had said that he was not in the least afraid of Farmer Brown's Boy and would just as soon eat out of his hand. Of course, Chatterer didn't believe that. He thought Tommy was boasting a little, and he made up his mind that he would have some fun with Tommy.

So when Sammy Jay came along Chatterer told him what Tommy Tit had said, and Sammy told Peter Rabbit, and Peter told Billy Mink, and Billy Mink told little Joe Otter, and so the story spread all through the Green Forest, and everywhere Tommy Tit went someone was sure to ask him if he had eaten from the hand of Farmer Brown's Boy lately. And Tommy Tit never once lost his temper. His bright little eyes would twinkle merrily and he would say,

"Dee, dee, dee! You'll see!"

No, Tommy Tit the Chickadee is such a very little fellow—a very little fellow, indeed—and the more the other little forest and meadow people thought of it, the funnier it seemed that Tommy should boast that he was not afraid of Farmer Brown's Boy. Why, Tommy isn't big enough to make one good bite for Reddy Fox, and yet everyone knows that Reddy doesn't dare go near Farmer Brown's Boy. It is the same way with most of the other little forest and meadow people. So, everyone thought that Tommy had just boasted, and no one believed that he really had meant it.

Of course, Chatterer the Red Squirrel was one of those who teased Tommy most, and yet, if the truth must be told, right down in his heart Chatterer wondered if perhaps, after all, it might not be true. You see, Chatterer had a wholly changed opinion of Farmer Brown's Boy since he had been a prisoner and then had been allowed to go free. He had to admit that Farmer Brown's Boy had been very good to him, and, somehow, he wasn't very much afraid of him any more. In fact, he sometimes thought that he almost dared to eat out of Farmer Brown's Boy's hand himself. You see, every day he found two or three fat nuts hidden in the old stone wall on the edge of the old orchard nearest Farmer Brown's dooryard, and he knew that they had been put there especially for him.

But still he couldn't quite believe that Tommy Tit was as friendly with Farmer Brown's Boy as he pretended to be, so he dared Tommy to prove it.

"Dee, dee, dee! You'll see! You'll see!" laughed Tommy in his merry way, and straightway flew through the Green Forest and over the Green Meadows—green no longer, for they were covered with snow—to invite everybody to visit Farmer Brown's dooryard the next morning and see him prove that he had not boasted. And whenever he delivered the invitation he chuckled, for he knew that most of those whom he had invited would not dare to come. Reddy Fox was sorry, but he had an engagement the next morning. Old Man Coyote had important business up in the Old Pasture. Billy Mink had promised Little Joe Otter to go fishing. Jumper the Hare frankly said that he was afraid to leave the Green Forest, and because he was so honest about it Tommy Tit didn't chuckle as he did at the excuses of the others. Roughleg the Hawk begged to be excused, because hunting was best at that time of day and he didn't want to lose his breakfast. But Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Peter Rabbit promised to be there, for they knew there were good hiding places in the old stone wall. And, of course, Sammy Jay said that he would be there.

Hot and Cold

By SARAH S. PFEIFFER

McClure Syndicate WNU Features

WHEN Ted Carleton let himself in the front door at four o'clock he had two hours to decide the biggest problem of his life. Two hours to determine whether he would accept Verne Chandler's offer of a vice presidency or work with a new competitive company.

Tight little arms suddenly enveloped his knees. Then he remembered they were celebrating Deborah's sixth birthday. He lifted her to his shoulder; received a warm, moist kiss. If he could only talk over the matter with Janet quietly. There seemed little chance now.

Debbie's hand was smoothing his brown hair while he took in the picture. Ten dressed-up children were climbing over the living room furniture, having a marvelous, wide-eyed time. Janet's hair was loosened in damp curls on her forehead. She took his hat, put away his topcoat.

"Janet, won't you send the kids home early? I have something important to settle by six. Can't we talk it over upstairs?" It wasn't that she gave advice or tried to run his life. But he might be able to clear his mind if she just listened to him think aloud.

"Is it—about business?"

"Yes. Verne offered me the vice presidency and a small raise. A new company—Carstairs and Keith—want me to come in as treasurer at my present salary. It's a gamble but—"

He turned to Janet. "I've been with the company eight years. Verne is a pretty shrewd president. His offer sounds like a good thing. Of course, our financial setup has been shaky but Verne says—"

Tight little arms suddenly enveloped his knees.

"Ready, Daddy!" piped a small voice.

"O. K. Battleships before business I suppose."

Eager little faces watched him. Their eyes darted quickly to the drum table at the front windows, then back to him. That's where they hid a toy sub, he thought, but I'll play along a few minutes. He walked to the back, examining bookcases with mock seriousness.

But his thoughts were relentless. Verne is sharp all right. Suddenly he remembered swapping stamps with Verne in high school and always getting the worst end of the deal. Verne invariably swore they were genuine but added that, if they were not, he would take them back. Yet when the stamps proved to be imitation, Verne insisted on selling Ted's own lot back at a neat profit.

Still, he thought, if I join the new company, I am taking a terrific chance for my family. He liked the organization of Carstairs and Keith, liked the reputation of the men. He had experience and knowledge they could use. Funny, wasn't it, that the promotion in the old firm came only after Verne was told of the new offer? He had never known Verne to think of others first. Maybe the old company was shakier than he realized. There was a narrow line between shrewdness and dishonesty. And Verne's sudden cordiality was puzzling. Usually he was hard and cold.

Small suppressed sounds filled the room. He had searched everything except the drum table. When he reached it, a small boy began to clap eagerly.

"Why," Ted said to himself, "this is just like a game I used to play called 'Hot and Cold.' The children applauded louder and louder when you were near. It's the same game—under a different name!"

The little boys and girls crowded around him. "Boom! Boom! You're torpedoed! You're blown up in a million pieces!" Debbie fished the submarine from under his hand.

Janet was calling. "Light the candles, dear. Then the little ones can come in. I'll try to hurry them." Candlelight made a halo about her small head.

"There's no need to rush."

"But you just said—"

"I know, darling. Playing with the kids made me see things straight. Verne's methods are always the same, no matter what bait he uses or what he calls the game. I intend to leave him."

Her eyes did not leave his face. "I'm glad. But are you sure—"

"Sure as I am of my love for you. I've suddenly realized there's no more certain way of being right than doing the opposite of what your enemy wants."

WHY telephones are hard to get

FOR a long time, almost all new telephone apparatus that could be made has had to go to the Armed Services. . . . Factory space and manpower cannot be diverted to make equipment for civilians.

Despite all that, since National Defense got under way in 1940, Michigan Bell has added close to a quarter of a million telephones. That was made possible only by using up all our reserve equipment and by stretching to the limit the facilities we had.

We've crowded our switchboards and cables beyond their normal capacity. Where any residential service could be supplied, we've usually put in party lines instead of individual lines. And we've repaired and returned to service all usable old apparatus.

Orders for telephones essential to the war are filled promptly. Other requests for new service are handled under a definite procedure, as present users give up service. But there is a long and growing waiting list.

We believe you would want us to meet war service needs ahead of comfort and convenience for civilians. And we appreciate your understanding and co-operation.

HIGHER EDUCATION

Any man who thinks he is educated isn't. Any man who thinks he has arrived is standing still. Any man who is satisfied with what he has achieved is on his way down the other side of the hill. The more a man learns the more he realizes how little he knows.

Therefore, the great men of the world's history have been the men who have, by rigid self-discipline, kept their minds open; they are the ones with the remorseless curiosity who have given the human race any development and progress it has enjoyed.

When Charles F. Kettering was graduated from college and the ceremonies were over he took his diploma home with him, sat before the fire and burned it. "Now," he said to himself as the flames turned into ashes the thing that most young men frame as a symbol of their arrival somewhere, "I will now start out and learn something."

Young Kettering meant no reflection on his school. It was with him a case of self-discipline. He wanted to keep that mind of his open; he did not want to consider himself educated. Though today a world figure in the field of scientific research, he still does not think he is educated; his mind is still open; he is still so enthusiastically curious about so many things that he retains the buoyancy of a boy.

The physician may tell you that a man is as old as his arteries, but a psychologist will tell you that a man is as old as his enthusiasm to learn is dimmed.

Censorship rules forbid mention of the number of men at mass, communion and confession, and I try to hang onto the ultra-conservative side, but I was surely glad to hear that when the boys come back from the front the first thing they inquire about is mass. The people at home will never realize the faith of these men. If they could only visit with and live with a group of these men for a while they would realize more. I thought I did when I was in Charlevoix with you, but I never dreamed of what I have seen since enlisting. Of course what I have always told Charlevoixians is still true — that all they need do is observe the faith of the people at Bay Shore to draw inspiration. I know because I live with these youngsters. And all I can say to the folks back home is to redouble your prayers. God bless them at home!"

"Bake" a Cake on Top of the Stove

The flexible, easily controlled heat of gas ranges makes interesting new surface recipes practical and no longer limits top-of-the-stove cookery to frying and boiling. These advantages are not limited to city housewives, since convenient "bottled" or "tank" gas is the ready source of fuel for thousands of suburban and farm homes outside the scope of public gas utilities.

You can save fuel by "baking" your upside-down cake on top of the stove. Here's one recipe for this convenient dessert:

3 tblsp. butter
¾ cup brown sugar
2 apples

Melt butter in skillet, add the brown sugar and stir well. Slice apples and arrange in mixture in bottom of skillet. Prepare batter and pour into skillet, being careful not to disarrange fruit. Place lid on skillet and cook over low flame for 45 minutes or until done. Make batter as follows:

6 tblsp. butter
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup milk
3 teasp. baking powder
1 teasp. vanilla
1¾ cups sifted cake flour

Cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add eggs and beat well. Sift flour and baking powder together and add alternately with milk and vanilla.

WRIGHT'S HOUSEBOAT LEAVES FOR DETROIT

Will Be Rebuilt For Trip Down Mississippi To Florida

The double-decked houseboat, recently fitted out at the foot of Clinton Street for a trip to Detroit is the property of D. Wright who was assisted by his niece, Mrs. A. J. Olson.

The Anna Marie was originally a houseboat, with two staterooms, cabin and bath, running water and lights. Designed for use in Florida waters, the craft, 54½ feet long by 19½-foot beam, is powered by a 100 h.p. Kermath marine engine. Mr. Wright, who worked here for sometime at the Miller Boat Company, had intended to make a trip back to Florida with the Anna Marie this spring via the Mississippi River, but later decided to have her rebuilt.

Both Wright and Mrs. Olson were employed in Detroit by the Packard Motor Co.

WASHINGTON

tual nor our near future demand may be for hospital beds when the invasion of the Continent gets underway.

The relatively remote location of Fort Brady with respect to the nearest Veterans Facility and General Army Hospital makes the Fort Brady Hospital undesirable for use by either the Veterans' Administration or the Army. I have been formally notified by both.

Recently it has developed, however, that there is becoming evident a definite shortage of hospital beds in the Lower Michigan area. Our State institutions are now finding themselves seriously pressed for accommodations, because of a greatly increased demand for the care of returning veterans, many of whom have been discharged. With the Federal facilities filled, the State is being requested to take over the care of many of these cases on a per diem cost basis. After careful study by Governor Kelly and his associates, therefore, it was decided that it is possible for the State to use the Fort Brady Hospital by transferring some 400 patients, who require relatively little medical attention, from Lower Michigan institutions to Sault Ste. Marie. These patients could be adequately serviced by the medical staff of the Newberry Hospital some 60 miles distant.

On the return of this delegation to Lansing on Thursday, Governor Kelly called his Administrative Board into session to hear the report from Secretary of State Dignan and to secure the authorization by the Board to proceed to Washington, en route to the Governors' Conference in Hershey, Pa., in order to close a definite deal with the Army, if possible. Working very closely with Senator Ferguson and myself, we believe we were successful in completing a deal which should prove mutually satisfactory to the Army and to the State of Michigan.

On Saturday morning, the Governor submitted a proposal to the Army for the State of Michigan to rent the Fort Brady Temporary Hospital for a period of five years, the rental price to be $5,000 for the first year and $7,500 for each succeeding year and at the same time the State reserved the right to purchase the hospital for $85,000 — representing a reasonable salvage value — and any rentals theretofore paid would be applied toward the purchase price. It is expected that it will cost the State approximately $100,000 to equip the hospital for use, everything moveable having been removed by the Army when the facility was closed.

In my opinion, this deal should prove mutually advantageous to the Army and the State of Michigan, and above all to the taxpayers of our State; and I believe in due time it will be recognized by the people as a successful culmination of untiring efforts on the part of your Congressman, Senator Ferguson, Governor Kelly and Secretary Herman Dignan and his associates.

with a series of humorous readings and one-act plays. She has a national reputation in her field. Miss Eads will give a brief report of the last year's results. This last project covered four different lessons on different subjects, so we look forward to her report with great interest.

Musical numbers will be given by the Melodians of Boyne City consisting of Eleanor Bradley, Maxine Bradley and Georgia Hall. Jack Carman will give a series of imitations. A group of East Jordan musicians will appear on the program in instrumental selections.

The ladies in the county are making big plans for this event and a cordial invitation is extended to the husbands and families of the group members and to the entire public. Ten different communities carried on the project activities this past winter with over a hundred group members participating.

Dated this 29th day of May, 1944

Fair Outlook Is Brighter Than Any Wartime Year

The outlook for township, county and district fairs throughout the State of Michigan, and a successful continuation of the showing of the Michigan State Fair livestock list at county fairs, is brighter than it has been at any time since the starting of the war, says Chas. Figy, commissioner of agriculture.

Over 50 of the leading fairs have already indicated their intention to hold a fair during the 1944 fair season, and in all probability others will come later. This number does not include some 30 specials such as potato shows, breeder shows, etc.

A. C. Carton, Supervisor of Michigan Fairs, states that the State's contribution in the payment of one-half of the premiums awarded on agricultural and industrial exhibits at township, county and district fairs will be in the neighborhood of $100,000 and the payment of the total premiums awarded on state fair exhibits will be $25,000.

It is hoped that the state fair premiums, which are paid directly from the State Department of Agriculture, will equal 80 per cent of the amount received by the exhibitors of the same classes at the state fair in Detroit in 1941.

The exhibiting of the state fair livestock list at the different county fairs is an effort to bring a portion of the state fair to the people.

Victory Gurden premium lists for old and young will be continued at all the fairs and the State will participate in the payment of premiums. All fair secretaries and managers have been requested to include in their programs patriotic movements of every kind including sale of war stamps, Red Cross booths and the distribution of literature, etc. Negotiations are on with the War and Navy Departments to have certain displays on some of the fairgrounds during the fair. Everything seemingly is going to be done to promote a larger production of food stuffs, patriotic activities, and above all, the maintenance of normal conditions on the home front.

'Aerosol Bomb' Sprays New Insecticide

A new type of "bomb" is expected to revolutionize the spreading of insecticides. This discovery, called an aerosol bomb, is a small cylinder that spreads insecticides under high pressure. The "aerosol" is made by dissolving pyrethrum extract and sesame oil in a liquified refrigerant known commercially as Freon. Methyl chloride and other materials can be substituted for Freon, which is scarce.

WASHINGTON

Yesterday, May 24th, the iron fence was removed from the entrance to the historic old Senate and Supreme Court Chamber in the Capitol, permitting use of this old monumental room for the celebration in observance of the 100th Anniversary of the telegraph, honoring its inventor, Samuel F. B. Morse and his achievement in rapid communication.

On first thought, this might be termed "just another celebration," but behind it is a story of one poor man's achievement of a modern miracle and the realization of his life's ambition via the American way. The reason this Centennial was held in the seldom used room in the Capitol, is because that is where the first measure of Morse's success was achieved. It was to this room that he brought the queer-looking apparatus for sending and receiving electrical signals that was used in the Celebration, after having been loaned for the purpose by the Museum of Carnell University. And, incidentally, I saw this same apparatus and heard it operated many years ago when it was my pleasure to visit the experimental laboratories of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company in New York City.

Recorded history has it that Morse strung about ten miles of wire around the room and "clicked" of his dots and dashes as a demonstration to the Senate of the feasibility of his device. Also he was doing a bit of practival lobbying for an appropriation of $30,000 contained in a bill entitled "To test the practicability of establishing a system of electromagnetic telegraphs by the United States."

Morse, who was an artist by profession, truly had the inventive instinct and worked on his visible spark idea for several years. He was almost 50 in 1840 when he was granted his first patent. He endeavored to interest Congress and the Government in the idea but the Congress of 1841-42 adjourned with his idea untouched. Finally in 1843, the Congress passed the bill and Morse got his first financial backing and with that backing commenced the construction of a line from Washington to Baltimore which followed the line of the railroad.

The first plan was to place insulated wires inside a leaden pipe and bury it. A special plow was built to make the furrow for the pipe line. However, after the pipe was laid about half way to Baltimore, their tests showed that induction was so great that the signals would not reach the whole distance. Half of the $30,000 appropriation was consumed by this time.

Faced with doing the job over and with a shortage of money, Morse almost collapsed. Some interested friends raised additional funds for him and as they were working to a time limit, resorted to an ingenious scheme to re-do the job and keep the public from becoming suspicious. This time they strung the wires above the ground, completed the job on schedule and found themselves with some three or four thousand dollars of the appropriated funds to the good.

When the day for the final test of the success of inter-city telegraphic communication came, Morse was in the Senate Chamber in Washington and a Mr. Vail was at Baltimore. The original tape with the dots and dashes spelling out "What hath God Wrought" is on exhibition at the Library of Congress today.

The first practical use for the telegraph came about the following week, when the National Whig Convention was in session in Baltimore. The Baltimore Sun of May 31, 1844, reported: "Prof. Morse's telegraph has already, during the first week of its operations, been proved to be of the greatest public importance. Time and space have been completely annihilated. The Washington Standard states that on Wednesday the North front of the Capitol was crowded by an anxious multitude, to whom the proceedings of the Convention were announced from the telegraph office at short intervals during the day. After the announcement of the nominations, which were communicated in less than 10 minutes after they occurred, the persons were organized into a meeting and adopted a Resolution of thanks to the Inventor."

If Morse were privileged to see the telegraph system of today, he could indeed repeat his own message of a century ago: 'What hath God Wrought."

LEONADUS PLINE sat behind his glass-topped desk with expensively groomed, impregnable assurance. A pucker of a pout formed around his lips that two hours later would methodically smack their way through the contents of a luncheon tray which his secretary, Miss Seacy, would bring to him.

At the moment Miss Seacy, her notebook on her knee, darted an apprehensive look at him.

"This water," he began, turning distastefully away from the silver jug at his elbow.

In a comprehending flash Miss Seacy clutched the pitcher and tiptoed from his carpeted office. In a few seconds she was back with it freshly filled. She handed a goblet of water across the desk and expectantly sat down again. All I need, she thought rebelliously, is a palm leaf to wave across his brow.

But should anyone have glanced at her through the door he would have seen only a small trim figure in black, with a strand of pearls at her throat, a coronet braid of dark hair setting off her quietly pretty features.

Abruptly Mr. Pline raised a large, pale, well-cared-for hand to remove his nose glasses that all through the day would be shifted from nose to desk and from desk to nose. "You may put aside your book," he said ceremoniously.

Miss Seacy's pretty lips parted in astonishment. "Yes, m'lord," mentally replied her unruly mind. "What have I done now?" it continued rakishly.

"Miss Seacy," resumed Mr. Pline's best executive voice. "Do you realize that today is a very special day?"

Miss Seacy's brown eyes were suddenly wary.

"Today," intoned Mr. Pline, "marks the fifth anniversary of your employment in our company. I hardly need to tell you of the esteemed place you hold with us for the loyal and capable service you have rendered. And in behalf of this commendable record in length of time and quality of service I wish to present you with this token of my appreciation." Expansively he handed a large, finely textured envelope to Miss Seacy.

Carefully she pulled out the unsealed flap and drew forth an ornately bordered and embossed document. The elegantly engraved message announced to an indifferent world that Miss Joanna Louise Seacy, by virtue of five years of service in the L. A. Pline Company was duly entitled to this Certificate of Merit.

That was all. No green bills. No bonus. Miss Seacy looked like a child who had just bitten into a disappointing piece of candy. But Mr. Pline in his glow of benevolence did not notice. "As the years go on," he beamed, "I hope to add many more."

"Oh, no, Mr. Pline," said Miss Seacy's mutinous mind within her. "Not for little Joanna." She managed to say, "Thank you, Mr. Pline." And then she heard herself adding, "Thanks for opening my eyes, too. I didn't realize I'd been plugging away here that long. Remember the morning I came? I was a bright-eyed infant of twenty. I could have kissed you for letting me enter these sacred doors to learn the business from the ground up for Deb Parade Frocks. And I was soon to realize my dream—planning sales promotion for Deb Parade. Assistant to Helene, that's what I was to be. Assistant in sales promotion, because I was a Girl with Ideas. And while I was still in my youthful daze someone led me to the files and I got lost there for a couple of years. Then I doubled for a dictaphone operator one day and was lost there for another year. So far as I can see Helene has never had an assistant in her life. As a result, I've been filling shorthand books for you for three years.

"Mr. Pline, I'm just beginning to see myself in a very discouraging light. I'm not blaming you. I'm sitting here with the sudden realization that I've been dumb. I'm not a step nearer to sales promotion than I ever was. 'I tank I go home,' Mr. Pline." She whirled out of her chair.

"One moment," ordered Mr. Pline dramatically. "For five years I've been waiting for you to tell me that you're ready to promote Deb Parade. Background? Of course you needed background. Was it my fault that it took you five years to open up? In my company the go-aheaders have to do that. You're in sales promotion now, Miss Seacy. You're not Helene's assistant. You're in charge. Let's see what you can do."

Miss Seacy's eyes were round with fear. "Oh, do you think I can do it?"

"None of that," majestically commanded Mr. Pline. "Promote!"

All eyes were upon Miss Seacy as she made her way to her desk. "That was a long session," remarked Helene. "Are you quitting too?"

"No. I've been promoted." Then she was struck with the meaning of Helene's question. "Did you say 'quitting too?' Are you quitting?"

"Certainly. I gave notice about an hour ago. Effective in two weeks."

"Why that old windbag!" exclaimed Miss Seacy. There was reluctant admiration in her voice.

Don't Worry, Ma

By ELLIS K. BALDWIN

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features

SERGT. JIMMY GRAHAM sat slouched over the writing table in the Post Exchange rec hall at the end of his fountain pen. He hated writing letters as much as his mother loved to receive them. It wasn't so hard at first but now he was running out of things to say. The only piece of news he could think of was something you couldn't put down on paper. The commanding officer had given strict orders about that.

Jim's nostrils twitched. The memory of the spicy aroma in his mother's kitchen took him across the miles to Burtonville. She was standing beside the stove with a long spoon stirring a batch of apple butter the day he broke the news.

"Enlisted? Jim, that's fine," she said firmly, pushing back a strand of graying hair which clung moistly to her flushed cheek. "The Grahams have all been good soldiers," she sang out as she cut a thick slice of fresh bread and loaded it generously with the delicious brown concoction.

He had noticed her fingers tremble ever so slightly when she handed it to him. Jim came from a family of fighting men, right back to Great-Grandfather Ebenezer who carried a musket in 1812, she reminded him, as if he didn't know it. He knew too they had all returned. Every one of them except his own father.

That accounted for Ma's trembling fingers. "Put a Graham in a cage with man-eating tigers and nothing but his bare fists and he'd battle his way out somehow," she'd often said proudly. But when she read headlines about shipwrecks and sinkings Jim saw the color drain quickly from her face.

The memory of spicy aroma in his mother's kitchen.

Jim's sister wrote him. 'Ma took on something awful after you left. She's not afraid you can't handle yourself at the front. I guess you know what she does fear."

His letters arrived home steadily at first. When he was assigned to the job of instructor and it looked as if he would stay on this side for the duration, Ma grew calmer.

The letters, he knew, meant a great deal. Ma read them to almost anyone who would listen. She always said: "A good son writes regular."

Jim's pen scratched methodically across the paper. He put in a paragraph about the weather and, remembering regulations, crossed it out. His next was dated four days later. He looked around at the other guys writing relatives and sweethearts. He envied the way they kept the words flowing. "They're going at it like a final examination and as if they knew all the answers," Jim told himself.

Fascinated, he watched the sandy-haired corporal beside him. He had a nose upturned like a teakettle snout. Unconsciously Jim chewed his tongue as he wrote. "What you telling them, Corporal?" he asked.

"Here, have a look." A sly gleam lighted the corporal's eyes.

Jim read a few lines and laughed aloud. It was perfect. The description of the screwball fellow who worked in the big kitchen was better than a candid photo. "Mind if I copy a little? Ma would get a laugh out of this."

Writing was easier after that. Jim swapped with other fellows.

The letter marked the seventeenth was a cinch. He found a movie magazine on the reading table. It reviewed the film he'd seen at the camp theater the night before. Only as he copied the plot he kept thinking of the time his mother took him to the Bijou in Burtonville. She had bought his first long pants that day.

His wrist ached now. There ought to be one more, but he was stuck. Then across the room next to the juke box he saw the schedule of activities posted for the entire month. "We don't lack variety," he wrote feverishly. "Everything from boxing matches to radio stars. Kate Smith is coming." The bones in his hand felt like burning coals when he ended. "Don't worry about me, Ma. They're treating me grand."

Quickly he addressed six envelopes. Then he folded his missives and tucked them in. A moment later he was grinning happily beside the Post Exchange counter, licking the flaps. To the man there he said, "Can you space these so she'll get one about every four days?"

Once he was across, he knew, Ma wouldn't worry, because she realized when a Graham finally got into combat he could take care of himself.

Mich. Law Makes It Easy for Those In Armed Forces To Vote

County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow Explains Simplified Process of Obtaining Ballot — Service Men. 21 Years Old by Nov. 7, 1944, Entitled to Vote Regardless of Prior Registration.

The Extra Session of 1944, of the Michigan State Legislature enacted a law setting the regular November Primaries two months earlier for the year 1944, or on July 11, 1944, thus giving seventy (79) days for sending out and returning Absent Voters' Ballots.

In addition to the regular absent voters provisions which have been in affect for many years in Michigan, the new Act has this provision.

"PROVIDED, That any member of the armed forces of the United States, any auxiliary thereof, or the merchant marine, or any nurse or civilian on war duty, otherwise qualified as an elector under the laws of this state, whether registered or unregistered, may apply for such absent voters' ballot for the November, 1944, election upon the form herein prescribed or upon such other form as may be provided under and by virtue of the public laws of the United States, and such applications may be forwarded to the secretary of state or to the township or city clerk of the voter's place of residence."

This means that any person who is a citizen and in one of the above named groups, twenty-one years of age or will be twenty-one years of age on Nov. 7, 1944, regardless of whether he is registered heretofore or not, may apply, receive and vote his absent voters' ballot.

This ballot will not be a special war ballot but the regular official ballot the same as will be used by those voting in person and will allow the person to vote for all offices from President to Coroner.

Mr. Bulow has prepared a simplified form of application as follows:

"APPLICATION FOR ABSENT VOTER'S BALLOT for the election to be held on November 7, 1944

Date _____

I, _____ having the qualifications* of an elector, or will have the qualifications of an elector on the 7th day of November, 1944, of the _____ precinct of the township of _____ or the _____ ward of the city of _____ in the county of Charlevoix and state of Michigan, and being a member of the: (--) armed forces of the United States; (--) any auxiliary thereof; (--) the merchant marine; (--) any nurse; (--) civilian on war duty, (CHECK WHICH), expecting to be absent from the said township, village or city on the day of holding such election, hereby make application for an official ballot, to be voted by me at such election.

Send "absent voter's" ballot to me at _____

Home address of applicant _____

(Signature of absent voter)

*This application registers members of armed forces, auxiliaries thereof, etc., for Nov. 1944 election."

(The above form clipped and properly filled out, and mailed to County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow will constitute an official application for a soldier's ballot.)

These card application forms for absent voter's ballots may be obtained by anyone upon application to the County Clerk, or any city or township clerk, or they will be mailed direct to any address upon application or the above application form, as it appears here, may be cut out of the paper and will answer the purpose if it is not possible to secure one of the cards.

Mr. Bulow urges all persons who have friends or relatives in the armed forces to secure application cards and send them to their friends so that they may make early application. An official ballot can not be sent out by the local clerk until he has received a written request of the applicant in substantially the form outlined and signed by himself. These cards will be carried free by the United States Postal Department and the ballot will be returned in a sealed envelope on the outside of which is the oath of the elector stating that he is a citizen, etc., and that this ballot was marked by him personally and sealed without being exhibited to any other person. This oath must be sworn to before a commissioned officer. The application card does not even have to be witnessed. This is all the "red tape" necessary for a person in the Service to vote in the November 1944 Election.

If you will secure, from the county, city, or township clerk, one of these application cards, or cut the above form from this paper and send it to your friend or loved one, or give his address to any of these clerks so that they may mail him this application as soon as possible in order that this card may be returned to the local clerk by August 15, 1944, which is the approximate date the ballots will be ready for mailing, leaving seventy days for the ballots to be mailed out and returned, so there is no reason why nearly every person from Michigan in the armed forces who desires to do so, cannot vote in this coming November Election.

Studebaker Champion rates high with busy Federal law officer

HERE'S a letter from Frank M. Durrance of Orlando, Florida who says:

"My 1941 Studebaker Champion has been driven about 150,000 miles—at the lowest maintenance cost of any car I've ever owned. Whether across the county or across the nation, this dependable Studebaker is always ready to go on a moment's notice. Its gasoline mileage is consistently high and its materials and workmanship are the finest."

Yes, these war days, the fire-saving, gas-saving, soundly built Studebaker Champion adds new luster to its reputation from coast to coast.

It's no wonder that used Studebaker Champions, Commanders and Presidents are in such big demand everywhere.

THE QUEEREST KIND OF PARTNERS

CHATTERER the Red Squirrel looked at Tommy Tit the Chickadee as if he suspected that Tommy was making fun of him. Tommy just had asked Chatterer if he knew Farmer Brown's Boy and he were partners. And of course Chatterer hadn't known anything of the kind. He made up his mind that Tommy Tit was joking, though he couldn't quite see what the joke was. The idea of any of the little forest and meadow people having Farmer Brown's Boy for a partner! And yet, somehow, Tommy looked as if he really meant it.

"You're very clever, Tommy Tit,
As clever as can be,
But when you ask me this to believe,
You ask too much of me."

Chatterer said this in the pert way he has, and Tommy Tit laughed. "You don't believe it but, just the same, it is so. Farmer Brown's Boy knows it and I know it, and we don't care a snap whether you or anybody else believes it or not," he replied. "Now, I must get busy and do my share. Dee, dee, dee, chickadee!" With that Tommy Tit flew over to the next apple tree and began to search one twig after another with his sharp, twinkling black eyes. Every second or two he would spy a teeny, weeny egg, so small that you and I probably would not have seen one of them. As fast as he found them he snapped them up. It didn't seem as if they were big enough for anyone to eat, but you know Tommy Tit is a very little fellow himself, and he found those teeny, weeny eggs very good, indeed.

"Do you see that lump over on that tree?" he asked.

Chatterer watched him for a long time and all the time he was studying and studying over what Tommy had said. "Pooh!" said he at last, "he's doing nothing but eat and eat, and I'd like to know what that's got to do with Farmer Brown's Boy."

Tommy Tit happened to be flying past on his way to another tree just then and he overheard Chatterer.

"It's got everything to do with him," said he, stopping just long enough to open and gobble up a little package of teeny, weeny eggs he had overlooked when he was in that tree before. "You see, all summer long Farmer Brown's Boy has to fight the worms that eat the leaves and spoil the apples. Now, all those worms come from teeny, weeny eggs hidden under the rough bark and fastened on the little twigs, and the more I find and eat the fewer worms there will be to bother Farmer Brown's Boy. Now do you see?"

"No, I don't," replied Chatterer shortly. "Partners usually do something for each other, and, so far as I can see, you are doing something for Farmer Brown's Boy and he is doing nothing for you. That's no kind of a partner to have."

"Oh, you stupid!" exclaimed Tommy Tit impatiently. "If he didn't kill the worms in the summer they would kill the trees by eating all the leaves, and if the trees were killed, what would I do? So I work for myself and for him in the winter, and he works for himself and for me in the summer. Besides, he pays me for all I do."

"Pays you!" Chatterer laughed. "Pays you! I wish you'd show me how he pays you."

Tommy's eyes twinkled more than ever. "Do you see that lump of white over on that tree near the edge of the Old Orchard?" he asked.

Chatterer admitted that he did and that he already had planned to run over and find out what it was.

"That's a piece of suet," replied Tommy, "and Farmer Brown's Boy put it there for me. You know, I am very fond of it, and in bad weather, or when food is scarce, all I have to do is to fly over there and get all I want to eat. Now do you believe that Farmer Brown's Boy is my partner?" Chatterer was forced to admit that he did.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

The country newspaper editor was in a retrospective mood.

"Some of today's trends disturb me," he began.

It was a warm spring afternoon, and we were traveling in an automobile together on a short business trip.

"Maybe I'm just old-fashioned, or perhaps it's because I'm getting older and my hair is turning gray. But I do observe that changes are taking place in the lives of the people of my town and county. And I wonder what will be the outcome of these changes, tomorrow, after the war.

"Take the farmer, for example. I attended a meeting of the county AAA committee the other day. There was a time when all this government control and regulation were highly repugnant to the grower. He shied away from the government's efforts to regiment his affairs.

"Now some of our best farmers are members of the county committee. They talk enthusiastically about the very things they once condemned. What about this thing called free enterprise? As I see it, we're losing something that made America great — freedom of the individual to think and to act for himself. Now, he expects the government to do it for him.

"And the merchant in town! Well, you know the story.

"Several things have happened to him. First, the fast-motored automobile and the modern concrete highway have given the consumer a choice between my town and the nearby large city. Progressive merchants who study the needs of the public and who tell the public about their merchandise through effective advertising are meeting this new trend pretty well. But some of the merchants are not.

"And then there is the growing concentration of industry and business into the hands of corporations and their stockholders—offering more and better things often at lower prices. The merchant who ran the average business in my town used to own the business himself. Now, the chances are increasing that he now works for the corporate owners.

"Community leadership is going to suffer unless such merchants take a personal active interest in the welfare of the town and county. These men should participate in affairs of our village — such as the Community Chest, Parent-Teacher Association, the Chamber of Commerce, and the churches. We need their leadership. They should assume responsibility for helping to make a better world, right here at home. The place to begin is in our own home town — our own backyard.

"More and more, our people are inclined to look to someone else for a solution of their problems.

"We want Washington or Lansing to authorize an appropriation and build a post office, or increase teachers' salaries, or do this and that — things which our fathers wouldn't have asked for unless they were willing to pay the cost themselves.

"Cities refuse to increase school taxes and yet they demand that the State of Michigan return one-third of the state sales tax to local governments — counties, municipalities and schools. Plans are now under way, you know, to initinte by petition a constitutional amendment in Michigan to do just this very thing.

"Well — whose money is it, anyway? It surely isn't 'state' money or 'federal' money. We pay it in taxes. During the state's fiscal year ending last June 30th, the State of Michigan distributed a little more than $134,000,000 back to local governments. That's a lot of money. And it was 55 per cent of all state revenues.

"Centralized distribution of public funds is breaking down our local tax responsibility. It invites a mad scramble to get yours while the getting is good — and all the time adding to the cost of government.

"Maybe I'm an old fogey. But as one newspaper editor who is trying to keep up with developments, I'm frankly puzzled.

"I know we've abandoned Isolationism. Sure, it's as dead as the dodo bird. The other day didn't an army airplane span the continent, California to New York, in a little more than six hours? Boobers fly across the Atlantic like Michigan pheasants wing over a pond. Only a few months ago airplane watchers by the thousands were scanning the skies in northern Michigan for enemy airplanes that, thank God, never arrived.

"This global war is costing the American taxpayers an fabulous sum, and we've got to buy more war bonds if we are to defeat Hitler and Tojo. Can free enterprise — the right of the individual — survive such an ordeal? Well, obviously we've got to fight fire with fire, and lick fascism with strong economic controls exercised by a centralized authority that regiments our entire lives. That's total war.

"And what is happening in Europe doesn't help matters either. You can't destroy wealth that has been accumulated by toil and thrift of many generations, without invoking more centralized authority to restore order out of disorder.

"No, I don't like the prospect one bit, but my guess is that Europe is going to see more state socialism in postwar reconstruction period and that this same trend, to a less degree, may take place in the United States unless we do something about it.

"Of course, I don't want it. Neither do the insurance companies, or the medical doctors. Bureaucracy is a costly way of helping yourself.

"A business friend of mine is a staunch believer in the idea that you can't beat a trend and that you shouldn't buck a condition. What's a trend or condition but the combined thinking or non-thinking of a lot of us folks. Well, I'm still old-fashioned enough to wonder why the individual isn't smart enough to solve his own problems without running to the government all the time."

We listened to the country editor's observations, thinking about tomorrow's historic assault of the Allies upon Hitler's European fortress and the significance of the fateful decision that is yet to come.

Is this editor a "reactionary"? Is it possible to bent a trend?

As we asked these questions, silently the thought came to us that a lot of other Michigan people may be wondering about tomorrow and where we are going.

History insists that every great war has been followed by some kind of revolution — "revolution" being another word for change. World War II can't be an exception to the rule — or can it? What do YOU think? What are YOU going to do? It's your decision, too.

and mailed a sample of forms to be used in making applications for the money and instructions on procedure. In event a county does not obligate all its money by application before November 1, 1944, the rest of the amount will be turned back to the fund for redistribution to other counties.

In applying for funds, counties are required to list specific projects on separate applications and submit them for approval to both the State Highway Commissioner and the State Administrative Board. After their approvals, the counties are then required to prepare their plans and submit them with a statement of expense. After approval of the plans by the Highway Commissioner and the Administrative Board the latter will authorize payment of half of the expense of making the plans up to the limit of the amounts for which the counties may apply.

Amount available for Charlevoix County under this program is $6,219.90.

PAUSE FOR PRAYER GETS GOOD RESPONSE

churches will open their doors and many will hold special services to offer prayers for those taking part in the great offensive.

"Use of the air raid warning system was decided upon as the only means to prevent premature or spontaneous observances, keep the general situation under control and within the limits of propriety, and effect a simultaneous pause to invoke the power of universal prayer for the safety of our sons and the success of our cause," said Capt. Donald S. Leonard, State Director of Civilian Defense. "It is emphatically desired to avoid any development that might have the tinge of a celebration, and to stress that this will be a day set aside for a united appeal to Providence.

"In using the signal system we are not attempting to bring first news of the invasion to the various communities. This will be done by the press and radio. Our only purpose is to accomplish the one-minute pause, and therefore about three hours will be allowed from the time the D-Day message is sent out by the state until the signal is sounded. If news of the invasion is received during the evening the observance will be held the next day to prevent confusion."

JAKE LINDERMAN COMMITS SUICIDE IN STATE ST. HOME

Jacob Linderman, 54, well-known resident of Charlevoix for the past 25 years, shot himself at midnight, Monday, death resulting instantly.

The body was discovered Tuesday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, by Lawrence Korth, a business partner of Linderman, who noticed, in passing Linderman's home at 801 State Street, that the windows were open and, as it was raining, went up to close them. He found Linderman lying across the bed in his pajamas with a 12-gauge shotgun between his knees. He had evidently placed the muzzle in his mouth, while in a sitting posture, and discharged both barrels.

Lawrence immediately got in touch with his father, R. C. Korth, who contacted Sheriff Ikens. Together they picked up Coroner McMillan and went to the house to make an examination. About $200 in currency and a number of war bonds lay on the dresser by the side of the bed. The coroner pronounced it suicide.

The remains were taken to the See Funeral Home to await the arrival of relatives from Grand Rapids where Mr. Linderman was born and where he lived before coming to Northern Michigan to follow his trade as a meat cutter.

The battle for the World is on!

NOW THAT the chips are down . . . now that our men are writing decisive history with their blood . . .

There can be no halfway measures for us.

The greatest battle in the history of the world must be matched by the greatest war loan in the history of the world.

That's what Uncle Sam says . . . the same Uncle Sam for whom your brothers and sweethearts and husbands are fighting and dying this very minute.

They, in the front lines, are throwing in everything they have.

We, behind the lines, must do the same.

Remember, this is the battle for the WORLD. Our world. And we've got to win it. That's why Uncle Sam expects every dollar, like every soldier, to do its duty.

MORE RATION POINTS CUT STARTING JUNE 4

Canned Carrots, Grapefruit And Orange Juices Ration Free

WASHINGTON—The Office of Price Administration has removed canned carrots and canned orange and grapefruit juices from the ration list, effective Sunday.

It reduced by two points the ration value of all cheese and cheese products and chuck beef steaks and chuck roasts. Cheese will be 10 points a pound; chuck steak five points.

The agency said it is expected more beef, veal, lamb, mutton, and variety meats will be available to civilians in June than in May, but there will be a slight reduction in pork supplies. Pork and other meat, except beef, continue ration free.

Other changes in the new ration chart, effective from Sunday June 4th through July 1st, included a reduction in points for evaporated and condensed milk from one to one-half point a pound; an increase for grape juice in pint sizes by four points to 10, and an increase in pineapple juice in No. 2 can from 12 to 15 points.

$10,000 For Survey
Resort Study Asked

EAST LANSING—The Michigan Planning Commission is studying a report from its tourist and resort advisory committee urging an adequate economic survey of the state's multi-million dollar tourist business and suggesting that the legislature be asked to appropriate $10,000 for the study.

The request for conducting the survey was made by George E. Bishop, chairman of the advisory committee, who pointed out, "We believe that to properly prepare for the future the over-all worth of the state's tourist and travel business should be known, particularly the value of out-state business brought into Michigan."

"Until this job is undertaken our planning for the post-war promotion and development of the industry cannot go forward with any degree of the widespread confidence it deserves," he added.

Bishop declared that in prosperous pre-war years various agencies had estimated that the state's tourist industry amounted to from 300 to 400 million dollars annually.

B. A. Proulx, professor of hotel administration, will be made available by Michigan State College to conduct the survey, the advisory committee reported.

FIFTH WAR LOAN DRIVE HANDLED BY BLUE STARS

SIXTEEN BILLION DOLLARS MUST BE RAISED

Two Billion More Than Last Drive With Six Billion To Come From Individuals

That, in a nutshell, is the job ahead of us. When you realize that from January 1st through June 30, 1944, costs of the war will exceed 45 billion dollars you begin to see why the goal for this drive is higher than for any of the others. This Nation's Treasury must borrow a great deal of money this year to keep the war going, more, in fact, than we can expect to receive in taxes. Guns, planes, tanks must be paid for in cash not in promissory notes against the future. It's easy to see why the 5th War Loan goal must be reached.

Charlevoix County's quota for the Fifth War Loan is $422,000. Of that amount the county corporation quota is $122,000. That leaves $300,000, or $100,000 each to be raised by the three community centers in the county, Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City, with the E Bond quota set at $52,000 for each community.

In Charlevoix the drive is to be handled by the Blue Star Mothers of whom there are about 40, Mrs. P. R. Ross is their chairman. These intensely patriotic and selfless women, who so ably handled the fourth war loan drive, will be out to better their previous record. A house-to-house canvass will be made in Charlevoix and the adjoining rural districts. It's up to every individual to aid them in every way possible, and especially in loaning money to the government.

Series E Bonds

Series E bonds are appreciation bonds, so called because they appreciate or increase in value at the end of the first year, and every 6 months thereafter until maturity. They mature in 10 years, at which time you receive $4 for every $3 you have invested in them. They can be registered only as follows: In the name of one individual, two individuals as co-owners, or one individual with one other individual as beneficiary. They are registered in the name of the owner, are non-transferable, and cannot be used as collateral. They are dated the

MICHIGAN MIRROR

Monday, June 19, the Michigan state legislature will convene in special session at Lansing for the express purpose of enacting a law to validate the "federal ballot" for Michigan soldiers and sailors in the November election.

Here's how the change would work.

By August 1 or August 15 at the latest, every Michigan service man or woman will be given an army-navy postcard. If the service man fills out the card, it will go to Secretary of State Herman Dignan at Lansing. The cards will be routed to county clerks, and from there to the applicants' home towns.

This card is a formal request for an absentee ballot. However, a request may be made by letter, and in fact 20,000 such letters have already been received at the secretary of state's office at Lansing.

If by October 1, the absentee ballot has NOT been received by a Michigan service man, wherever he may happen to be, then the federal ballot law — if validated by the Michigan legislature June 19 — would permit commanding officers in the field to distribute the federal ballot.

This federal ballot provides a vote only for the following: President, vice-president and members of Congress.

In fact, it was the federal ballot plan that evoked such a controversy among members of Congress, bringing about a working condition between southern democratic members and northern Republican members.

If the suspicion prevails among Republicans that the federal ballot is intended to circumvent the

The electrical storm was the cause of his death was accompanied by heavy rain, almost amounting to a cloudburst, and a violent wind. Cellars were flooded, shingles on roofs were lifted and the water ruined many ceilings, driving its way through window casements and doorways. The rush of water down Bridge Street tore a hole about ten feet deep near the bridge abutment on the Wilhur property. It washed out the wall of the furnace room in the new theater building and flooded lawns, covering them with dirt and rubbish. Houses and trees were shattered by the lightning bolts. Not less than 50 per cent of the city's telephones were put out of order. The storm followed a week of 92 to 98 degree temperature and lasted an hour from 4:30 p. m. on Tuesday, June 3rd.

Setting of Grass Fires Costs Guilty $367

LANSING—A sterner policy to curb setting of grass fires without permits has cost nine offenders in seven southern Michigan counties a total of $275 in fines and $92 in costs in recent weeks. Conservation officers, who issue permits, have signed 20 complaints during the period.

Residents of northern counties where fire hazards are greater have more familiarity with state law which establishes penalties for failure to secure permission to set fires, and relatively fewer complaints are brought north of the Muskegon-Bay City line.

The conservation department's fire report for last week brings the total acreage burned so far this season to 14,451, a figure which is steadily approaching the 14,305-acre total in all of 1943.

Swallows Invade Home

MANISTEE — Spring housecleaning has been turned into a herculean task at the Arthur A. Schimke home here.

Hundreds of swallows, perched on furniture and hanging from curtains, or swooping madly about basement and upstairs rooms, greeted the Schimkes when they returned home after a recent severe storm. The panicky birds had dived into a chimney, forcing open the clean-out door at its base to gain entrance to the dwelling.

Schimke released more than 300 live swallows, removed nearly 700 dead birds from the chimney, and swept up another 200 that had died in collisions with interior walls and furnishings.

Don't "Adopt" Young of Wild Animals

LANSING—Restrain that impulse to "adopt" the fawn or young raccoon, or other young animal or bird of Michigan's wild lands that is apparently abandoned, the conservation department pleads.

The chances are that the mother is not far away.

If the animal or bird does live as a captive, which is unlikely, it is cheated of its right to live as Nature intended it should. The department does not issue permits to keep game animals or birds that are picked up in closed seasons, having the attitude that game animals and birds of Michigan belong to all the people of the state.

Pheasants Don't Damage Gardens

LANSING—Pheasants are defended by conservation department game men against charges that they cause substantial damage to gardens.

Real offenders are starlings, blackbirds, and crows, and these authorities say that any disgruntled gardener can convince himself of the truth of the statement if he will arise early.

Pheasants that visit gardens are looking for cutworms and insects, usually, and only seldom damage growing peas or corn.

Special permits to shoot pheasants which farmers insist are damaging crops are issued only after investigations are made by conservation officers. No permits are issued for use of guns within city or village limits.

Ivy and Sumac Poisoning

LANSING — Ivy and sumac poisoning continue to afflict the unitiated visitor in Michigan's outdoors and medical science has yet to supply a product that will confer certain immunity.

Progress is being made, however, according to conservation department authorities who test new products offered by pharmaceutical houses. Extracts of poison leaves now are supplied for administration by mouth or intravenously, uder supervision of physicians, which are intended to alleviate symptoms or to establish partial immunity at least. The conservation department is especially interested in any new offering of the sort because ivy and sumac poisoning can reduce efficiency of forest fire fighting crews.

Rubbing exposed parts of the skin with alcohol, as quickly after exposure as possible, may help to counteract affects of the poison. Soap and water, with vigorous scrubbing, may be resorted to, but this treatment is less effective. Common laundry soap, containing naptha, is said to be the most valuable. If the eruption has already appeared, bathing the skin with lead acetate or baking soda in water will alleviate the discomfort, help to prevent the spread of the eruption, and hasten the drying-up.

Rabbits and Victory Gardens

LANSING—Raids by rabbits on victory gardens, resulting in an increasing volume of complaints to state conservation authorities, brings advice concerning the preparation of repellants.

Two federal agencies, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, have recommended:

Dried blood with five per cent flour, powdered alum in the ratio of two tablespoonsfuls to a quart of wheat flour, and fine tobacco dust of the usual insecticide grade as dusting powders. Effective sprays include aluminum sulfate mixed with hydrated lime and water, arsenate of lead mixed with a nicotine compound such as Black Leaf No. 155, ad asafetida mixed with powered alum and water. Arsenate of lead must not be used on any natural edible plants such as lettuce or swiss chard. It may be used on cabbage until the head begins to form. Do not use on beans since arsenate of lead may burn the foliage. For these plants substitute cryolite for lead arsenate.

'Coon on Big Increase

LANSING. The tremendous increase in numbers of raccoon taken by hunters and trappers in Michigan last fall [illegible] total of 74[illegible] or approximately double the take of 3,651 reported in 1941 [illegible] handled by conservation department game men, a complete tabulation of the state's 83 counties opposing the antisocial propensities of 'coons.

Many damage have been heard especially during the last two years, that the department should engage in 'coon breeding activity and should distribute pen-raised animals. Game department men have argued that 'coons would stage a comeback (a claim that was proved sound last fall), and that artificial propagation of the animals would be too expensive.

It costs Ohio $6.40 for food and labor during the first year in rearing one 'coon according to available information, which cost does not include other inescapable expenses of housing, maintenance of breeders the year 'round, and other overhead costs of the raccoon farm. 'Coon hunters' license dollars would pay for two few 'coons, on that basis, to materially better their chances of success.

Delta and Menominee counties in the northern peninsula were opened to 'coon hunting and trapping last season. The rest of the peninsula was closed to both hunters and trappers.

Furbearers on Increase

LANSING — Indisputable evidence that Michigan furbearers are increasing is found in a report of trappers' take of various species last season. State conservation game men supply the following figures, based on trappers' reports, covering the last two seasons (first figures are 42-43, second figures 43-44):

Badger 573, 840; bobcat 375, 1,061; coyote 1,348, 2,110; fox 4,241, 10,302; mink 17,624, 26,295; opossum 7,461, 10,368; raccoon 3,517, 15,594; skunk 14,023, 15,857; weasel 10,011, 20,329; muskrat 343,834, 995,443.

A total of 2,703 beaver was taken in the lower peninsula during the recent spring season, as against 6,464 taken in the entire state a year ago. Inasmuch as the upper peninsula ordinarily supplies a major part of the beaver take, it is not believed that any decline in number of beaver is indicated by the lowered figure for 1944. Otter taken this spring in the lower peninsula (160) were more than the 154 taken in the entire state a year ago.

Trapping Fox and Coyote

LANSING—A straightforward discussion of tested methods of trapping fox and coyote, presented in a pamphlet issued by the state conservation department's game division, clears up much of the "mystery" with which the occupation is surrounded.

Principal "secret" in catching predators lies in placing the trap in the right place, according to the pamphlet's author, A. M. Stebler, former game division mammologist who is now with the armed forces. If the trap is not set in the right place, it will seldom catch anything, regardless of how well it is set, or how good the bait or the scent.

The pamphlet is illustrated.

Bounty Payments $6,765 In April

LANSING—Bounty payments totaling 6,765 in April, third highest in any month since last June, have increased the amount paid for predatory animal control in the present fiscal year to $38,125, the conservation department reports.

Total payments in the preceding fiscal year amounted to $30,075.

Facing near exhaustion of the $40,000 fund voted by the last legislature for predator control during the present fiscal year, the department has asked permission of the State Administrative Board to transfer $3,000 of the law enforcement money to the predator fund to cover anticipated payments. Payments last month were for one female wolf; 204 male, and 181 female coyotes; six male, and seven female bobcats.

Two Canada geese that have established headquarters for the last two weeks on the bathhouse lawn at Island Lake State Park near Brighton are a special attraction for visitors.

OPTIMISM VS. PESSIMISM

We have a right to be optimistic about human life when we see the purpose back of it and operating through it. In modern pessimistic philosophy we are told that life has no meaning. Human nature is looked upon as sordid, and only the lower parts of it exploited. They are unlike the great writers such as Tennyson, Browning, Dickens, who saw not only the ignoble side of human nature but also the noble side. This point of view that there is no purpose in life or back of life in the universe deadens human initiative and stops real progress. It throws men and women back on the pleasures of the moment.

The mistake we have made in attempting to understand the inner meaning of the universe has been to look at it from the outside, as if we are simply spectators, when really man is a part of the universe and cannot be separated from it. To find out the nature of the universal purpose we must study it as reflected in the lives of great men and women, particularly as reflected in the life of Jesus of Nazareth.

It is then revealed as something big, inclusive, emphasizing human values, building up more brotherly relationships, making more delicate the human conscience.

LAKE LEVELS ARE STILL HIGH SAYS CONS. DEPT.

Good News For Cottage Owners And Resorters

LANSING—There is good news for cottage owners and resorters in the conservation department's report that lake levels in the northern part of the state compare favorably with the high stage of this period last year.

Some lakes are higher than a year ago and at the highest levels recorded since the geological survey division began taking lake measurements in 1937. This condition is probably a reflection of the favorable subterranean reservoir conditions of the last two years.

Average ground water levels for May were .2 foot above the 10-year May average, .5-foot lower than the record May high stage of 1943, and .82 foot higher than the record May low stage of 1940.

MICHIGAN OUT-DOORS

Few Rattlesnakes in North Michigan

LANSING—Recent reports that rattlesnakes have been seen in the northern part of the lower peninsula are countered by reassuring statements from the conservation department.

Only one poisonous snake — the Massassauga rattler, smallest and least poisonous member of the rattlesnake family — is found in Michigan. The Massassauga is found oftenest in swampy areas in the southern part of the state, and the farther north one travels in Michigan the less likely is he to encounter it.

Across the Straits the rattler is almost if not quite unknown, and the northern peninsula can be ranked with Ireland and Hawaii among lands where poisonous snakes are not found.

While the bite of a Michigan rattler may have serious effects, it is seldom if ever fatal. Not many persons are bitten by rattlers in Michigan, and there is considerable question whether anyone has died after having been bitten, except when his condition has been aggravated by wrong treatment.

In case one is bitten, he is advised to remain calm, to cut a gash around the bite to permit free bleeding, and to get to a physician without hurrying or becoming unduly excited. Other advice: Don't drink liquor, and don't put anything over the wound!

The Michigan massassauga is one of 17 species of rattlesnakes that are found in the United States. Three other poisonous snakes — the water moccasin, copperhead, and the tiny coral snake — also are found in this country.

A total of 11,037 inland lakes have been counted in Michigan. Only two counties, Sanilac and Saginaw, are completely without lakes.

Only three per cent of all accidents experienced by persons engaged in sports or recrention are hunting accidents, and only two per cent are fishing accidents, according to statistics compiled by the Travelers Insurance Co.

Michigan ranks second to Pennsylvania in production of limestone, supplying 15,884,930 tons valued at $9,049,188 in 1942.

FOUR FREEDOMS ARE A SPIRITUAL SLOGAN

Not Political Alone Say Christian Scientists

While holding military might essential to the victory of allied nations over the anti-Christ claims of injustice and intolerance, The Christian Science Board of Directors today told the annual meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., that freedom is essentially a spiritual gift

"to be realized only through spiritual understanding and attainment."

Before an audience of several thousand Christian Scientists essentially local in character due to wartime restrictions upon transportation, the Directors, cited the universal determination to win the peace as advance evidence of a world-wide revelation that "righteous victory under arms will not suffice to guarantee freedom to mankind."

Freedom from want and fear, freedom in worship and speech, the Directors stated, constitute much more than a political slogan or governmental ideology "for our great Way-shower, Christ Jesus, proclaimed centuries ago that freedom accords with God's will and law; furthermore He gave simple, clear direction for the attainment of full freedom for the individual, and through the individual for all humanity."

BABY TALK

Sgt. and Mrs. Bruce Bartlett announce the birth of a son on Friday, June 2nd, at Lockwood Hospital in Petoskey. Mrs. Bartlett is the former Leona Struthers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Struthers. Sgt. Bartlett is stationed at Midland, Tex., with the Army Air Forces.

Fertilizing Tomatoes Nearly Doubles Crop

Two research men of the soils department at the University of Wisconsin, found that tomatoes need a lot of fertilizer and pay a big profit on it, even on land that already is quite fertile.

They report that compared with unfertilized tomatoes the best treatment increased yields enough to net $244 extra to the acre above fertilizer cost. This was on the basis of the 1043 cannery price; actually these tomatoes were sold on the Milwaukee market at a higher price and greater return for the fertilizer.

Most profitable of the fertilizer programs tested was a broadcast application of 500 pounds 6-6-20 to the acre 500 pounds 3-12-12 at the side of the row. At a fertilizer cost of $20.80 to the acre, this treatment increased yields by 09 per cent.

Row applications alone were not able to bring out top yields and were less profitable on the acre basis.

The 6-6-20 fertilizer which was broadcast gave just as good results as more expensive formulas containing larger amounts of either nitrogen or phosphorus.

These results were secured on a Miami silt loam soil which contains medium to high amounts of phosphorus, a fair amount of potassium, plenty of boron and has a reaction ranging from just below neutral to slightly alkaline.

The variety of tomatoes grown was a rather late one named J. T. D. Berger and Truog think it is possible that an earlier variety would have paid off even better on fertilizer, since about one-third of this crop was caught by frost before it ripened.

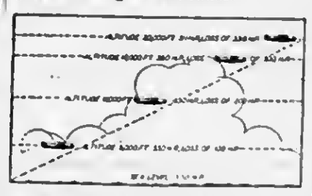
PLANE TALK

BY
Rowland Burnstan

As an airplane ascends into higher altitude, its engine loses power unless it is supercharged. This loss in power occurs because at high altitudes the air pressure is lower and the engine does not obtain the same supply of air as it does at lower altitudes. In order to compensate for the rarefied air, planes which fly at high altitudes are equipped with superchargers.

An engine supercharger is a pump which forces air into the engine's intake manifold. This makes up for the thinness of the air by forcing a greater quantity of air into the mixture with the fuel. This in turn brings about more efficient carburetion. By maintaining correct carburetion, the engine is able to deliver maximum power in higher altitudes.



The illustration shows the decrease in power of a non-supercharged engine. At sea-level the engine obtains its maximum power of 650 H. P.; as plane climbs to 5,000 ft., the engine has lost 100 H. P.; climbing to 11,000 ft., it loses another 100 H. P.; at 17,000 ft. another 100 H. P.; reaching an altitude of 20,000 ft. it has lost a total of 339 H. P. and its power has dropped to 311 H. P.

NO PRIMARY VOTE FOR SOLDIERS OVERSEAS

Ballots Can't Be Printed In Time Says Secretary of State

"Soldiers serving overseas have almost no chance of voting in the forthcoming State primary elections," says Secretary of State Herman Dignan, "because the ballots cannot be printed in time for distribution. Persons who are not registered voters cannot vote either."

Dignan said he believed that men in military service who are registered voters, who apply for absent voter's ballots, and who are serving in the United States will have time to mark and return them before primary election day, July 11th. The changes in the election laws made by the Legislature will permit all Michigan men and women away at war to vote in the November election if they are otherwise qualified. They will not have to be registered voters. The ballots will be sent in envelopes carrying an affidavit form on the outside which, if filled out and signed, will serve as a valid registration.

BEACH RETURNS TO HOME IN CRESTLINE, O.

School Musical Director Leaves With Regrets Of Citizens

Earl E. Beach, Charlevoix's director of school music and city bandmaster, returned to his home in Crestline, O., this week.

He leaves behind him an enviable record of efficiency and faithfulness in the performance of his duties.

Since coming to Charlevoix last September, he has accomplished remarkable results with his method of teaching in the schools and the quality of the city band performances has markedly improved since his contact with the organization. When he went away, he left a complete inventory of musical equipment and supplies and everything in readiness for his successor to carry on. He had introduced teaching of vocal music in the grades and had gotten it well under way. Mr. Beach started instrumental instruction in the fourth grade, where the children were taught to play on tonettes and the wisdom of this groundwork in the lower grades has already commenced to bear fruit.

His own musical background is outstanding. Mr. Beach spent two years at Alliance, O., where he had charge of the public school band and also taught woodwind instruments at Mt. Union College. He was eight years at Bellaire, O., and became president of the Ohio State Music Association. His major instrument was the piano, but he had a playing knowledge of many others.

He leaves Charlevoix with the goodwill, and regrets, of the citizens of Charlevoix.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. MELLENCAMP

Soil Conservation District Is Rejected By Farmers

An announcement from the State Soil Conservation Committee disclosed the results of the referendum on the creation of a Soil Conservation District in Charlevoix County. There were 304 votes cast, of which 146 were in favor of and 158 against the proposal. This report was dated May 30th and is the official tabulation. Three other counties, Antrim, Otsego and Benzie also voted on the same issue and it carried in all three counties by majorities of from 5 to 1 to 8 to 1.

With the interest manifest as indicated by the close vote, at some future time there is a strong possibility that the proposal may again be presented for the approval of Charlevoix County farmers.

Pasture For Pigs Proves Profitable

The importance of good pasture in economical pork production cannot be over-emphasized. Most economical and rapid gains can be obtained on good pasture. Pasture replaces one-half the protein required to balance the ration. An acre of good pasture at present feed prices is worth $50 or more in savings made in the protein supplements that it replaces in growing pigs.

Alfalfa or clover make most excellent pastures. Rape or a combination of rape and oats is one of the most used temporary pastures. Parasites can best be controlled through the use of clean pastures. Parasite control is most necessary. Wormy pigs should be treated. Any recommended remedy may be used. Phenothiazine, because of the ease in giving it in the feed, is a most popular method. Thrifty, rapid-growing pigs are profitable pigs.

PICKLE NEWS

By H. E. Brumm, Dist. Mgr.
H. J. Heinz Company
Charlevoix, Mich.

The pickling cucumber planting season is now in full swing and many growers already have taken advantage of the good weather and have their pickle seed planted. To those who haven't planted it is pointed out there is still time to work the ground another time or so and get the seed planted yet this week. It is generally considered that pickles should be planted by June 10th, but successful growers have planted even later.

In case extra seed is needed to finish planting or for replanting it is available from advertised local representatives or from field men or the district office located at Charlevoix.

KEEP ON Backing the Attack WITH WAR BONDS

PUBLIC HEALTH NEWS

The Michigan Department of Health plans to add penicillin to the list of products distributed free to physicians in the state. Already plans are underway for building a $15,000 penicillin laboratory in Lansing. This building will be completely seperated from the other state laboratories, because penicillin, a mold, cannot be grown in laboratories with other biologic products, without the risk of contaminating them.

Dr. William DeKleine, state health commissioner, stated this week that the department hoped to start production of its own penicillin supply at an early date. When the program is underway he believes it will be possible to furnish this drug to any resident of Michigan who needs it, regardless of whether or not he can pay for it.

Penicillin is now allotted to Michigan through the Office of Civilian Penicillin Distribution. Beginning with May, 100 million Oxford units have been made available each month for Michigan hospitals. This amount is purchased from 10 private companies manufacturing the drug. The cost varies from $4.50 to $10 for an ampoule containing 100 thousand units. For treatment of a serious infection authorities advise that at least four ampoules of the "wonder drug" be available.

Fixing Up the Farm
by BURTON WILLIAMS

Home-made Brooder

ELECTRIC brooders rapidly are proving their worth and gaining converts. They have been labor-savers on thousands of farms where every possible short-cut has had to be used.

With commercial equipment often difficult to obtain, many farmers are building their own. The drawing below shows one type of home-made brooder that is efficient, yet easy to build. It can be heated by reflector-type flood lamps, heat lamps or drying lamps. Even ordinary light bulbs give good service.

This flat brooder is insulated by three or four inches of litter piled on the top, which holds the heat under the hover, removes the problem of keeping the top clean, and adds floor space to the brooding unit. Asbestos cement board is a good material to use in building this type of brooder, because it comes in panels of a convenient size which are easy to handle, and it is extremely durable.

ROCK ELM

Wm. Slough, after planting his crops, has returned to the city to work for a time.

Ernest Mathers has grown tired of the city and returned to his old home with Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Jensen. He says he prefers working outdoors on the farm rather than being shut up in a factory.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Mullen of Traverse City and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Jensen visited Mr. and Mrs. Jo Whitfield Sunday.

Mrs. Bertha Jensen and Mrs. Joseph Hyatt came out from Detroit to see their son and nephew, Norman Jensen receive his diploma at the Ellsworth High School graduating exercises June 1st. They returned to Detroit on Monday.

Relatives of Abner Pool Jr. from East Jordan joined in a birthday celebration for him at Charlevoix Sunday.

Several from this district attended the commencement exercises in East Jordan May 29th. One diploma tied with crape laid in an empty chair. The address was given by Dr. Howard McClusky of the University of Michigan.

End Piece: A friend relays this bit: Larry Lesueur, CBS correspondent, was playing poker with convalescent soldiers in a British hospital and was dealt a hand which, save for a hole in the middle, was a straight flush. Intent on drawing a seven-spot, Larry laid his cigarette aside. Almost instantly, a flash of flame caused him to leap and scramble the cards. He played his flag on a soldier's bandaged leg and the cry swelling about brilliantly. No damage to the soldier.

4-H GIRLS LEARN TO MAKE THEIR CLOTHES

Many Enroll In 1944 National 4-H Victory Dress Revue

Rural women have learned during the war that wise economy in clothing is good taste. In short, choosing materials to make durable, easily cared for garments will reward any extra effort in planning an appropriate, economical, healthful wartime wardrobe.

To keep pace, many 4-H Club girls in this state are enrolling in the 1944 National 4-H Victory Dress Revue, conducted by the Extension Service, for the purpose of learning how to select, make, care for and wear serviceable clothes most expressive of their personality.

To stimulate interest and originality, silver medals will be presented to blue award winners determined from girls participating in county dress revues. The American Viscose Corporation also provides each state winner with an all-expense trip to the 23rd National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, December 3rd to 6th. In addition, each state winner participating in the Dress Revue Presentation at the Congress will receive a $25 War Bond.

County extension agents will furnish full details. Last year's state winner in Michigan was Bernice Jean Chelaud of Deckerville.

4 GOOD REASONS

THIS is the inside of a Navy Patrol Bomber. All four men are using telephone equipment. Consider that this country is building over 100,000 planes of all types every year, and you get some idea of wartime telephone needs in the air alone.

Land and sea forces use far greater quantities of communications equipment . . . must have more and more as time goes on.

Naturally, it has become increasingly difficult to fill telephone service requests here at home. In supplying a quarter of a million more telephones since the beginning of the Defense program, our reserve facilities have been about used up.

Orders for telephones essential to the war effort are filled promptly. Other requests for new service are handled under a definite procedure as present users give up service. But there is a long and growing waiting list.

We are confident you want war needs to be met ahead of all else. If you are inconvenienced, we trust you will understand.

AS THE bus drew near camp Chris began to worry; wonder and worry. What would actors with whom he had worked think if they knew that he, Stumpy Chris, was now earning coffee and cakes entertaining soldiers? He remembered the words of his agent:

"Are you sure that you want to do this, Chris? You're just hitting the big time now and off you go on a wild-goose chase. Making the army camps is all right for some stunts but you're different. You'll be taking a big cut in salary. Stick with me and I'll get you thirty weeks at the best time. What are you going to do when the USO closes this performance?" ★ ★

"Don't worry, Gus," Chris answered, "I'll mail you the 10 per cent as usual; it won't be quite the money that you've been getting from me for the last couple of years, though."

"I don't want any commission on a deal like this," Gus replied heatedly. "If you are set on joining this camp show unit, I donate my share to patriotism."

Thus Chris had joined "Gals, Guys, Gags and Fun," latest production of USO Camp Shows, Inc. Sore, he knew that guys like him were getting their heads shot off overseas and he was still hoofing. So what? He hadn't asked for his draft deferment.

These were the things troubling Stumpy Chris as the bus pulled up to the entrance. Corporal Piney of the Special Services office was waiting at the post gate to meet and direct the troupe to the hospital. So it was to be a hospital this time? What a pleasant thought!

"Special Services sent me down here to see that none of you hens and eggers shows up lost, strayed or stolen," the corporal said.

"You talk as if you've been in show business yourself, Corporal," Chris addressed the newcomer. "Ever play a split week in Des Moines?"

"Yeah, I used to do a pretty fair magic turn." Corporal Piney replied. "You're Stumpy Chris, aren't you? We shared the bill in Des Moines a couple of years ago; remember? Some jump for me, huh; magician to soldier."

"Right, Corporal," Chris said, "sure I'm Stumpy Chris. How does your uniform fit by now?"

"Pretty good. This army life doesn't do a fellow any harm. Guess that they won't get you for a while yet?"

"No," Chris answered disgustedly. "You know these draft boards; they stick a guy who wants in the army in 4-F and put someone who'd give an eyetooth to stay out of it in 1-A. Mine's 4-F."

"Oh, well, you're doing your part," the corporal said in an understanding tone. "We need USO shows here; can't get enough of them for the boys. Say, it looks like we're almost to the hospital."

Glancing from a window of the bus, Chris noticed that a large building with a red cross painted the length of the roof had come into view. "Is that the recreation hall?" he asked.

Corporal Piney nodded.

"They got a stage to work on?"

Again the corporal nodded.

Entering the building, Chris and his company were informed by a cheerful Red Cross Gray Lady that they would have fifteen minutes until curtain time. Upon further inquiry, Chris found that the building contained no dressing rooms. He wondered just what the army expected of a person anyway. What a life!

Fifteen minutes later, to the second, the audience began to file in. Dressed in bathrobes and pajamas they presented a rather bedraggled appearance. These fellows had seen plenty. What would they think of a 4-F civilian dancer?

Chris waited impatiently while the Carter twins finished amid a series of long-drawn-out whistles. It was tough to follow a sister team. Well, at least he could thank his lucky stars that he didn't follow the animal act.

"There's your cue, Chris."

Stumpy Chris made his way to the center of the stage. They were stuck with him now. They'd have to like it.

"Say! That guy certainly has a lot on the ball!" a tall soldier, arm in a sling, exclaimed to Corporal Piney who was standing at his side. "Can you tie that? Here I am with a broken wing feeling sorry for myself, and a one-legged guy comes out and goes through a terrific dance routine. I should complain, ha!"

"A lot on the ball?" the corporal replied enthusiastically. "That's an understatement. He's tops. I ought to know; I worked with him before the army got me."

Later, reflecting upon the evening, Stumpy Chris' heart warmed. Yes, they were just like the youngsters he had known in France. This was another war but they hadn't changed. Maybe he did have only one good leg; he could still show the best of them a thing or two about clog dancing.

TOMMY TIT MAKES GOOD HIS BOAST

"DEE, DEE, DEE, chickadee! See me! See me!" Tommy Tit the Chickadee kept saying this over and over as he flew from the Green Forest up through the Old Orchard on his way to Farmer Brown's dooryard, and his voice was merry. In fact, his voice was the merriest, cheeriest sound to be heard that bright, snapping cold morning. To be sure, there were other voices, but they were not merry, nor were they cheery. There was the voice of Sammy Jay, but it sounded peevish and discontented. And there was the voice of Blacky the Crow, but it sounded harsh and unpleasant. And there was the voice of Chatterer the Red Squirrel, but Chatterer was scolding, just from habit, and so his voice was not pleasant to hear.

So everyone who heard Tommy Tit's cheery voice that cold winter morning just had to smile. Yes, sir, they had to smile, even Sammy Jay and Blacky the Crow. They just couldn't help themselves. When Tommy reached the stone wall that separated the Old Orchard from Farmer Brown's dooryard, his sharp eyes were not long in finding Peter Rabbit and Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel hiding in the old wall, where they could peep out and see all that happened in Farmer Brown's dooryard. Looking back through the Old Orchard he saw what seemed like a little bit of the blue, blue sky flitting silently from tree to tree. It was Sammy Jay. Over in the very top of a tall maple tree a long way off was a spot of black. Tommy Tit didn't need to be told that it was Blacky the Crow, and that that was as near as Blacky dared come.

"Dee, dee, dee! See me!" cried Tommy Tit.

Tommy fairly bubbled over with joy. He knew what it all meant. He knew that Peter Rabbit and Happy Jack and Chatterer and Sammy Jay and Blacky the Crow had come to see him make good his boast that he would eat from the hand of Farmer Brown's Boy and that not one of them really believed that he would do it. He was tickled all over and cut up all sorts of capers just for pure joy. Finally he flew over to the maple tree that grows close by Farmer Brown's house.

"Dee, dee, dee, chickadee! See me! See me!" called Tommy Tit, and his voice sounded cheerier than ever and merrier than ever.

Then the door of Farmer Brown's house opened and out stepped Farmer Brown's Boy and looked up at Tommy Tit and the look in his eyes was gentle and good to see. He pursed up his lips and from them came the softest, sweetest whistle, and it sounded like "Phoebe."

Peter Rabbit pricked up his ears to be sure that he was awake for it was Tommy Tit's own love note, and if Peter had not been looking straight at Farmer Brown's Boy he would have been sure that it was Tommy himself who had whistled.

"Phoebe" whistled Farmer Brown's Boy again.

"Phoebe" replied Tommy Tit, and it was hard to say which whistle was the softest and sweetest.

"Phoebe," whistled Farmer Brown's Boy once more, and held out his hand. In it was a cracked hickory nut.

"Dee, dee, dee! See me! See me!" cried Tommy Tit and flitted down from the maple tree right on to the hand of Farmer Brown's Boy, and his bright little eyes twinkled merrily as he helped himself to a bit of nut meat.

Peter Rabbit looked at Happy Jack, and Happy Jack looked at Chatterer, and all three looked as if they couldn't believe their own eyes. Then they looked back at Farmer Brown's Boy, and there on his head sat Tommy Tit.

"Dee, dee, dee, chickadee! See me! See me!" called Tommy Tit, and his voice was merrier than ever, for he had made good his boast.

MICHIGAN'S COWS SET A NEW MILK RECORD

21 Per Cent Increase In Dairy Population In Michigan

Michigan cows contribute their efforts in keeping fighting and civilian populations well fed, with a record number of 1,059,000 on farms in the state reported for June, national dairy month.

A tribute to the average cow and to the dairymen who feeds and milks her comes from A. C. Baltzer, extension dairyman at Michigan State College. He reminds consumers, as the June flush production eases market restrictions, that milk producing costs for feed have risen 40 per cent in the past six months, although the retail price of milk in Michigan has advanced only 14 per cent in three years.

Under normal times the average family uses 22 cents of each food dollar for milk and dairy products. Leading scientists, medical and dental authorities have agreed that under wartime conditions not less but more, or as much as 30 cents of each food dollar could go for dairy foods.

In addition to the 21 per cent increase in dairy cow population in Michigan, cows have increased in other states. The total cow population in the United States is estimated at 27,607,000 animals, largest number ever kept on American farms.

In 1943 the cows produced a total enough for 820 pounds of milk for every person in the United States, of which about one-eighth or 100 pounds went to military needs from each civilian's share.

PETOSKEY C. OF C. RAISES, $7,000 IN WEEK'S WORK

More than $7,000 has been raised in the drive which began just a little more than a week ago to obtain $10,000 for the work of the Petoskey Chamber of Commerce during the coming year.

MORE ICE CREAM DUE IN JUNE AND JULY

WFA Eases Restrictions Because Of Milk Production

Because of the huge production of milk in May and in the "June flush" the war food administration is easing regulations accordingly, so that while it is available, manufacturers of frozen dairy foods can use more milk for making products such as ice cream and sherbets. During these two months, about 10 million gallons more ice cream — enough to fill from 400 million to 450 million more ice cream cones — will be made than during May and June last year. Four to five million gallons more of other frozen dairy products can be expected, according to WFA estimates.

For the same reason — the exceptionally heavy milk production this spring — dealers also may sell more cream, cottage cheese, buttermilk, and chocolate drink these two months. Unlike ice cream, the cream will not be any richer than it has been, but at least the milkman will be able to sell to housewives cream enough for the family's coffee and cereal — as much as they sold last June, to be exact. Last June was a record consumption month. In recent months sales of these products have had to be limited to 75 per cent of June 1943 quantities.

Sound Records Made on Wire

Drama, History Expected To Come Out of Newest Type of Recording.

WASHINGTON. — The voices of men who died at their posts, and the information they had to give with their last breaths, will be coming back in a shoe box size container from the bombers fighting over Europe.

The box carries spools of magnetized wire, four strands, each thousands of feet long, and each one capable of recording more than an hour's conversation.

These wire sound records are one of the newest developments of warfare. Various types of recording have been used, but the wires fit peculiarly well in fighting planes, because they are not seriously affected by vibration.

Drama and history are expected to come out of the recordings; but their purpose is strictly military. A record of everything that goes on in battle, and such records have been widely used already in some operations, fills in many missing gaps about what went wrong and what worked well and what handicaps are to be overcome in the next similar fight.

Everything Is Noted.

When crews return from missions, they are tired, nerve strained, sometimes jittery, sometimes wounded—and sometimes a crewman is dead. Intelligence officers immediately question the living, but it is realized that men can't fight their way through flak and fighters and remember every stage of their mission.

Here the recorder does its work. Connected with the plane's communication system, it records all that transpires, including the hour and position and spotting of flak bursts. Result: The air forces know where to look for enemy gun positions on the next trip, and drop a few bombs for good luck.

The entire story of a raid—or an operations officers' session or an important headquarters session—can be sent to Washington to pore up and amplify a written report. Light, little spools of wire occupying little space, carry the story. They are played like phonograph records.

The wire can be demagnetized, which wipes it clean of all records, and used again and again or its voices may be retained permanently. Simplicity and economy are points in its favor.

Seek Further Use.

Maj. Howard L. Nussbaum, former program director for the National Broadcasting company in New York, who took the first spool records shoe-box out in a Fortress flying over a European target, is experimenting with the further use of the wires in planes. It appears possible to record all the conversations, military or otherwise. The men do not need now to direct all their conversation to the wire pickup, and it is planned to further perfect the range.

Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commanding general in the European theater of operations, said the device may have great tactical value to the army.

He added: "Its future possibilities of providing information to the public can be judged by its hearers."

Nine minutes of the conversation off the wire of the first bomber flight was broadcast to the United States in an overseas radio transmission. At one point the top gunner remarked, as flak and enemy fighter plane opposition became bitter: "Something around, I think."

The pilot's voice answered: "Cut out that —— fussing around and get on the ball." The blanks were profanity. There is sometimes a lot of strong language during an air fight.

CHARLES HAMLIN HAS MOVED TO NEW HOME

Occupies Former Sloan Residence On State Street

Charles Hamlin, engaged in the general insurance business here for sixteen years, has sold his home on the North Side to Ron Alfather of Maywood, Ill., who came here recently with his son to take over the position of greenskeeper for the Charlevoix Golf Club.

Mr. Hamlin has moved with his family into the former R. F. Sloan residence, north of the library building on State Street which he has purchased and is now extensively decorating. His office for the conduct of his general insurance business will be located on the north side of the house, reached by a separate entrance.

Plenty to Eat in '44, Say WFA Chiefs

Average Citizen Will Find Table Well Supplied.

WASHINGTON.—The two men in Washington in position to know about the average American civilian's dinner table say you'll be comfortably fed in 1944.

Even if large quantities of food are sent abroad to our armed forces, to our Allies and to starving people in countries released from Axis domination, there still will be enough for Mr. Average Citizen and his family to furnish them above the average prewar diet barring an upset in crop prospects, these men say.

"Our national diet will be as good as in prewar years," predicts Marvin Jones, war food administrator. "Decisions now made probably will mean as much food per capita as in the prewar years."

"The American diet in 1944," says Roy F. Hendrickson, director of food distribution of the War Food administration, "though differing somewhat in composition, will be about the same in quantity and nutritive value as that of 1943 and above the average prewar diet if crops are favorable."

What will Mrs. Housewife find on grocery store shelves this winter and next summer and what will the average family have on the table?

Civilians, says WFA, will have about the same amount of white potatoes, rice and canned vegetables during the next year as they had from 1935 to 1939.

They will have more meat, if WFA predictions are fulfilled, a larger supply of eggs, sweet potatoes, citrus fruits, dried peas, dried beans and likely a good supply of coffee, flour and other commodities.

Bakes Corn Bread While He Shoots Down Japs

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC (Delayed).—"I have one hand on a pot and the other on a machine gun."

That's the recipe given by marine Mess Sergt. Jay Carter of Pink Hill, N. C., who is credited with shooting down two Japanese dive bombers and serving up a batch of hot corn bread all within an hour's time.

Mess Sergeant Carter literally "doubles in brass" by taking charge of a galley and by serving as a gunner on the machine gun which is placed just a few steps from his kitchen door.

"I was just baking a batch of corn bread when the signal for the raid came," the slightly built, 26-year-old marine explains. "I quickly shut off the stove and ran to the gun. There were five Jap planes diving down on us. I just opened up and let them have it."

Asked what he did then, Mess Sergeant Carter replied:

"I went back into the galley, lit the stove again, and finished making my corn bread."

Mess Sergeant Carter would be willing to overlook the whole incident, except for one thing. He feels that it is an unforgivable error to interrupt a North Carolina man while he's baking corn bread.

ROCK ELM

A new bug which eats the leaves of cherry trees has appeared in orchards here this spring making it necessary to use arsenate in the first spray.

Mr. Porter had three men working with the sprayer in his orchard all day Saturday.

Lawrence Jensen started spraying his orchard Saturday afternoon and continued the work on Monday.

Earl Bradley and his grandmother were callers at the Lawton home Sunday afternoon. Earl has given up working in the woods and is now working at the foundry in East Jordan.

Prospects seem good for a better crop of cherries this year than last if weather conditions are favorable and insect pests can be controlled.

NEW TIRES FOR B AND C—MUST PROVE NEED

Essentiality Is Still The Deciding Factor Says OPA

Charlevoix County War Price and Rationing Board states that though B and C gas book holders have been made eligible for new tires, the ruling by no means allows them to have tires unless they can prove that the use of the tires will be in an essential classification.

The Board states that at the present time approximately 35 applications a day are coming in and the tire quota is insufficient to begin to meet this demand. Although eligibility has been broadened to include more drivers, the allocation of tires is still a matter left to the discretion of the local board, which, because of the unrelieved tire shortage, is still having to allot tires to applicants who can show that they are engaged in essential war work. Recapping is ration-free, and replacements of new tires are made only when an old tire can no longer be recapped or repaired.

state ballot and to favor a fourth term for the President, why then did Governor Kelly and the entire Michigan Republican delegation at Washington—Vandenberg, Ferguson and the congressmen — decide to recommend its legislative validation in Michigan?

Here is the governor's explanation:

"There is an unanimity of opinion that the state ballot affording the right to vote for federal, state and county office — the same opportunity which they would have to vote if home — is infinitely preferable to the supplemental Federal ballot which is confined to presidential and congressional offices.

"It is my hope and belief that the great majority of Michigan veterans serving in or attached to the armed forces will have the privilege to apply and receive the state ballot and have it returned so it can be counted on election day.

"Voting of soldiers and sailors in time of war is necessarily subject to military and naval operations. Because of the vast theater of war — and type of operation — I am of the opinion that even though everything is done to transport the state ballot, there will be some who will not receive it and should be given the right to vote the supplemental Federal ballot, as a final insurance.

"I held a meeting last night with all of the congressional delegation from Michigan. They agree heartily with my conclusion that a special session of our Legislature should be called to authorize in the general November election the use of the official Federal war ballot above referred to. I am therefore calling a special session of our legislators to convene at Lansing on Monday, June 19th, to consider such legislation."

While Michigan Republican leaders are confident that the state ticket has excellent chances of victory in November, some of them privately are not so optimistic about the national outcome.

Here is the logic behind their thinking:

Unless the continental invasion becomes an overpowering blitzkreig, the November balloting would be conducted amid great military crisis. Such uncertainty would favor the re-election of the President as the nation's commander-in-chief — especially by men in the field.

Right or wrong, this theory has many supporters.

In the face of such political speculation, the stand of the Michigan Republican delegation governor, two U.S. senators, and a dozen congressmen — represent a significant conviction.

It was ably expressed by the governor when he said:

"This is not a partisan matter. It is a matter of fundamental right — the right of democracy for which we are fighting."

These words, worthy of a statesman, are in the finest traditions of Americanism — that intangible spirit of the heart that prompts men to put America first; selfish interests, second.

"Public Opinion Wins Wars!" -- Eisenhower

Waste Paper Pick-Up Due Friday-Saturday

War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson, says in a recent directive on waste paper salvage: "The pressure on the pulp supply is great because the manufacture of packaging for both military and civilian usage requires an enormous tonnage of pulp. Fortunately much of this can be made from waste paper and new material will not be required if we can produce a sufficient supply of waste paper. Though an excellent job on waste paper collections has been done so far, the situation is still so critical that some mills are in danger of closing down because of lack of waste paper required for essential manufacturing or conversion operations.

"For the first four months of this year collections have averaged about 580,000 tons a month. This is 87,000 tons short of the goal set by WPB and means we will have to average for the remainder of the year better than 700,000 tons a month if we are to produce the 8,000,000 tons that are required for 1944."

Because waste paper is playing such a vital part in the war effort on the home front, city trucks will pick up all waste papaper in Charlevoix on Friday and Saturday of this week. Householders are asked to tie all paper in bundles and put the bundles out where they can be seen. This will be the last pick-up until the end of July.

NORTH AMERICAN IS BRINGING SHRINERS

Saladin Temple Members Arrive June 15 At 7 P. M.

Shriners of Saladin Temple, Grand Rapids, will leave Muskegon on Monday, June 12, for their annual cruise aboard the S. S. North American and expect to arrive in Charlevoix at 7 p. m., Thursday, June 15th. Shriners from Northern Michigan and their wives and sweethearts are invited to join the group at the local dock and arrangements have been made to have the famous 60-piece Shrine Band play in East Park, weather permitting.

Members of the Grand Rapids Lions Club and their relatives and friends, some 250 in number, who arrived on the North American's first trip of the season, last Sunday, spent an enjoyable hour between 5 and 7 p. m., promenading the streets, shopping in the stores and finding to their surprise, as some of the first-time visitors expressed it, a beautiful spot in Michigan that they hadn't known existed.

CEILING PRICE IS PUT ON USED CARS

ALL SELLERS ARE COVERED BY NEW PROGRAM

Specific Dollars And Cents Prices At January 1944 Levels For Models 1937-1942

WASHINGTON—Price administrator Chester Bowles is bringing all used passenger cars under price control effective July 10th, and establishing specific prices for different models at levels which prevailed last January.

Bowles said the used car ceilings will discourage the hoarding of automobiles and protect the public from further increases in used car prices. He said these prices have gone up an average of 20 per cent in the past year and a half and 30 per cent in two and one-half years.

Bowles set up specific dollars-and-cents prices at the January, 1944, levels for about 6,000 models of 23 makes manufactured from 1937 through 1942.

All sellers, both private individuals and dealers, are covered by the new program. It does not, however, apply to used trucks, which are under a separate price regulation.

Under the new regulation, used car ceilings will drop at the rate of four per cent of the "as is" price every six months. OPA provided separate price schedules for three broad geographical regions.

Region A covers all states east of the Mississippi River; Region C comprises Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, and Arizona; and all other states are in Region

FARM VETERAN TO GET ASSISTANCE

SOLDIERS AIDED IN RENTING OR PURCHASING FARMS

Farmers To Steer Inexperienced Away from Likely Failures And Toward Success

A recent memorandum from the War Food Administration requests that a County Advisory Committee be set up under the leadership of Extension to aid returning veterans who may be interested in purchasing or renting farms. A "Back to the Land" movement is anticipated and, in fact, seems to be under way. A committee of successful farmers should be able to provide constructive guidance to interested individuals. Leadership is needed to insure that war veterans and others interested in farming are guided toward opportunities for success and away from likely failures.

The National Selective Service office has been advised that all veterans interested in farming should be referred to the Extension Office, which, in turn, will work hand in hand with the County Advisory Committee. It has been recommended that the County Land Use Committee be asked to act as this County Advisory Committee as the members live on farms, know the land, and can offer constructive advice supported by years of actual farming experience. This Committee consists of Howard Stephens, Charlevoix; Arlo Wickersham, Charlevoix; Charles Shepard, Boyne City; William Shepard, East Jordan; and James Crego, Boyne Falls. This Committee will be in a position to assist this program at all times and in any way possible.

The War Is NOT Over!

AN EDITORIAL

On the street, in the stores, wherever men foregather there is a happy undercurrent flowing from their words and actions: The European phase of the war is all over but the shouting. Now that the long-awaited invasion of Europe is a reality, a happy victory is just around the corner.

The war is over! You who have husbands, fathers, sons, and brothers, those grand lads who are in there pitching with all they have, know the war is NOT over. The terrific suspense of long days and longer nights, the stark terror of the postman's step, the clutch of fear in sudden awakenings, tears of loneliness that will not be stayed — all tell YOU that the war is NOT over!

The war is over! The best available figures say that but 25 per cent of General Eisenhower's army in England is seeing action in France. And what of the tens of thousands in Scotland and North Ireland, the huge army poised in North Africa, the hundreds of thousands in the Middle East!

Certain it is Victory is closer now in point of time than it was in December 1941. But if history is to be read aright, the cost up to now is but a grain of sand in the desert. The big price in terms of blood, sweat, tears — AND DOLLARS is yet to be paid. THE WAR IS NOT OVER!

—THE EDITOR.

An Idea Shared By All Of Us Can Shorten This Conflict

"I Have Faith!" Is The Rallying Home Front Battle Cry

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Commander of the invasion forces, says that public opinion wins wars. Public opinion is nothing less than an opinion which all of us share. Just now is given to everyone of us the power to play an important role in the decisive events ahead. Unless the home front stands united with a desire to equal the sacrifices which our fighting men are being called upon to make, we will not only be neglecting our duty, but we will be imperiling our whole plan to defeat the Nazis and the Japs.

It is time to take stock in our homes and in our places of employment. Are we ready on the Bond Front?

Khaki Means War Bonds— Buy Yourself Some Khaki

This is Michigan War Cry for the Fifth War Loan Drive, and everyone who buys a bond in the Fifth War Loan Drive will receive a khaki cloth badge bearing in red felt letters Michigan's slogan, "I Have Faith."

People who buy war bonds instead of concealing their money in mattresses, have faith in their government, faith in their fighting men, faith in victory; and faith in the better world for which American men and women are fighting.

The Fifth War Loan calls for a demonstration of faith. The dates of the drive are from June 12 to July 8, but the accounting started on June 1st. All purchases made between June 1 and July 31 will be credited towards Charlevoix City's quota of $100,000.

In the City of Charlevoix and its environs the Blue Star Mothers, with Mrs. P. R. Ross as chairman, have already started their drive. They intend making a house-to-house canvass in order that everyone may have a chance to do their part at a time when even a small part will count for so much.

Local chairmen and their helpers are: North Side, Mrs. C. S. Webster, chairman; Mrs. Fred Bergmann, Mrs. J. M. Foster, Mrs. Angus Fochtman, Mrs. Charles Bellinger, Mrs. Charles Novak.

HOSPITAL BED IS NOW READY FOR HOME USE

Blue Star Mothers Will Receive Application For Loan

A hospital bed which will be available for use in any Charlevoix home has been purchased by the Charlevoix Chapter of the Blue Star Mothers through the Oddfellow Lodge. The bed, now on display in the window of Brown Motors Inc. on Bridge Street, is equipped with a regulation hospital frame which can be adjusted for the comfort of the patient.

It was purchased with the proceeds from a recent dinner given by the Blue Star Mothers at the Oddfellow Hall. It was obtained primarily for the use of returning war veterans. Until such time as it will be needed by them, it will be available for use in other homes where it might be needed. It is hoped that funds may be raised to purchase other beds of this type. Information about the bed may be obtained by calling Mrs. P. R. Ross, president of the Blue Star Mothers, phone 193.

PUBLIC HEALTH NEWS

The State Commissioner of Health broadcasts a warning that unless the number of smallpox vaccinations is increased, Michigan is risking an outbreak of this disease.

The fact that only 18 cases of smallpox were reported in Michigan in 1943 would seem to be reason for rejoicing and would be, had there been an increase in the number of persons vaccinated against the disease in the same period. Unfortunately the opposite is true — fewer people are being vaccinated. This is indicated by actual reports from the local health departments and by a greatly decreased number of requests to the Michigan Department of Health for smallpox vaccine.

The real danger inherent in the present low incidence of smallpox is the possibility that people may come to believe that smallpox is now a thing of the past and, consequently, that vaccination is no longer necessary. If this state of mind is allowed to develop generally it may be confidently predicted that within a short time the growing number of unprotected persons will provide a fertile field for the recurrence of smallpox in epidemic form.

The history of smallpox through the years has shown that as soon as a community fails to protect itself it may expect smallpox.

To avert this situation people must be made to realize: That no one is naturally immune to smallpox; that protection against it must be acquired through vaccination. Acquired immunity through vaccination is not necessarily lifelong — continued immunity may be assured through occasional revaccinations at intervals of 5 to 10 years. Re-vaccination is indicated in case of an epidemic.

HERE'S WHY THERE AREN'T ENOUGH TELEPHONES TO GO 'ROUND

Those huge coils you see are telephone wire . . . hundreds of miles of it for combat communications.

Perhaps it seems a far cry from a South Pacific Island to your home or office telephone. Yet it takes wire to connect your telephone to the central office. And it takes wire to enlarge switchboards for additional telephones.

Wire is only one of many vital telephone materials that just can't be spared today for civilian comfort and convenience. As a result, many applicants for telephone service have had to wait.

Orders for telephones essential to the war are filled promptly. Other requests for new service are handled under a definite procedure as present users give up service. But there is a long and growing waiting list.

We're sorry we can't provide service for everyone who wants it. But we feel sure you'll agree that war needs must come first.

HELL DIVING'S HIS JOB ..LENDING IS YOURS!

WITH GUNS BLAZING and a prayer in his stout heart, this American fighter is hell-bent on destruction of our enemies. HE is not thinking of how little or how much he's doing to help win the war. For him, the chips are down; but his fighting spirit is as high as the heavens from which his plane is diving.

In cramped foxholes and disease-infested jungles, on sun-scorched beachheads—under and over the seven seas—other Americans are matching his courage. And their name is legion. They KNOW that war is a bloody business; that their lives, as well as yours, are now at stake. You cannot—you must not—let them down.

Is it asking too much of you to back these men up by buying more, and still more, War Bonds? There can be but one answer. You'll find it in your own heart.

And remember, too, as you dig deeper than ever before into your pocketbook or cash surplus, that the Fifth War Loan MUST raise 16 billion dollars. It is the greatest financing drive the world has ever known . . . to back up the greatest invasion drive the world has ever known.

And Here Are 5 MORE Reasons for Buying EXTRA Bonds in the 5th!

1. War Bonds are the best, the safest investment in the world!

2. War Bonds return you $4 for every $3 in 10 years.

3. War Bonds help keep prices down.

4. War Bonds will help win the peace by increasing purchasing power after the war.

5. War Bonds mean education for your children, security for you, funds for retirement

MAN'S BLIND SPOT

Man has learned many things about the stars, about worlds that are millions of light-years away; he has learned much about the crust of the earth; he is widening the horizons of knowledge in all directions. The one subject about which he is almost in total darkness is himself. He knows a few things about his body, but even on that score he is so ignorant that it amounts almost to a disgrace. The secret of what makes the wheels go round is almost completely beyond his ken. On the subject that concerns him most closely man is almost a complete ignoramus.

And unless he makes a real effort to learn about himself he is doomed. His very inventions, his "progress," will conquer him; his very altruism, his efforts to protect the weak and the defective will help to destroy him. All the various sciences that have been developed have made a marvelous analysis of the universe; the science of man must make a great synthesis if man himself is not to go under.

Why Vernon J. Brown for Lieutenant Governor?
His qualifications are unquestioned. The Republicans of Michigan have a right to demand such a man in this important office. Responsible Republican leadership, as well as rank and file workers throughout the State, believe that Vernon J. Brown is the one man in the Party who, as Lieutenant Governor, can function as a cooperating member of the Republican team.
In recognition of the need for his services as Lieutenant Governor, Vernon J. Brown was willing to forget selfish considerations and accede to the wishes of Republicans throughout the State. He believes the Republican Administration is entitled to the services of a Lieutenant Governor who will work with the administration in the public interest.
Such an attitude certainly deserves the sincere consideration of every Republican on Primary day, July 11.

ACHIEVEMENT DAY OF HOME EC A SUCCESS

Sixty Ladies And Friends Enjoy Tourist Park Program

Sixty extension ladies and friends attended the Achievement Day program held at the East Jordan Tourist Park on June 1st. Due to the busy season and demands made of us during wartime, the attendance was somewhat less than usual. An enjoyable community supper was held at 7 followed by a well-prepared program at 8. The main feature of the program was the appearance of Mrs. Lucia Nelson, who gave two one-act plays and several poems. She has a national reputation in her field and gave a superb performance.

Miss Mirian Ends gave a splendid report covering last year's project, and announced that the new project would consist of four different lessons as follows: (1) Time-savers in Home Service. (2) The Wonders of Paint. (3) Streamlining the Kitchen for War. (4) Planning Meals From Abundant Foods.

Mrs. Constance Vanlloesen of Boyne City was elected the new County Chairman. Mrs. Rona Newkirk of Boyne City was selected as the County Secretary, Mrs. Lulu Clark, East Jordan, the County Recreation Leader, and Mrs. Dorothy Sage, Boyne City, the Home Front Chairman.

Miss Ena Fero was introduced and spoke briefly on her appointment to work in Charlevoix County. She will be in a position to help individuals and groups with their food problems such as home canning, food preparation and gardening. The extension leaders were very pleased to have this young lady work with them thru the coming months.

VICTORY GARDEN

Cabbage Worms Need Controls

Maggots infecting beans, cabbage and onions together with cabbage worms are a problem from the time the plants are transplanted. Maggots are most destructive after a cold damp spring. There are several broods each year but the spring brood does the real damage.

Bean maggots winter over in the soil on fleshy underground roots such as saw thistle, alfalfa, and clover. To prevent loss from bean maggots prepare the ground and pack firmly then seed shallow, not more than one-half inch deep. This makes it possible for the plants to get above the ground before the buds are destroyed.

Cabbage maggots winter in garden refuse and in the soil. To protect cabbage plants from maggots use tar paper disks placed about the plants when they are transplanted. The disks should be set at ground level in close contact with the soil. These tarred felt paper disks should be about three inches in diameter with a small hole in the center and an incision from the edge to the center.

The cabbage maggot is also at times a problem on radishes. Make weekly plantings of radishes and destroy infested plants.

The onion maggot winters in cull onions and other onion refuse. The eggs are laid on the ground near the plants and the maggots burrow into the soil to enter the onions. There may be a dozen or more maggots in a single plant. Loss from onion maggot may be prevented with oil barriers. Use one-quarter pint dormant oil emulsion (such as kleemp or dendrol) in 1 gallon of water, pour along the row rather than on the plants. Make five applications at weekly intervals beginning when the plants are about an inch high. To even the dosage, make one application on one side of the row one week and on the other side the next week. (1 gallon treats 100 to 125 feet.)

Cabbage worms are active throughout season, all plants belonging to the cole group are attacked but for the duration cabbage worms on cabbage will be controlled with stomach poisons such as calcium arsenate 1 part and gypsum 19 parts or with cryolite diluted about half and half with a bland carrier such as talc, pyrophyllite or flour.

Cabbage grown under these conditions should be peeled, removing more than the customary number of outer leaves when prepared for the table. Cabbage grows from the inside out and the inner leaves are free from poison.
